In a convenient room in such a building, then, which the Association have already determined to erect, at least two other statues should at no remote intervals be placed. One should be of the gallant, the intrepid, the cool and resolute PRESCOTT, the duly appointed commander of the expedition, to whom the great military merit in the conduct of the day we commemorate is now by common consent conceded, and whose name is in our own time rendered illustrious by a distinguished descendant, in quite another department of fame; and the other statue should be that of the bold and brave General PUTNAM, who was for a long time after the Battle of Bunker Hill the compulsion in arms and friend of WASHINGTON, then, like WARREN, a noble volunteer, active and efficient at every point, thinking only where he could do most service, utterly regardless, at such moment, of the place due to his military rank; not caring at such time, not he, indeed, even though a Colonel were commander. Busts or paintings of other heroes of that day should be also obtained, and thus the culture of the highest art, in this direction, will administer to the most patriotic commemoration of men and deeds most worthy to be commemorated.

The Bunker Hill Monument Association is a permanent body. One of its objects is by an occasional observance of this Anniversary to recall from time to time the public attention to these principles and deeds, and that cordial cooperation of our fathers which gave us the privileges we enjoy. In this design we have to aid us the Society of the Cincinnati, the Historical Society, the Charitable and Mechanic Association, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and last, but most of all, our beloved Alma Mater, Harvard College, the mother of the hero of this celebration and of many who have gone before and after him; we all have the same great object to carry out—each in its peculiar way; the promotion of the greatest possible attachment of us all to our civil and religious institutions. This peculiar indulgence of our own, in ancient reminiscences, is certainly no just occasion of offence to other nations, and least of all to our mother country, from whom this characteristic has been transmitted to us. It is with nations as with individuals; those who exhibit the highest self-respect, and a just pride of character, founded upon past glorious antecedents, especially if coupled with a generous spirit of emulation, will for that very trait illicit the greatest respect from others. An intense national sentiment springing from the common glory of our past, and looking forward to a common enjoyment of the future is in itself a bond of union, and so incentive to great national progress. Let the name of BUNKER HILL be ever a watch-word throughout the Union, to arouse, when need be, the patriotism of the country; so that every citizen throughout our wide spread land may always be ready to reaffirm his allegiance to that happy formula of the good citizen's creed, first promulgated by the immortal WEBSTER at the corner stone of yonder monument—"OUR COUNTRY, OUR WHOLE COUNTRY, AND NOTHING BUT OUR COUNTRY." And as it was said in former time, so let it be the fervent prayer and faith of us all, that as long as this, we hope, imperishable obelisk shall point its grey cap-stone to the centre of the blue ethereal arch above us, so long may the blended galaxy of the stars—still increasing in number and brilliancy—of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA shed its untarnished lustre among the nations of the world.

"While stands the Coliseum, Rome shall stand,"

The Masonic ceremonies, under the direction of J. T. HEARD, Grand Master, and other high officials of the fraternity, were then gone through with. This part of the proceedings was highly interesting, and during the performance an original hymn was sung.

Numerous gentlemen then made brief speeches. Among them were Governor GARDNER, of Massachusetts; Governor DUER, of Rhode Island; Governor HOLLY, of Connecticut, and Hon. ROBERT C. WINTHROP.

Mr. WINTHROP said he would make but a few remarks of his own, but in behalf of the Association sincerely regretted the absence of General SCOTT, and paid him a highly complimentary tribute. He then referred to the fact of the presence of a distinguished friend—a native of the State who claimed as her son him whose name all responded to with patriotic emotion, the immortal WASHINGTON. Mr. WINTHROP in a very felicitious manner introduced Hon. J. M. MASON to the assembly as a Senator in Congress from the Old Dominion.

Mr. MASON responded in a speech of considerable length, and was followed by Hon. JOHN P. KENNEDY, of Baltimore.

At the conclusion of Mr. KENNEDY'S remarks, "Hail Columbia" was sung by the audience, and the assembly quietly dispersed.

A battalion of the Washington Grays, under Major BUCK, arrived this evening by the overland train from New-York, and were received at the Depôt by the 2d Regiment, and escorted to the American House.

The firemen did not take part in the procession, but enjoyed themselves in their own way.

Hose Company No. 5, of New-York, came down from Lowell this morning, and have been the guests of No. 4 of Charlestown.

Dodworth's Band at Faneuil Hall drew an immense audience, as did also the Band of the National Guard at the Music Hall.

In the course of his address Mr. EVERETT alluded in a highly eulogistic manner to the regret of all present at the absence of Gov. KING, of New-York, who is on his way to that State, complimenting him as an honorable scion of a noble New-England stock, and as Governor of a State whose population now outnumbers that of the old New-England States. The allusion was received with hearty applause.

There will be a grand parade to-morrow forenoon. Governor GARDNER reviews the 7th Regiment.

FROM WASHINGTON.

NO INSTRUCTIONS FROM SECRETARY DOBBIN RELATIVE TO GEN. WALKER, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 17.

The official documents show that no instructions were given by Secretary DOBBIN to Commodore MERVINE or Capt. DAVIS relative to General WALKER and his men. The language of Secretary DOBBIN to Commodore MERVINE was: "It is prudent and for the interests of the country to have a man-of-war visit San Juan del Sur."

The Navy Department have determined to build one of the five sloops-of war by private contract, for which proposals are soon to be issued.

CENTRAL AMERICA AND MEXICO—THE PART TAKEN BY OUR GOVERNMENT AGAINST WALKER—THE INDIAN TROUBLES IN THE NORTHWEST, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 15, 1857.

As soon as the Secretary of War returns, a Cabinet meeting will be held in relation to our affairs in Central America and Mexico. The latter government will be held to a strict account for the murder of the four invalid Americans, LONG, PARKER, HARRISON and YOUNG, who were butchered at the house of E. E. DUNBAR, on the American side of the San Juan, on the 18th of April last.

It is contended that General WALKER is as much President of Nicaragua as SANTA ANA was of Mexico, after his surrender to the Texans. At a proper time a reclamation will be made in the name of the Republic of Nicaragua, against the United States, for indemnification, &c., for the part taken by this Government under the action of Captain DAVIS. It is well known that Mr. CALEB CUSHING was instrumental in obtaining the instructions against the American-Nicaraguan party, issued by Mr. DOBBIN. A call will be made, as soon as Congress meets, for all the documents and papers issued by the Pierce régime in regard to Nicaragua, and we shall then see the part that was played by that Administration, from the blockade of Colonel KINNEY'S steamer to the capture of the schooner Granada! By the way, I learn that the redoubtable Col. KINNEY is quietly planting on his estate, not many miles from Greytown, and has a force with him of some 150 men-at-arms, who occupy his lands and serve as his vassals. His land-scrip has lately been offered for sale in this city.

I have private advices from St. Paul, Minnesota, to the 5th inst. The election of Delegates to the Convention to frame and establish a State Constitution, went strongly Democratic, as far as heard from, with ons or two minor exceptions. The recent outrages committed by a renegade band of the Sioux Indians called War-pe ku-tahs, headed by a noted devil, named INK-PA-DU TAH, had created great excitemen here, but the rescue of Mrs. MARGARET ANN MARBLE, one of the four women carried off from the vicinity of Spirit Lake, in Iowa, near the Minnesota line, and her arrival here, has added to the fever. The account of her capture and imprisonment, which she suffered with the other women, as published in the St. Paul papers, thrills one with horror.

The troops on these wild borders are all being ordered to Kansas, leaving only one company at each fort. This might do, if they were cavalry, but the red-skins laugh at the idea of being pursued by Uncle Sam's infantry.

The most unwise and unfortunate thing, however, is the abandoning of the frontier forts, and withdrawing the troops from very important and exposed positions merely to accommodate a horde of greedy speculators. These men want to seize on the reservations attached to the forts, and who cannot do so until the forts are abandoned. The War Department knows nothing of the real state of the case, and thus immense regions will be left entirely unprotected. This encourages Indian depredations by the tribes who roam all over the country between the upper Mississippi, say from the mouth of Crow-wing River to the Red River of the North.

Take Fort Ripley as an instance, situated on the Mississippi, about 130 miles above St. Paul, and is a very important point. To this Fort there belongs an extremely rich and valuable military reservation of fifteen miles long by four wide. To grasp this speculators have induced the Department to abandon the Fort, so that they can buy up the lands at private sale, although the law requires it should be public.

Mr. FLANDEAU, the Indian Agent of the Sioux district, says they have had "too much peace" out there. The Indians are supposed to be perfectly harmless and under control. Such is not the case, and if the country is left thus unprotected at the mercy of the savages, we must soon have another Black Hawk war. A regiment of Mounted Rangers would prevent at this time, such a calamity, and it becomes the Government to inquire into the true state of this frontier.

The Court of Claims did not sit to day, there being only two Judges present, and lawyers are not willing to try their cases in the absence of Chief Justice GILCHRIST, as they say Judge BLACKFORD always dissents, and thus no decision could be had. The Court will probably adjourn this week till October. It is woefully behind with its decisions, which it is as hard to get as a report of Congress. UNO.

News from Kansas.

MEETING OF THE FREE-STATE LEGISLATURE AND CONVENTION AT TOPEKA, ETC.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, June 16.

The Democrat learns that the Free-State Legislature met at Topeka on the 9th inst., but there was not a quorum of the members present. On the 10th they went into secret session to discuss the propriety of immediately organizing and putting in operation the new Government. On the 11th the Senate elected W. A. PHILLIPS United States Senator in place of Col. LANE. The Legislature almost unanimously sustain the Convention.

The Free-State Convention met at Topeka on the 9th inst., Col. LANE presiding. A resolution was adopted disowning the Territorial Government, and declaring that the admission of the Territory into the Union under the Topeka Constitution was the only method of adjusting the difficulties. The Convention pledged itself to pursue the application now pending before Congress, believing that a measure so just and in accordance with the principles of the past legislation of the country will be eventually conceded, and announced that it is the duty of the Legislature to complete the State organization. Other resolutions, recommending the Free-State Party to disregard the approaching election, and casting suspicion on any man who consents to become a candidate for the Constitutional Convention, were passed, and the Convention adjourned.

ALBANY, Wednesday, June 17.

The Temperance Convention reassembled this morning, and the debate on the resolutions submitted yesterday was resumed.

Mr. JNO. N. WILDER reviewed the substitute of Mr. GREELEY, declaring that it misrepresented the whole spirit of the temperance cause by implying that the sale of liquor may be made safe and respectable.

The debate was warmly continued by Rev. Mr. DENNISON, Hon. HORACE GREELEY, Judge CAPRON, Prof. MCCOY and others.

Judge CAPRON offered a substitute embracing the three first resolutions in Mr. GREELEY'S series, and another leaving to temperance men the privilege of taking their own position in relation to the Excise law.

General CAREY, of Ohio, submitted a somewhat similar proposition—to accept of the first three resolutions offered by Mr. GREELEY, adding to them the following:

Resolved, That while we differ as to the value and efficiency of certain provisions of the late Excise act, we will continue united and importunate in our demands for a law of entire prohibition as the only efficient remedy for intemperance.

Judge CAPRON accepted of this proposition in lieu of his own.

Mr. STEBBINS, of Rochester, attacked Mr. GREELEY'S substitute, and charged Mr. GREELEY with having fallen from grace. He was once the teacher of Western New-York, but could be so no longer. He had proved false to "prohibition," and when in the Republican Convention at Syracuse, had prevented prohibitory resolutions from being introduced. He (STEBBINS) had been on the Committee with Mr. GREELEY in that Convention, and by GREELEY'S management the prohibitory resolutions had been thrown out, and two liquor Judges elected in the State. He charged him with introducing these resolutions simply to indorse the Excise law passed by the Republican Legislature, and in order to divert the public mind from prohibition at the next Fall election. He denied that any prohibitory man in Western New-York would favor the License law.

Mr. WESLEY BAILEY interrupted, and said Judge FOOTE, of Ontario, would.

Mr. STEBBINS contended that Judge FOOTE was no prohibitionist. The trouble with him was the same as with Mr. GREELEY—he had no backbone against the principle of license.

Mr. GREELEY in reply, said the reason he opposed the Prohibitory resolution at the Republican Convention, was because it sought to assert a falsehood. It said the Republican Party favored Prohibition when it did not. He had never mingled temperance with politics.

Judge CAPRON opposed Mr. GREELEY'S resolutions with the exception of the three first, because they sought to convey a false impression by leaving in the public mind the belief that the Temperance Society endorsed the license principle.

Rev. Mr. DENNISON, of Buffalo, spoke warmly and strongly against the main portion of Mr. GREELEY'S resolutions. In Western New-York nothing but prohibition was believed in. Mr. GREELEY, in a political point of view, acted unwisely, for to indorse the license system would destroy the Republican Party in Western New-York. They would ever onward in the cause of prohibition.

Rev. Dr. MARSH then moved the adoption of Mr. GREELEY'S three first resolutions, and the resolution offered by General CAREY endorsing prohibition, as a substitute for the remainder. Adopted.

The remainder of the Committee's resolutions, after number five, were then also adopted.

Mr. STEBBINS moved the following:

Resolved, That we hereby renew most earnestly the expression often put on record of our confidence in the Prohibitory law as the only sure remedy to close the liquor traffic, and hereby renew the pledge that at the coming election we will vote for such candidates only as are unequivocally outspoken in favor of Prohibition, and that in case no one political party nominate such candidates, then independent nominations be made by temperance men. Adopted.

Mr. PATTERSON then offered the fifth resolution of the Committee in relation to the raising of a Prohibition, and it was adopted.

Prof. MCCOY offered a resolution for the amendment of the Constitution, so as to authorize laws to carry out Prohibition.

Senator RIDER opposed the resolution as calculated to create the belief that without an amendment of the Constitution Prohibition could not be carried.

The resolution was laid on the table.

On motion of Gen. SMITH a resolution was adopted authorizing the Executive Committee to call a Convention in the Fall, if necessary.

Rev. Mr. WARREN closed the proceedings with prayer, when the Convention adjourned sine die.

European Steamers.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER KHERSONESE AT ST. JOHNS.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Wednesday, June 17, 1857.

Owing to a slight derangement of the submarine cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence, telegraphic communication between this Island and Nova Scotia has been suspended for some weeks past, but to-day we have been again placed in almost instantaneous connection with Halifax, Boston and New-York, and do not apprehend any future interruptions. The screw steamship Khersonese, from Liverpool, June 2 for Halifax and Portland, arrived here on Sunday, and sailed at 12 o'clock to day for Halifax.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA AT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 17.

The Royal Mail steamship Europa, from Liverpool via Halifax, arrived here at 3 o'clock this afternoon. There are no items of interest in addition to the dispatch from Halifax. The mails were placed on board the steamboat Traiu for Stonington, and will be due in New-York at an early hour to-morrow morning.

DEPARTURE OF THE AMERICA.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 17.

The Royal Mail steamship sailed for Liverpool via Halifax at 8 o'clock this morning, with about 170 passengers and $1,216,000 in specie.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB ONE OF HERRING & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to replace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside off one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hell's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bitts, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors evaded the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

FIREWORKS.

HADFIELD'S FIRST PREMIUM FIREWORKS.
BRILLIANT COLORED FIRES.
Laboratory, Middle Village, L. I., where every variety of beautiful designs, many of which are entirely new, will be found.
Mr. H. has no doubt his customers will be sufficiently satisfied with the quality of his works without his enumerating the number of premiums received (he has a few) at the late fairs, which has long since become almost a byword. Sufficient to say that he will challenge the world to produce any better works, and is perfectly willing, if necessary, to test the same in any way where there are impartial parties to decide. The subscriber pledges his self that everything shall be as represented. Goods delivered in any part of the City free of charge.

Where samples of Exhibition Pieces, also every variety of sale work, suited to storekeepers' sales, such as CRACKERS, TORPEDOES, ROCKETS, CANDLES, &c., &c., &c., may be found, and goods delivered in any part of the City, or at any of the railroad or steamboat stations, free of expense.

JOSEPH G. & J. EDGE, JR.—FIRST PREMIUM FIREWORKS.—The subscribers claim to be the only manufacturers of "First Premium Fireworks" in the United States, having taken every first premium for fireworks offered by the American Institute for the last seven years, also at the Marshall testimonial.
They beg to state that they have entered their works for competition every year for the past four years at the Fairs of the American Institute, and also at the World's Fair, but none have offered to compete with them, which they deem conclusive evidence of their superiority over all other makers inasmuch as they decline placing their works in competition. OFFICE OF THE EAGLE FIRE COMPANY,
NEW-YORK, June 15, 1857.
AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, this day, the following preamble and resolutions were passed:
Whereas, The Board of Directors has received the sad intelligence of the death of AQUILA G. STOUT, the President of this Company, who departed this life at his residence in this City, after a short illness; therefore be it
Resolved, That this Board have heard with deep regret, of the unexpected death of their President, Mr. STOUT, who for many years has acted with them in the care and management of this Company.
Resolved, That we entertain a grateful recollection of the kindness and courtesy which have mark d our intercourse with Mr. Stout, since he has been the President of this Company.
Resolved, That we remember and duly appreciate the probity of his character, the clearness of mind, and prompt and active habits of business that distinguished him; that we are indebted to his zeal, intelligence and industry in resuscitating the Company after the disastrous fire of 1845, in securing public confidence in its character and resources, and promoting, during his administration of its affairs, its respectability, prosperity and success.
Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family of our departed friend, and sincerely condole with them on the loss of an affectionate husband and father, whom it has pleased Heaven to remove from their circle.
Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.
At the same meeting, JAMES N. COBB, Esq., was elected President of the Company.
By order of the Board of Directors.
J. H. LEGGETT, Secretary.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DI- rectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 168 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to the Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but cer ainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMON- WEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 20th inst., and no proposals made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered, (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer;
GEO. L. PERKINS, Treasurer Nor. & Wor. Railroad Company.

BOSTON, June 1, 1857.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing at any time within two years from the 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 20, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 8 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

CHARLES BUTLER, Treasurer, &c.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE IN- CREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

THE CIVIL WAR.

night. Previous to the departure of the Deputy, Mr. WILLET gave Mr. MCKIBBEN orders to retain the Mayor in his custody and on no cause or pretext to allow him to remove himself from his care. If any attempt should be made to rescue the Mayor he was to resist such attempt to his utmost, and, if necessary, resist force by force. Mr. MCKIBBEN gave the Sheriff to understand that his orders would be faithfully and fully complied with.

It is stated that no fewer than thirty fresh warrants have been issued against the Mayor, and that they will be put into execution with the greatest possible dispatch.

THE CITY HALL FLAGS.

During the progress of the legal argument before Judge RUSSELL, the three flags of the City were hoisted on the City Hall. Appearing at such a singular time, they gave rise to many strange rumors, the most prevalent of which was that the Mayor was chuckling to himself and rejoicing in his own virtuous and patriotic way over some minute and net generally apparent triumph. Others maintained that they were intended as signals to the henchmen of the Chief Magistrate to hasten to his rescue; and others that they were in honor of Gen. WM. WALKER.

These silly rumors were quieted at length by a simple statement of fact. The flags were hoisted (somewhat tardily it must be confessed) commemorative of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

OLD POLICEMEN ON DUTY.

The number of Municipal Policemen on duty in the Park yesterday was much larger than on the previous day. Every one of the Municipal Captains were present, some of them having with them almost their entire force. Every member of the First Ward Police was present but one—the doorman—who was left to maintain order in his Ward, and prevent the rats from running away with the Station-house. Mr. MARSHALL had the general command, and looked as collected as usual, and quite well in his police uniform. As on the previous day, the iron gates at the main entrance of the hall were closed. The other entry-ways were well guarded, and the passages closed, except to those having business within. The men remained in the positions assigned them, chatting, smoking, and enjoying themselves as well as they could under the circumstances.

AT THE MAYOR'S OFFICE.

Within the Mayor's office were stationed quite a number of men, including Capts. ACKERMAN, DILES and WITTER. Capt. BENNETT and other officers assigned to the guardianship of particular posts, were either personally or by message constantly communicating with the Mayor, and orders were given and sent to and fro. Several aldermen called upon the Mayor, as did also in the afternoon ex Gov. SEYMOUR. Towards evening all the men, save a section from the Third Ward, under command of Sergeant SPENCE, who remained in the cellar passage-way, until about 9 o'clock, when Sergeant OWEN dismissed them, saying that he "and TOM MARMAN could take care of things for the night."

THE MILITARY.

Four Regiments were under arms—the Fifth, Ninth, Eleventh and Twelfth. The Ninth Regiment (under command of Colonel PITKIN) remained under arms all Tuesday night. Yesterday morning they were supplied with rations for twenty-four hours longer. About sundown they were dismissed, with the exception of a small guard who have charge of the ammunition served out for the crisis, and not yet restored to the Arsenal.

MAJOR GENERAL SANDFORD.

The man of the times—the hero of the hour, is undoubtedly Major General SANDFORD. It was in the highest degree amusing to observe the chaotic effect which the appearance of this gentleman created everywhere. If the comet of his excellent Majesty King CHARLES had walked through the Park with his tail under his arm, he could not have created a more solemn impression. Yet there is nothing terrific in the appearance of the Maj. General. He is not a giant in size, nor an Adonis in beauty; he does not wear a scowl and a long sword, or clank ferocious spurs as he treads the earth. There is not the slightest smell of gunpowder about him, or the mildest suggestion of a bayonet. He is simply a jovial-faced little gentleman, rather thin, and slightly snowed with the advancing honors of age, but straight as a ramrod. He is, to all appearances, incapable of excitement—a sort of military iceberg, which all civic steamers are glad enough to avoid. The facility with which he found admission to all places yesterday, whether guarded by the Mayor's Police or rowdies, was in the highest degree prevaking. Wherever he went people fell back. He smiled benignantly at the politeness, and trotted away as if his pockets were filled with bon-bons and Sunday School medals. Hundreds followed in his wake, but we are not aware that a single discourteous expression was uttered, even behind his back.

In times of popular excitement more firmness and decision of character are needed to prevent bloodshed than to effect it. Irritated by a mob and goaded on by indignant officials, a military commander has a vital duty of the utmost consequence and delicacy to discharge. He must be firm with both masters. This, it is universally conceded, has been the course with Major-General SANDFORD. Called on under very peculiar circumstances to preserve the peace, he has done so thoroughly, and without the exhibition of any angry feeling. He has satisfied respectable people, and even the "roughs," who gave him three hearty cheers yesterday as he passed through the Park.

Elsewhere we publish an account of the service of two warrants on the Mayor by Deputy CARPENTER and Capt. SPEIGAT of the Metropolitan force. Major General SANDFORD accompanied the officers, and there was no difficulty in the matter. But before this boon had been secured, one or two little scenes occurred which may be given in this place. In the first place Mayor WOOD, it is well known, has a natural repugnance to the new force. All along he has refused to acknowledge its officers as officers of the law, and consequently objected to receive any legal process at their hands. Major-General SANDFORD had an interview with the Mayor on the subject:

SANDFORD.—There are some warrants to be served on your Honor.

MAYOR.—I am ready to receive them from the proper officers.

SANDFORD.—They will be served on you by members of the Metropolitan Police.

MAYOR.—I know nothing about the Metropolitan Police, and refuse to acknowledge their authority in the matter.

SANDFORD.—Then I shall have to make you acknowledge it at the point of the bayonet.

The Mayor had nothing more to say to the little mild gentleman, but as the sequel proved, thought it best to accept service of the warrants at the hands of two members of the Metropolitan Police, and thus abandon one of his strongest positions without a blow.

On the other hand, General SANDFORD had to show his teeth to the Commissioners. They were anxious for a display of physical force, and entirely indisposed to meet things in a benevolent way. The warrants, they said, had to be served; the service would be resisted, and at least a thousand men would be needed to avert a second defeat by the doughty champions of the Mayor. To this General SANDFORD replied that an array of numbers would undoubtedly provoke a collision, and consequently a breach of the peace. That he had been called in with the express object of preventing this, and that he should undoubtedly do so in this and every other instance. One or two men could serve the warrants without molestation or fear of tumult. More than this he would not allow to go on the errand. He kept his word, and obtained all that was necessary without any unpleasant results.

Growing out of this matter was a discussion in which Mr. FIELD lost some of his temper. He said that if he could not get the proper amount of assistance from Major General SANDFORD, he would apply to the Governor by telegraph, and desire him to send on by express the Seventh Regiment, then in Boston. Not satisfied with saying this, he put the threat into execution.

The most singular part of the matter is, that Governor KING actually gave instructions to the Seventh Regiment to return. The following is the telegraphic dispatch from Boston on the subject:

"The National Guard had scarcely arrived on the scene of the celebration to-day, when order was received from Gov. KING, based on a dispatch from New-York, to prepare to return to New-York in the evening. The National Guard immediately marched to the Revere House and sent word for the train boat to be in readiness on the Providence and Stonington route. Scarcely had this been effected when another dispatch came announcing that their presence was not needed. Order to Steamboat Company countermanded. Will return on Thursday."

The explanation of this matter lies in a nutshell. When Major-General SANDFORD learnt that a message had actually been sent to the National Guard, through the Governor, without, as he thought, the slightest occasion, and simply from a spirit of petulant opposition to peaceful measures, he dispatched a second and peremptory message to the Colonel of the Seventh Regiment, saying that the presence of himself and corps were in no way needed, and that they need not hasten their return in the slightest. It was an absurdity, the General thought, to suppose, under any circumstances whatever, that the peace of the City could not be preserved in the absence of the Seventh Regiment. It is probable that the Governor did not know of the second dispatch until his arrival here last night. He left Boston by the 3 o'clock train, and Major-General SANDFORD did not telegraph until after that hour.

MEETING OF THE NEW COMMISSIONERS.

The Metropolitan Commissioners had a meeting at their office in White-street yesterday forenoon, and appointed thirty persons on the Department, who were immediately sworn in, and put upon duty. The names of the persons so appointed are:

Joseph L. Liscomb,	Wm. Stuhlebein,
David Golden,	John Esdin,
Charles Minor,	George Lavender,
Oscar D. Fisher,	James K. Philips,
Benjamin Bates,	H. Nelson Grey,
Samuel Fabor,	L. L. Treadwell,
Robert E. Fay,	John H. Porter,
Albert G. Hayden,	Wm. Sutterland,
Joseph Thayer,	Jason Mills,
Alexander Finch,	John McPherson,
Patrick Halloran,	Robert Cairns,
Archimedes Bell,	Patrick Flavan,
James B. Petit,	James Alexander,
Henry C. Vanorden,	Jacob Acker,
Alonzo Forbee,	G. W. Brickner.

The whole of the Sixth Ward detailed force, together with many others from various Wards, received notice yesterday of their dismissal by the new Commissioners.

COMING OVER.

Several of the old force have declared within a day or two for the new law. Yesterday Officer ROACH, of the Sixteenth Ward, gave up his star to Capt. MOKEE, declaring his intention to go over to the new Board.

AT THE OFFICE IN WHITE-STREET.

The Deputy Superintendent and a large number of men remained in the Office in White-street all Tuesday night. Early yesterday morning sections of men from various Wards, headed by their Captains, appeared and reported for duty. They were all retained within and about the building ready to act, if required.

During the entire forenoon, citizens came pouring into the Office of the Commissioners. They came singly and in bodies, numbering in all between four and five hundred, and each and all volunteered their services gratuitously to aid in the enforcement of the law. "If it be necessary to fight," said many among them, "why we will fight, and teach WOOD and his ruffianly gang that the law must be carried out." These volunteers were introduced, as they came to the officers, and their wishes made known. The Commissioners consulted a moment and finally agreed to swear in, as special policemen, about 400 men. They were given badges, and put, like the rest of the force present, under command of Capt. TURNBULL, of the Eighth Ward, who acted in place of Deputy CARPENTER, who was away, having been on duty the whole of the previous night. Each man was given, also, a piece of red tape, to wear in a button-hole of the coat. Each was supplied with a club, and when marshaled in front of their head quarters made a martial appearance. Crowds thronged about as usual, and remained around until about sundown, when most of the force was dismissed, Deputy CARPENTER having learned that the Municipal men about the City Hall had been previously dismissed for the night. About 30 men remained on duty at the White-street office all last night.

The Mayor of Brooklyn Preparing for an Emergency.

The following is a copy of a paper issued quite extensively, it is said, to citizens of Brooklyn by the mayor. What necessity exists for this deputizing a large number of citizens—a power which it was not known the Mayor possessed—is, at present, a mystery:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, CITY HALL,
BROOKLYN, June 15, 1857.

This certifies that authority is hereby given, so far as the same is vested in me, to ———, while in the discharge of his duty, in preserving order, to arrest all persons engaged in the violation of any of the ordinances of this City or in the commission of crimes or misdemeanors under the laws of this State, and the members of the Police Department of the City are hereby required to render said ——— all necessary and proper assistance herein.

SAMUEL S. POWELL, Mayor.

Help for the Wounded Policemen.

Coroner PERRY sends us the following

NOTICE:

The undersigned, one of the acting Coroners of the City and County of New-York, being called upon yesterday to serve a warrant of arrest under the authority of the Superior Court, and being resisted in his first attempt, he made a demand and promptly received assistance from a posse of the Metropolitan Police, and while proceeding to execute the process the men so assisting were set upon and beaten by a gang of lawless ruffians, assisted by the Municipal Police, some of them, so that there is but little hope of their recovery. The subscriber would earnestly urge the necessity upon the law-abiding citizens of assisting to relieve the men so injured while in discharge of their duty, in assisting to enforce the laws, most of them being in destitute circumstances, with families depending upon them for their daily bread.

F. W. PERRY.

NEW-YORK, June 17, 1857.

The Metropolitan Police Case before the Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Wednesday, June 17.

The Metropolitan Police case came up for argument before the Court of Appeals this morning. A large number of persons were present, and the greatest interest was manifested in the case.

CHARLES O'CONOR, Esq., opened for Mayor WOOD.

Mr. O'CONOR's argument was confined to constitutional objections to the Districts formed by the act

At the close of Mr. O'CONOR's argument Mr. EVARTS opened for the Metropolitan Commissioners. Mr. CUTTING followed on the same side. Mr. EDMONDS speaks to-morrow morning for two hours on the part of the people. This closes the argument. The decision will not be rendered until the close of next week.

MOVEMENTS OF GENERAL WALKER.

HE VISITS THE BOWERY.

GREAT SENSATION AMONG THE BOYS.

He is Called Upon by the Friends of his Lost Men.

The Lafarge House in Broadway, where Gen WALKER and his friends are staying, was throughout the day yesterday the centre of attraction to the friends of Nicaragua, and the General was kept busy in receiving calls, answering polite invitations to all sorts of entertainments, by word and by letter, besides entertaining those who called upon him to pay their respects and to express their sympathy in the movements which he represents.

Mr. DUNN, from Newark, called on behalf of a friend to inquire of the General if he could inform him of the whereabouts of ALBERT WILLIAMS, a young man who was among the forces at Serapiqui, and from whom his friends had not heard since the receipt of a letter speaking in discouraging terms of the prospects at that place. The General informed him that the Company to which he probably belonged was nearly all annihilated by a sudden attack of the Costa Ricans, owing to the culpable careless of Capt. THOMPSON, who was in charge of that post. Col. LOCKRIDGE informed him that there were only eight out of some 45 persons who escaped on that occasion, and he could give him little encouragement that he was living. Another person, a citizen of New-York, was introduced by Ex-Councilman WILD, who greeted General WALKER with great cordiality, and expressed his regret that he had not met with that success which his merits deserved, and hoped the cause was not lost yet. The General replied that it was never more encouraging; this over, and having taken a seat beside the General, he said he had called to make inquiry for his son, a young man whom he had fitted out and sent to Nicaragua; he had not heard from him for a long time, and he was very anxious to know what had become of him; his mother was almost distracted on his account; for himself he had no hopes that he was living. General WALKER asked where he was at last accounts, and on being told he was at Rivas, he seemed to have some recollections of the young man, and referred the father to one of his officers who could probably inform him about his son.

During the afternoon he received a call from GEORGE LAW, who remained in conversation with him for about an hour. In conversation he speaks in a very low, precise and measured tone, standing close to the person he talks with, and looking him steadily in the face with his large gray eye that never winks. He seldom smiles, but his manner in other respects is affable, though somewhat reserved. Mr. LAW, who called while our reporter was present, was received with the same consideration that he had bestowed upon a score of other persons who had previously called, and no more.

HIS VISIT TO THE BOWERY.

By invitation of the managers of the Bowery Theatre, Gen. WALKER and his associates paid a visit to that place in the evening. The front box had been decorated by the American Ensign, and the pillars wreathed with flags, and left vacant for his reception.

At 9 o'clock he entered the Theatre, accompanied by his staff. As he advanced to the front seat, the audience greeted him with cheer upon cheer. The General rose and bowed his acknowledged merits, whilst the orchestra played "Hail Columbia" and "The Star-Spangled Banner." When the music had ceased, a shout arose—"A speech, a speech." The General rose up, and order being restored, he spoke with a loud, full voice as follows:

SPEECH OF GENERAL WALKER.

I thank you for these manifestations of approbation of a cause which your conduct proves is dear to every American heart. [Cries of "Good! good!" and calls for silence.] The conduct of the people of the United States proves that they cannot be misled by any misrepresentations, however industriously circulated. The people in their instincts are always in favor of a cause which tends to promote their welfare and their glory. Again I thank you, in behalf of the cause I represent, for these manifestations of approbation.

Gen. WALKER resumed his seat amid tumultuous cheers, and the orchestra struck up Yankee Doodle.

The following persons were with him in the box: Col. PEDRO SELVA, of Nicaragua; Col. FAYSOUX, Col. MCARDLE, Col. LOCKRIDGE, Col. WATERS, Judge PHILLIPS, and A. C. LAWRENCE.

The house was full, and the Bowery boys were in their glory.

When the curtain fell at the close of the first piece, the General and his friends retired, and drove back to the Lafarge House, where the remainder of the evening was spent in conversation upon Nicaraguan affairs. Several friends called upon him here. Among these was the distinguished Capt. ISAIAH RYNDERS, United States Marshal, who was closeted with the chief of the fillibusters for some time.

ESCAPE OF PAROT.

Surrendered by the U. S. Marshal to the Deputy Jailer—He is Rescued by his Lawyers.

APPLICATION TO REOPEN THE CASE.

COMMISSIONER BETTS DENIES IT.

The escape of PAROT, one of the prisoners in the French Extradition case, absorbed a great deal of attention yesterday, exciting as were the incidents of the Police War. The history of the case, from the beginning, shows some curious legal windings and turnings. The circumstances of the case, as we learn from a reliable source, are substantially as follow:

PAROT, in company with the two GRELETS, CARPENTIER and others, came to this country in August last, and were arrested at the instance of the Northern Railway Company of France, on a civil suit, on the ground that they had brought their property with them into this State. They were held under $500,000 bonds. This was probably only a preliminary transaction, preparing the way, and to give an opportunity to hold them upon a criminal suit. They continued to be held on that suit until the 19th of February, when they were cited upon a criminal process before United States Commissioner BETTS. The prisoners were to be returned to France without the benefit of counsel, and short work was to be made of the case. However, the prisoners' counsel insisted upon having a hearing in the matter, and the Commissioner began to hold hearings, adjourning them from day to day, until the 21st day of May. On that day, EUGENE GRELET, a young brother of one of the prisoners, who was apprehended with them, and had been incarcerated several months in Eldridge-street Jail, died. The concluding argument was made on the same day. In the meantime, CARPENTIER, the principal in the frauds, had, by the advice of his counsel, voluntarily returned to France.

In order to attend the funeral of young GRELET, it would be necessary to go out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of this County; and in order to get over the difficulty, and allow the prisoners to attend the funeral, they were transferred to the custody of the United States Marshal. From the 22d until the 25th of May, they remained in Eldridge-street Jail, when the Commissioner gave his decision inculpating L. GRELET, but stating he did not find evidence sufficient to hold PAROT. After that decision the prisoners were taken from Eldridge street jail and placed in the custody of the United States Marshal. On the 30th of May came the President's warrant for the rendition of LOUIS GAZLET to the French authorities. PAROT was still to be left in the custody of the Marshal. On the 1st of June, Mr. TOWNSHEND, counsel for the prisoners, began to make efforts to obtain a habeas corpus, in order to liberate PAROT, as there was nothing against him in the Commissioner's decision. On informing Marshal RYNDERS of his intention, the Marshal informed him he should pay no attention to any writ of that kind unless issued out of a United States Court. On the 2d day of June, the counsel TOWNSHEND found PAROT in the custody of the Sheriff, and lodged in Eldridge street again. On questioning the Sheriff, he stated that he had obtained possession of PAROT on the verbal order of Mr. MORROUGH, counsel for the French Government. Here was an attempt to hold PAROT upon the civil suit, which, in the beginning, was instituted simply as a convenience. On the 4th of June application was made to Commissioner BETTS by the French Consul General for permission to give further evidence in the case of PAROT, and upon that application the Commissioner made an order, remanding him to the custody of the United States Marshal to await a further examination. Thus matters stood until yesterday, when the request of the French Consul General, that the case might be reopened for the admission of new testimony was denied by the Commissioner in an elaborate decision. He recited the legal history of the trial before him. On the 21st of May, after hearing the testimony and arguments presented by counsel, he had finally indorsed upon the warrant an order that "the prisoners he continued in custody of the Marshal until their surrender to the proper authorities of the French Government, according to the stipulations of treaties or conventions between the Governments of the United States of America and of France, or until their discharge according to due course of law, or until the further order of the Commissioner."

On the 5th of June, after the application of M. DE MENTHOLON, Consul-General of France, before the examination was commenced, the counsel for PAROT objected to proceeding, on the ground that the Commissioner had no jurisdiction. The Commissioner decided that, under all the circumstances, he had jurisdiction. The prosecution are not without remedy if they think that the case against PAROT, as made out, calls for his extradition. This proceeding is no bar to an application for another warrant and a new examination of PAROT on this accusation. But the case having been passed on by him, the Commissioner thought he had no authority to reopen it.

THE DEPUTY JAILER'S STORY.

Mr. HAENARD, Deputy-keeper of Eldridge-street Jail, gives the following as his side of the story touching the escape of PAROT: He was present at the rendering of the decision in PAROT's case by United States Commissioner BETTS. At this time PAROT was the prisoner of Deputy Marshal RYNDERS under a United States warrant, as also in the custody of the Sheriff under a civil process on behalf of the State. He represented the Sheriff himself, so that PAROT was simultaneously a United States and State prisoner. At the termination of Mr. BETTS' decision, in which the latter declared that he did not think he had any authority to hold the prisoner for examination under the United States warrant, Mr. RYNDERS immediately told Mr. PAROT that he was no longer a prisoner of the United States. He (RYNDERS) added further, "You are now his prisoner," (pointing to Mr. HAENARD.) Mr. HAENARD says he immediately told PAROT also that he was his prisoner. The remarks of RYNDERS and himself were understood by PAROT and the prisoner—so stated at the time. Mr. TOWNSHEND, one of PAROT's counsel, immediately came up and told PAROT that he was no longer a prisoner of any one, and asked Mr. HARNARD to produce his warrant.

Mr. HARNARD—I have my authority, and shall arrest him.

Mr. TOWNSHEND—I forbid you to take him into your custody. If you do so it will be at your peril.

Mr. HARNARD said he was indifferent to any threats that might be uttered; he had his duty to perform, and should do it. Having said this he passed his arm through the arm of PAROT, and both came together out of the United States Marshal's office. Messrs. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH, PAROT's counsel, followed directly on behind. He proceeded with PAROT up Murray-street about half a block. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH kept telling PAROT that he (HARNARD) had no authority to detain him in custody. Suddenly, Mr. TOWNSHEND stepped up on his right side and seized him by the right arm. Mr. GALBRAITH made a similar and simultaneous movement on his left side. Both held his arms tight, and told PAROT to go—to make himself free and run.

PAROT was taken by surprise, and inquired if the counsel were really in earnest.

Mr. TOWNSHEND—We mean what we say—run for your liberty—run quick and don't stop to look around.

Mr. GALBRAITH—I tell you he has no right to hold you as prisoner—you run and we will hold him.

Mr. PAROT, assured now that the advice to escape was given meaningly, finally heeded the counsel, and proceeded on a run towards Broadway. Mr. HARNARD struggled to get away, but found it impossible to break from the grip of the two attorneys. PAROT turned into Broadway, and was out of sight in less than no time. The two counsel, as soon as PAROT disappeared, released their grasp. Just as they were relessing their hold, Mr. MORROUGH came up and began to say something which he did not stop to hear. He started at once in pursuit of the escaped prisoner, but could see nothing of him. Mr. HARNARD spent all yesterday afternoon and last evening in search for PAROT. He went to the Mataran Hotel, in Beekman-street, where PAROT's wife is stopping, and was informed that he had been there. Beyond this he was unable, up to a late hour last evening, to get any clue to PAROT's whereabouts.

MEN NEWLY MADE.—Until quite recently, it was our opinion that the circumstance of one old acquaintance passing another without recognition was to be set down, in most cases, to change of fortune; but since we have known KNOX of Broadway, corner of Fulton, and witnessed the transfiguration completed by his Hats, we have owned ourselves in error; for such is the improvement these articles cause in the personal aspect, as to render an explanation necessary to the identity of an ancient friend, and to inspire an exclamation of wonder at KNOX's power of making a man over again.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Habitual constipation predisposes the system to receive infection, vitiates the breath, and renders the whole body impure. Mere purgatives aggravate the disease and impair the strength of the sufferer. This remedy, on the contrary, permanently regulates the excretive function, and lends vigor to the frame while it purifies the animal fluids. Sold at the manufactory, 80 Maiden-lane, New-York, and by all druggists, at 25c., 63c., and $1 per box.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—An unusually fine bill is announced at this house to-night, viz., the drama of "Wallace," pantomime of "Pongo," comedietta of "Mountain Sylph," and drama of "Matteo Falcone." Great preparations are being made here for the production of C. W. TAYLOR's new historical piece, "Bonepart, or the Siege of Moscow," which will be ready on Monday next. But don't forget the excellent bill for to-night.

IS MAYOR WOOD IN CONTEMPT?

Ten New Writs for his Arrest yesterday

BOTH POLICE FORCES REDUCED.

STATE OF THE WOUNDED.

CROFUT IN A CRITICAL CONDITION.

Conference of Governor King and Mayor Wood.

THE ALDERMEN TO MEET DAILY.

Exceedingly Interesting Proceedings.

Comparative quiet was restored to the City yesterday. There was a general feeling among citizens that no further blood would be shed in the contest; the matter had come into the Courts where none but the erudite can long follow it; it had lost its absorbing interest, so the Park was not densely thronged. The force about the City Hall was greatly reduced. The assemblage outside the Hall—less than fifty persons at 8½ o'clock—gradually swelled to some 300 at noon. Most were evidently curious lookers on. Not the slightest excitement, or anything tending to it, was shown. The general talk was, that if the policemen were withdrawn from the Hall, all others would withdraw also. About 10 o'clock, all the special policemen sworn in on Wednesday, were dismissed by order of the Metropolital Police Commissioners, who returned their thanks through Deputy Carpenter for the services rendered. Twelve men, including two sergeants—were permanently added to the new force. The Governor, who arrived in New York by the Wednesday night train from Boston, was present at the office in White-street during the forenoon; and in the afternoon, previous to his departure for Albany, he had a consultation with Mayor Wood, at the Astor House. An account of this interview (given by the Mayor) will be found below.

All the wounded men are believed out of danger except Lyman Crofut, of the Metropolitan force, who resides at No. 84 Ludlow-street. Coroner Gamble, at the request of the Mayor, was in attendance at the residence of Mr. Crofut during the day, ready to hold an inquest, should it be found necessary.

At the office of the Street Commissioner matters proceeded quietly. There was no evidence of any unusual state of things there other than the presence of a considerable police force lounging upon benches or sitting composedly upon the stairs. Commissioner Conover had made no new effort to gain entrance. He is said to have been in consultation with Governor King all the morning. One of his clerks was in the outer room of the Recorder's office, but did not appear to be doing any business. The Recorder himself was testifying in the Burdell case during a portion of the morning, and holding Court at the General Sessions the remainder.

Mayor Wood came to his office at 9½ o'clock of the morning, looking refreshed. Deputy Sheriff McKibben, in whose custody the Mayor is, nominally, was not in sight, but soon after he appeared. The office of the Mayor was accessible throughout the day to those who had business with him. At six o'clock the vigilant Deputy assured our Reporter that his Honor had not been out of the office for more than four minutes during the day, that being the length of time that he had not been most carefully watched. His Honor assured our Reporter, however, that about one o'clock he went by invitation to the Astor House, and enjoyed a long conference with Governor King. He begged attention of our Reporter to this point—whether, as was the opinion of the TIMES of Thursday, he (the Mayor) was much careworn and haggard. He felt fresh—and certainly his Honor looked refreshed. "I wish it understood," he said too, "that I am going home alone to night—I'll have no Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff with me." Mr. McKibben, the Deputy, stood by, and made no demurrer to this. About 6½ P. M. the Mayor entered his carriage alone, and—unaccompanied rode homeward.

It was thought that there might be some excitement when Judge Russell's Court reassembled at 3 P. M. for the hearing of the first habeas corpus. There was no occasion for any, however.

Judge Russell, as was generally expected, discharged the Mayor on the writ of habeas corpus. Immediately before rendering his decision, however, a new writ of habeas corpus was applied for and granted, returnable immediately at Room No. 6 City Hall, (the Mayor's office.) This was to enable the force of the warrants served on the Mayor yesterday by Captains Carpenter and Speight, under which the Sheriff was bound to bring the Mayor before the Recorder, on his discharge by Judge Russell. This second habeas corpus was returnable forthwith in the Mayor's Office. District Attorney Hall declining however to proceed, it was adjourned for one week. Ten separate orders for the arrest of Mayor Wood in actions commenced against him by members of the Metropolitan Police, were granted during the day, four in the Supreme Court, three in the Superior Court and three in the Court of Common Pleas. Judge Hoffman, in the Superior Court, upon the affidavits of Coroner Perry and Daniel D. Conover, made an order requiring Mayor Wood to show cause before him on the 23d of June, instant, at 10 o'clock, why he should not be punished as for a contempt in resisting the service of process issued out of that Court on the 16th instant. Governor King, at the representation of District-Attorney Hall, has directed that a Special Term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer be held in this City, to commence on the first Monday in July.

GOVERNOR KING.

In the morning Governor King remarked to one of our reporters, that he entirely approved the course of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners throughout this unfortunate affair—their moderation and their firmness be cordially sanctioned. With reference to his appointment of Mr. Conover, the Governor had made it after an opinion as to his power had been given by eminent legal gentlemen. Mr. Conover, in his opinion, has adopted the proper course in taking legal measures. He thought the crisis of the contest had passed, and that his presence here was no longer necessary. He left at 5 o'clock by the Harlem cars for Albany.

CONFERENCE OF GOV. KING AND MAYOR WOOD.

Two rumors prevailed extensively yesterday afternoon at the City Hall relative to an interview between Gov. King and Mayor Wood. One story was that Gov. King had called upon the Mayor and told him distinctly that he repudiated the action taken by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners touching the Street Commissionership, and the hostile position in which they had all along placed themselves to the Municipal Police under Mayor Wood. The story went further, that he was indignant at the calling out of the military on Tuesday last, and excessively wroth at having been summoned peremptorily from Boston when he was enjoying himself so well. On the contrary, it was stated that Mayor Wood called upon Gov. King and expressed his regrets at the recent embroilment between the two Police forces in the City and the disastrous results of the contest relative to the office of the Street Commissioner, and that he promised to acknowledge in future the authority and supremacy of the Metropolitan Police.

One of our Reporters called upon Mayor Wood, and received his statement of the interview between Governor King and himself. The Mayor prefaced his statement with the announcement that when he purported to recite facts he gave facts, and that his statements of the interview in question would be facts, and only facts. He remarked upon the high position of newspapers and the importance of Reporters getting their facts from reliable parties, after which he entered upon his recital:

MAYOR WOOD'S REPORT OF HIS CONFERENCE WITH THE GOVERNOR.

Shortly after 11 o'clock, a personal and political friend of Governor King called at his office, and stated that a visit from him to Governor King would be very acceptable to the latter, and asked him if he would not call at the Astor House and pay his respects to the Governor. He (the Mayor) was very much occupied with the business of his office, and was unable at that hour to comply with the invitation. At 2 P. M. another person, also a special personal and political friend of the Governor, called at his office and renewed the invitation of the previous visitor. At about 2½ o'clock the Mayor went to the Astor House, and his name was announced to Governor King. The Governor received him in a cordial, friendly manner.

After the exchange of the usual civilities and introductions to parties present, the Governor said that he had been sent for rather peremptorily while enjoying himself in Boston. He now regretted that he had come to New-York, as he saw no necessity for his presence here. He thought him (the Mayor) capable of taking care of the peace of the City. He should leave town at 5 P. M. He had marched up hill and all he had to do was to march down again. If there had been a riot in the City, he had no doubt that he, the Chief Magistrate of the City, would have stood by him in restoring quiet to the City.

The Mayor stated in reply, that he felt capable of maintaining and preserving the peace of the City without the aid of the Governor. No person regretted more than he did what had occurred. He deprecated violence under any circumstance, and was entirely a man of peace.

In what he had done in the present crisis he had been actuated only by a sense of public duty. He had resisted what he deemed an encroachment upon the rights of the City of New-York. The painful collision which had occurred between the two police forces claiming supremacy in the City had been produced by an effort to degrade him personally. The idea of sending armed force to serve a warrant upon him at his office, where, as every one knew, he was at all times accessible and willing to obey a writ legally served was perfectly monstrous. He had no doubt that those of the municipal police who resisted the efforts of the opposite police in their effort to serve a warrant upon him, were actuated by pure and proper motives. He was satisfied that had the Governor been in the City to give his counsel in the case, he would have prevented the imprudent steps which had been taken.

The Governor remarked that he, too, regretted exceedingly what had occurred. New-York was his native City. It was painful to know that such scenes of violence had occurred. He hoped that he (the Mayor) would use his utmost endeavors to prevent their recurrence.

The Mayor replied that in the whole controversy, from first to last, he had rather suppressed any outburst of partisan feeling on the part of his friends, but had counseled peace and harmony so far as the Police question was concerned. This question has soon to be decided by the Court of Appeals. He was willing to wait and abide their decision. The appointment of Street Commissioner was entirely distinct, however, from the Police question. He felt perfectly justified in the course he had taken in ejecting Mr. Conover from the Street Commissioner's office. Although the Governor had appointed him, his right to do which he disputed, he (Mr. Conover) had failed to qualify himself properly to enter upon the duties of the office. He had failed to comply with the requisitions of the ordinances of 1849, now in full force, requiring him to give two sureties, in bonds of $10,000 each, to be filed in the Comptroller's office, and to receive the Mayor's approval. In consideration of these facts he had taken the course which he had pursued in relation to Mr. Conover. He felt fully justified in taking this course, and should continue it, be the consequences what they may. At the same time he should continue to act as the guardian of the City, while the Governor retained his position as guardian of the State.

The Governor said he had just heard that Mr. Conover had failed to submit his sureties to the Mayor for approval.

Some conversation ensued about Bunker Hill, the weather, &c., when, after a cordial invitation from the Governor to call on him at Albany, they shook hands, and the Mayor retired.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS.

The new Commissioners met yesterday at the usual hour. Gov. KING was present a part of the time. About 10 o'clock, the large special force sworn in on Wednesday were ordered to the Fifth Precinct Station in Franklin-street, where they were discharged from further duty. Whereupon they surrendered their clubs to Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER, who, before their departure, read to them the following order:

The Acting Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police is directed by the Commissioners to tender the thanks of the Department to the Special Patrolmen who, in the recent disturbance of the public peace, so nobly assisted to vindicate the supremacy of the law, by enrolling themselves as part of the Police force of the District. The Acting Superintendent has the pleasure to inform the Special Patrolmen that order has been restored, and that their services are no longer required for the maintenance of the Peace. DANIEL CARPENTER,
Acting Superintendent.

The Special force then dispersed, assuring the Deputy that whenever required they would be found willing to act in behalf of law and order.

The Commissioners made fourteen appointments—two Sergeants and twelve Patrolmen, viz:

Jno. Williamson, Sergeant,	H. S. Cox,
Edward Collin, Sergeant.	Arthur Johnston,
Thomas Beatty,	Floyd Palmer,
Enoch C. Lewis,	J. H. Thorn,
W. L. Miller,	James Alexander,
John W. Elliott,	D. C. Davis,
Joseph Waterbury, Jr.,	Geo. W. Majory.

No other public business was done by the Commissioners.

THE MAYOR'S FORCE YESTERDAY.

Two hundred and seventy-nine municipal policemen, drafted from all the Wards, reported themselves for duty at Chief Matsell's office, yesterday morning, and were immediately detailed for duty about the City Hall and Street-Commissioner's office. The following is a statement of the number of men and the Wards from which they came:

First Ward, 11; Second, 10; Third, 13; Fourth, 12; Fifth, 16; Sixth, 14; Seventh, 14; Eighth, 11; Ninth, 15; Tenth, 10; Eleventh, 11; Twelfth, 10; Thirteenth, 12; Fourteenth, 15; Fifteenth, 10; Sixteenth, 12; Seventeenth, 15; Eighteenth, 15; Nineteenth, 18; Twentieth, 11; Twenty first, 10; Twenty-second 12. Total, 279.

Besides these, there were about the hall the usual number of men there detailed, which, added to the force above given, increased the number of Mayor Wood's force to about 300.

The main entrances were guarded, as on the previous days, but not with so much strictness, as no fears were entertained of any further collision. The men remained on duty until late in the afternoon, when they were dismissed for the night.

No formal meeting of the old Commissioners, Messrs. Woon and RUSSELL, has been held for several days.

CONDITION OF THE WOUNDED.

MR. CROFUT NOT EXPECTED TO SURVIVE.

Police-Surgeon Jones, who has charge of the Metropolitan Policemen disabled at the fight at the City Hall on Tuesday, reported yesterday, to Deputy Carpenter, and to the Recorder, also, at this official's request. Policemen Bell, Greer, Bodine, Goodel, Petit, Van Tassell, Green, and Girvin, of the Fifth Precinct, were reported as doing well, and entirely removed from all danger.

Messrs. Smith and Slater, both of whom suffered severely, are also doing well, all threatening symptoms in each having disappeared.

Policeman Swagle, of the Third Precinct, who was badly cut about the head, is likewise fast recovering. The wounds inflicted were merely scalp ones.

Messrs. McKay and Benedict, of the same precinct, are so far recovered as to be able to report for duty.

Elisha Burlieon, of the Ninth Ward, is about as Mr. Burlison was, like nearly all the wounded, cut upon the head.

Officers Smith, of the Third Ward, Burlison, of the Ninth Ward, and Crofut, of the Seventeenth Ward, who were the most seriously injured, are all very low. Crofut is not expected to live much longer. He is at his residence, No. 184 Ludlow-street. He was one of the first who ascended the steps occupied by the Mayor's men, and the very first, it is believed, who resisted the attack of the crowd who opposed the progress of the Metropolitan force. Though quite an old man, he fought most desperately and felled many of his assailants before he himself was overpowered by numbers. While lying helpless upon the walk he was pounded most savagely. The people about implored that that his life might be spared. "He has got enough," they said, "don't hit him again." No heed was paid to these remonstrances, and poor Crofut would have been pounded to a jelly had not some of the municipal officers, more humane than their fellows, rushed forward and interposed against any further violence. His rescuers then conveyed him to the Chief's Office, where his wounds were dressed, after which he was conveyed to his residence.

When news of Crofut's condition reached the Mayor, he sent immediately for Coroner Gamble, that he might be present to hold the inquest and make known the verdict.

Mr. Gamble not appearing quickly, Coroner Connery was sent for, and immediately reported himself. In the meantime Coroner Gamble, having been notified of the Mayor's wishes, hastened with his Deputy straightway to the house of Mr. Crofut, to be in at the death and hold a proper inquest. Capt. Hartt was present, as was also Dr. Jones. Capt. Hartt, coming from the room of the sick man, said to those who stood in the passage-way, "Gentlemen, Mr. Crofut is in a very precarious condition; and it is the request of Dr. Jones and of Dr. Perry, who have seen him, that no visiters should be admitted."

"I am on the same footing here as Coroner Perry," said Coroner Gamble; and this gentleman here (pointing to his companion) is my Deputy."

Some words of explanation hereupon took place between Capt. Hartt and Coroner Gamble, during which all present, save Coroner Gamble and his Deputy, retired as they had been requested to do. Coroner Gamble and his Deputy were, at the last accounts, on hand awaiting a chance for official duty, but Mr. Crofut was alive at a late hour last night, and some hopes of his recovery were entertained by his sanguine friends.

Policeman Dutcher, who is also among the injured, and upon whose complaint a warrant for the arrest of Alderman Wilson has been issued, is not yet out of danger.

CAPTAIN BENNETT TURNS UPON THE RECORDER AND OTHERS.

The following affidavit was drawn up yesterday and was to have been signed by Captain Bennett, whose name appears at the commencement. It is said that it will be duly signed by the Captain and certified by a commission this morning and warrants be served upon Recorder Smith, Coroner Perry and Capt. Carpenter, charged with making the alleged assault and inciting to riot

City and County of New-York, ss.—John W. Bennett, Captain of the Third Patrol District, being duly sworn, says that on the 16th day of June, 1857, an assemblage of men, calling themselves members of the so-called Metropolitan Police District, made an onslaught upon divers members of the Municipal Police force of said City, thereby causing a riot to take place in said City, against the provision of the statute of said City and County, and against the dignity of the people thereof. Deponent further charges Daniel F. Carpenter, Frederick W. Perry, and James M. Smith, Jr., as being the instigators, abettors and leaders in said riot. Deponent therefore prays that the said defendants may be arrested forthwith, and conveyed before a proper magistrate in said City, to be dealt with as the law directs.

It was stated that a large number of Municipal policemen, who participated in the fight on Tuesday, in the rear of the City Hall, had been applied to to sign an affidavit similar to the above, but refused, as they could not conscientiously swear that an assault was made first by the Metropolitan police, and not by themselves.

THE RETURN OF THE HABEAS CORPUS.

At 3 o'clock, the hour named by Judge RUSSELL for rendering his decision on the writ of habeas corpus, the Court of Sessions was densely crowded, and considerable anxiety prevailed as to the result, many predicting that in the event of the City Judge discharging the Mayor, some dodge would be resorted to in order to evade the necessity of his appearing before the Recorder under the warrants served yesterday by Captains Carpenter and Speight. This proved true, for no sooner had Judge RUSSELL taken his seat than

Ex-Judge Dean rose and said: "May it please your honor, before proceeding to render the decision in this case, I beg leave to present another matter that I deem of importance to bring immediately before you. I have here a petition of Fernando Wood, which I will read, with your honor's permission:

To the Hon. A. D. Russell, City Judge of the City and County of New-York:

The petition of Fernando Wood shows that he is restrained of his liberty by J. C. Willet, Sheriff of the said City and County, and that he is not committed or detained by virtue of any process issued by any Court of the United States, or by any Judge thereof; nor is he committed or detained by virtue of the final judgment or decree of any competent tribunal of civil or criminal jurisdiction, or by virtue of any execution issued upon such judgment or decree; that the cause or pretence of such imprisonment according to the best of the knowledge and belief of your Petitioner is several warrants issued by the Recorder of the City of New-York for the arrest of your Petitioner for misdemeanors alleged to have been committed by your Petitioner while acting as Mayor of the City of New-York, in the discharge of his official duties as Mayor of said City; and your Petitioner further shows that he believes that said warrants have been issued by personal and political enemies, and for the purpose of gratifying personal and political malice only: wherefore your Petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus issue directed to said James C. Willet, Sheriff of said City and County, commanding him to bring the body of Fernando Wood before your Honor forthwith, together with the cause of his imprisonment. Dated the 18th day of June, 1857. FERNANDO WOOD.

City and County of New-York, ss:—Fernando Wood, the above Petitioner, being duly sworn, doth depose and say, that the facts set forth in the above petition, subscribed by him are true. FERNANDO WOOD.
Sworn before me, this 18th day of June, 1857.
A. D. RUSSEL, City Judge.

I ask (continued Mr. Dean) that your Honor will grant me a writ of habeas corpus, which right the statute gives to every citizen. I ask, moreover, that it may be returnable to the Office of the Mayor, Room No. 6 City Hall, forthwith.

Judge Russell—I do not know that it will be possible for me to have a hearing to day, but I will issue the writ, as the statute makes it imperative on me to do so.

Mr. Dean—That is enough. This is a writ which your Honor has a right to postpone the hearing of. We suppose that under the present exigencies, the Mayor should be kept in the citadel. After the writ is granted, we are willing to postpone the hearing under it until any time which suits the convenience of your Honor.

District-Attorney—I, of course, have nothing to say in this matter; but as amicus curiæ, I suggest, to your Honor that a "return forthwith" of a habeas corpus is not legal. It is a mistake to draw up a habeas corpus as returnable "forthwith," for the expression of the statute is "immediately on service of this writ."

Mr. Deane—I am willing to put it in that way.

District-Attorney—"Forthwith" does not mean anything. Your Honor had better quote the statute.

Mr. Deane—We think, your Honor, that the present exigencies are such as require the Mayor to be at the City Hall.

Judge RUSSELL here signed the writ of habeas corpus, and handed it to Judge Dean, who served it on Sheriff Willet, standing within the bar. The writ reads as follows:

The People of the State of New-York to Jas. C. Willet, Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, greeting:

We command you that you have the body of Fernando Wood, by you imprisoned and detained, as it is said, together with the time and cause of your imprisonment and detention, by whatsoever name it shall be called or charged, before me, at room No. 6 of the City Hall, in said City, immediately on the service of this writ, to do and receive what shall then and there be considered concerning him; and have you then and there this writ.

Witness—Henry A. Davies, Esq., one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, the 18th day of June, 1857.
RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, Clerk.
DEANE and DONOHUE, Attorneys for the Petitioner.

JUDGE RUSSELL'S DECISION.

Judge RUSSELL then read the following decision on the writ of habeas corpus, argued yesterday:

This case comes before me upon the application of Gilbert Dean for a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of the imprisonment of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York. By the return of the Sheriff to the writ, it appears that he arrested the Mayor on the 16th instant, and that he detains him in his custody by virtue of a warrant issued by the Recorder of the City of New-York, in which the Mayor is charged, in connection with Charles Turner and John W. Bennett, with inciting to a riot in the City of New-York, on the 15th and 16th instant, and with assaulting and procuring others to assault one Daniel D. Conover, on those days. I speak of Mr. Wood as Mayor, not because he is so designated in the charge or complaint against him, but because, from what transpired before me, it appeared that he was in fact the Mayor of the City of New-York, and that whatever he did on the occasions referred to was in that character or capacity. On the part of the applicant for the writ, a traverse of the Sheriff's return was interposed, denying the sufficiency of the affidavit or complaint on which the warrant was issued, and alleging the official character of the Mayor as a bar to arrest or imprisonment for his official acts. The learned District Attorney insisted that this traverse was, in effect, a demurrer, and joined in it as such, and averred in addition, in negative terms: First, that the affidavit was sufficient; second, that the official acts of the Mayor were the subjects of arrest in law; and, third, that the privileges of office did not avail the Mayor as to the acts for which the warrant was issued. The only evidence before me on the subject of the Mayor's alleged criminality was the affidavit on which the warrant was issued. On the return of the writ of habeas corpus, the District-Attorney urged, as a preliminary objection, that there was no right or power on the part of the City Judge to issue or allow such a writ. I had then and have now no doubt as to my jurisdiction in the matter. It was a subject I had previously satisfied myself upon by a careful examination and consideration of the powers and duties of the office. It would take away a most important attribute from the office to admit that it had no such power. It would be against the policy of the law, as well as against that liberal rule of construction which prevails in relation to remedial statutes, to confine or restrict the right to issue this merciful writ to a few hands. By the act of the Legislature creating the office of City Judge, (Laws of 1850, p. 388, section 3,) it is distinctly declared that, "All judicial powers vested by law in the Recorder of the City of New-York are hereby conferred upon such (the) City Judge, and said (the) City Judge shall, concurrently with said (the) Recorder perform and discharge all judicial duties imposed upon such (the) Recorder. The Recorder, as a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of New-York, has the same powers as the Judges specially elected for that Court; and the powers of the latter, as Supreme Court Commissioners, are expressly continued to them by chapter 285 of the laws of 1847. (Laws of 1847, page 281, sec. 7.) This law has undergone judicial construction by the Court of Appeals of this State, in Renard vs. Hargaus, (3 Seld., 259,) and the decision of the Court of Appeals in that case, in relation to the Superior Court of this City, will be found to sustain fully and completely this position. The right of the Recorder to issue writs of habeas corpus has never been drawn in question. If he has the power, the City Judge has also. If the City Judge has the power to grant a writ of habeas corpus, the statute leaves him no discretion as to the exercise of his right; for he would forfeit $1,000 to the party aggrieved were he to refuse to allow the writ, when legally applied to, besides being liable to impeachment if not indictment also. (2 R. S., 4th ed., 799, sec. 46.) This brings me to the consideration of the question submitted upon the merits of this application.

First—Is the affidavit upon which the warrant of arrest issued sufficient or not? I can see nothing in it, in a legal point of view, establishing the criminality of the Mayor. It is made by Mr. Conover, who claims to be the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, and the substance of it is that on two occasions, to wit: on the 15th and 16th inst., he was thrust from the possession of his (alleged) official apartments by the violence of certain parties, and that one of them, Bennett, who is charged in the warrant with the Mayor, stated that it was by the direction of the Mayor, the latter not being shown to have been present, on the contrary conceded to have been absent, and there being not the least evidence beyond to connect him with the transaction more than the veriest stranger. Mr. Conover further states that he believes all the defendants conspired together to procure the said assault to be committed upon him. It would be altogether unnecessary to attempt to show that, upon no principle of law or reason can or ought a criminal complaint to be entertained upon a basis or foundation like this. The affidavit strikes me as clearly insufficient so far as the Mayor is sought to be implicated. The case of the People vs. Hicks, (15 Barb., S. C. R. 157,) to which I have been referred by the District-Attorney, does not, as I understand it, take away from me the right to examine the complaint for the purpose of seeing that the Recorder, by reason of something alleged in it, had the right to cause the arrest of the Mayor. In that case the Recorder (Tillou,) upon a general affidavit showing the commission of a crime, instituted an examination to ascertain who were the perpetrators of it; and the court held that he had that right, as well as the right, by reason of his jurisdiction under the complaint, to inquire into the commission of other similar offences. That case involved the question of jurisdiction of subject matter. This case involves the question of jurisdiction of the person. It would be monstrous to say that under a general affidavit as to the perpetration of an offence, or that under an affidavit showing a prima facie case against certain parties, any number of persons could be arrested and detained in custody, whether implicated or not by the facts stated. If there was a reasonable color of jurisdiction on the part of the Recorder over the Mayor under the complaint, I might view the matter differently.

Second—Assuming the Mayor to have given the directions specified or mentioned in the affidavit, does not the privilege of his office guard him against arrest or imprisonment for what he said or did in that character or capacity? It was assumed as a fact on the argument of the application before me, that the Mayor was acting as a public officer—as Mayor—on the occasion adverted to. Granting this, I do not think the privilege of his office is perfectly absolute. Were he to abuse his office—act corruptly or maliciously, and without sufficient cause, and this fact should be established against him—the law would hold him responsible. It is a familiar principle that the abuse of power destroys the official character of an individual completely—entirely. The difficulty here is, that no such case is made out against the Mayor; and being conceded to be a public officer, and to have acted in that capacity, the presumptions of law are, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that what he did was in the execution or performance of his duty. On these presumptions, I choose to repose, in the absence of express testimony impugning them.

Third.—It was insisted by the learned District-Attorney, that until the Mayor was finally committed upon the charge in the warrant, by the Recorder, the present writ should not legally have been issued.

This certainly differs from the practice, as I have always understood it to exist. Every part of the statute relative to habeas corpus, shows that unless in the cases from which the writ is absolutely excluded, or in relation to which the proceedings upon it are expressly limited or qualified in their scope or extent by the statute, the intention of the Legislature was to provide a speedy mode of deliverance from unjust or unlawful imprisonment. It is a very common thing to issue a writ of certiorari (which differs from a writ of habeas corpus, in not requiring the person of the party in whose favor it is issued, to be produced on the return of it) to a magistrate while proceeding with the examination, which the statute contemplates after the arrest of an accused party, and before the magistrate has finally passed upon the case—that is, before he has decided whether he would commit the party or not; and yet the regularity of the writ is invariably admitted. A certiorari issued under such circumstances would be invalid, if the present proposition is tenable. Under my present convictions I cannot recognize the correctness of the position, and cannot therefore subscribe to the views of the learned District Attorney. Other points were raised and discussed on both sides, which I do not deem it necessary to pass upon. The conclusion I have arrived at is that the Mayor must be discharged from the custody of the Sheriff, unless the District-Attorney elects to proceed with the usual examination after arrest before me. Should he not so elect, the order of discharge must be absolute. Should he so elect, the examination can proceed in the customary way. This will save all the rights of the prosecution in the premises.

When his honor had concluded reading his decision,

The District-Attorney said: I understood your honor distinctly to say that you should not regard the affidavit. I therefore stopped in my argument upon that.

Judge Russell—I said that I did not regard the affidavit, except so far as it gave color of jurisdiction.

Mr. Hall—That was a thing I was about to argue on, when your honor stopped me. The point I took was that your honor had no right to argue on the affidavit—that you could not go behind the warrant: and then I was going on to show that even if you could look at the affidavit, it was sufficient. There I was stopped by your honor stating that you would not regard the affidavit.

Judge Russell—I do not regard it, except as to say whether the Recorder had a color of jurisdiction.

Mr. Hall—I understood your Honor that you passed distinctly on the affidavit, and to say it was sufficient. In the next place, your Honor does me an injustice. I certainly never took the ground that pending the return on a warrant, there could be no habeas corpus issued.

In regard to last observation which fell from your Honor, in regard to my election to go on, I do not know that I have anything to do in the matter at all. A complaint is made before a magistrate, and my duty never attaches, except in two ways: in the first place, after an indictment, my duty is to attend on the trial; and, secondly, when notice of a habeas corpus is served on me, it is my duty to attend on the hearing, and urge the reasons why the defendant should not be discharged on habeas corpus; but when the hearing on the return is ended, I conceive I have no right, nor can I at all subscribe in any possible way to your Honor's right to jurisdiction over the subject matter. I concede that you may have a right to acquire jurisdiction of the person absolutely, or to discharge or hold him to bail, but you cannot, except by certiorari, take possession of the subject matter.

Judge Russell—I have examined the question very carefully, and I am perfectly satisfied that my course is correct. I have no doubt that on a habeas corpus, where a person is arrested on a warrant, and before examination, I have full power to direct a hearing to be had before me, as magistrate.

Mr. Hall—And thus oust the Recorder out of his jurisdiction under the warrant?

Judge Russell—Yes, Sir.

Mr. Dean—I wish to refer my learned friend to several cases in Parker's Criminal Reports, in which it has been expressly held that a habeas corpus brings up before the magistrate the whole matter. The case of The People vs. Martin is one of the cases.

Mr. Hall—Up to the time that your Honor passe on it—the habeas corpus—but no further.

Judge Russell—I have no doubt whatever that I have jurisdiction. Do you decline to elect, Mr. Hall, to go on?

Mr. Hall—Yes, Sir. My opinion is that your Honor, having decided this habeas corpus, cannot continue to have jurisdiction.

Judge Russell—Then, Mr. Sheriff, here is an order directing the discharge of Fernando Wood.

On this announcement there was some commotion in the body of the Court, and an attempt to get up a cheer, which was quickly repressed by the police.

Mr. Hall—I wish not to be misunderstood. I do not refuse to elect, but decline to elect, because I think I have no such power, nor do I believe that your Honor has the power to compel me to elect.

The following is the order made by Judge Russell, and handed to the Sheriff, together with the endorsement by the District Attorney.

BEFORE CITY JUDGE—In the matter of the Writ of Habeas Corpus issued to inquire into the cause of the imprisonment of Fernando Wood, June 18, 1857.—This cause having been brought before me to test the legality of the arrest of Fernando Wood, for whose benefit this proceeding was had, and after hearing Gilbert Dean, Esquire, counsel for Fernando Wood, and A. O. Hall, Esquire, District Attorney for the people,

Ordered, That the said Fernando Wood be discharged from the custody of the Sheriff of the City and County of New York, unless the District-Attorney elects to proceed with the usual examination after arrest before me; should he not so elect immediately, the order of discharge must be absolute: should he so elect, the examination can proceed in the customary way. A. D RUSSEL, City Judge.

Mr. Hall indorsed the order in these words:

"The District-Attorney declines to make any election, as proffered within, because he denies the right of the Judge to make any such conditional discharge, or to impose such an election upon him; and because he denies the right of the City Judge, without certiorari in aid of the habeas corpus, to go into any investigation or hearing on the merits, or by habeas corpus to change the right of this hearing from the magistrate who issued the warrant, unless by certiorari.

A. OAKLEY HALL, District-Attorney.

The order being handed to the Sheriff, the parties left Court, and Judge RUSSELL repaired to the Mayor's office.

In 15 minutes' time the notice given below was served upon the District-Attorney, to which the following answer was sent:

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK,
DISTRICT-ATTORNEY'S OFFICE, June 18, 1857.
To Hon. A. D. Russell, City Judge, Room No. 6 City Hall:

SIR: I have the honor to be in receipt of a notice in the following words:

"In the matter of the imprisonment of Fernando Wood.

Take notice, that the hearing upon the habeas corpus this day allowed by A. D. Russell, City Judge, on behalf of the above petitioner, will be heard before A. D. Russell, Esq., City Judge of the City of New-York, at room No. 6 in the City Hall, in the City of New-York, on Thursday, June 18, 1857, immediately.

Dated Judge (so in original) 18, 1857.
Yours, &c., DEAN & DONOHUE,
Attorneys for petitioner.

To A. OAKEY HALL, Esq., District-Attorney."

Upon inquiry I learn that room No. 6 City Hall is the office of the defendant in the proceedings, and the same place wherein I officially attended June 17 in a habeas corpus, and from whence an adjournment was had to the public court-room of the General Sessions.

I have not the right to dictate where your Honor may make the writ of habeas corpus returnable, nor would it become me to criticize it, if I had. But as I must decline to attend upon such notice at the place designated, justice to my official position and respect for the Judge issuing the writ demand that I should give my reasons.

I was yesterday subjected to gross personal indignity in obeying the notice on the first writ for the same place, and that after announcing my official position and claims to entrance. The indignity was inflicted by apparent officials, with full knowledge of my errand, at the very door of Room No. 6 of the City Hall.

I am informed and believe that the City Hall is still guarded by a posse of men, in such a manner that I have fears for my personal safety, particularly as being in Court when the writ was applied for, I understood counsel for the petitioner to speak of the "necessity of the Mayor's continuing within his citadel."

Nor, without sacrificing self-respect and official duty, can I attend on a hearing of a public proceeding in a private place, guarded under the authority and by the direction of the prisoner against whom I am to appear. Your obedient servant,
A. OAKEY HALL.

To Hon. A. D. RUSSELL.

This letter was ordered to be delivered to the City Judge in person. The officer who bore it to the Mayor's office was met by Judge RUSSELL in the City Hall.

The Sheriff then made the ordinary return with the copy of warrants annexed under which he held them. Judge RUSSELL then adjourned the hearing for one week as follows:

BEFORE CITY JUDGE.

In the matter of the application of Fernando Wood for a writ of habeas corpus, June 18, 1857:

The above-named Fernando Wood being brought before me on habeas corpus this day allowed, returnable before me immediately, and the hearing of this matter being adjourned until the 25th day of June, at 12 o'clock, until judgment be given upon the return, ordered that the said Fernando Wood be committed to the custody of the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, and to remain in his custody during all the time until judgment be given in the matter.

A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Duer.

Lemuel S. Slater vs. Fernando Wood—John G. Goodell vs. The Same—Wm. Pettis vs. The Same.—In these three suits, which with three others in the Supreme Court, and three others in the Common Pleas, were commenced day before yesterday by the injured Metropolitan policemen, Judge DUER granted orders of arrest, fixing the amount of bail in each at $5,000. The following is a copy of that in the first, the others being similar:

ORDER TO ARREST AND HOLD TO BAIL.

To the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York:

Samuel S. Slater versus Fernando Wood.—It appearing to me that a sufficient cause of action exists under section 179 of the code, you are required forthwith to arrest the defendant in the action, and hold him to bail in the sum of $5,000, and to return this order to Field & Sluyter, plaintiff's attorneys, at their office, No. 82 Broadway, New-York, on the 19th day of June, 1857. JOHN DUER.

Dated, June 18, 1857.

Coroner Perry made the same affidavit in each case, a copy of which will be found below. The affidavits of the other plaintiffs, is, except with regard to the nature of the injuries, like that of Mr. Slater's below. The complaint in each case enumerates the same facts.

AFFIDAVIT OF CORONER PERRY.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Frederick W. Perry, sworn, says, that he is one of the Coroners of the City and County of New-York, and that he led the party of the Metropolitan policemen, by whose aid he endeavored to arrest the defendant on the 16th day of June, 1857, under the order of arrest issued by Mr Justice Hoffman; that on his first entering the City Hall he found a large body of men calling themselves the Municipal Police, marshaled and commanded by the defendant Wood, who occupied an office in one corner of the building, and under whose orders the said municipal police acted throughout: that when he endeavored to enter the Mayor's office he was stopped until a communication was made with said Wood and orders received from him; and that whatever was done, was done by the orders or under the direction of said Wood.

And this deponent further saith, that there were several hundred of the municipal policemen ranged in the City Hall, guarding every entrance and occupying the halls and passages. And this deponent further saith was the assault upon the said Metropolitan Policemen issuing from the north doors of the City Hall and from the basement of the said building.

And this deponent further saith that he, on the morning of the 17th instant, went to the City Hall to see the said Wood in reference to the arrest of the preceding day, when he was stopped at the outer door of the Mayor's office, and told by an official of the Mayor's office that though he was Coroner he could not come in. The deponent stated that he wished to speak with the Mayor; the official replied to deponent, "I will go see him," and said to the municipal policemen, "Don't let him in till I return;" he shortly returned and asked deponent, "Do you wish to arrest the Mayor again?" This deponent answered, "He did not." The official asked again, "Upon honor?" The deponent said "Yes," and thereupon this deponent was admitted and shown into the Mayor's office, where he found the said defendant Wood; and while this deponent remained in the said office the said Wood gave frequent orders to the said municipal police. Signed, W. F. PERRY.

Sworn, June 18, 1857, before me,

The Atlantic Submarine Telegraph.

VISIT OF THE MAYOR AND CORPORATION TO THE MANUFACTORY—PROGRESS OF THE UNDERTAKING—PREPARATIONS FOR SHIPPING—THE NIAGARA TO RECEIVE HER PORTION OF THE CABLE.

From the London Times, June 5.

Yesterday afternoon the Lord Mayor, accompanied by a numerous party of the Corporation and civic officers, paid a visit to the works of Messrs. GLASS & ELLIOT, where the monster submarine cable is now rapidly advancing towards its final completion. This visit could hardly be called a public one, and it certainly was not private, for the party went in a corporation state barge, rich enough in flags and gilding to have satisfied the Queen of Sheba. Its approaching the shore at such a wild hotel-less looking spot, where whitebait was never heard of and turtle is unknown, seemed to create no small amount of sensation among the natives who dwell along the river's banks on slimy piles, in stranded boats, or long West country barges. The visit was an event in their dreary life of flood and ebb, and they testified the r interest accordingly by lounging to the doors of the various lockers in which they live, and watching the visitors come on shore. It was a feat worth seeing. Most of the gentlemen who inspected the works will agree with us this morning that GLASS & ELLIOT's yard is not a pleasant place on which to land at low water The shore is stony, and, as a general rule, unsavory in hot weather, when all the shomiuable flotsam and jetsam of the dirtiest river in Europe evaporate enough miasma to poison an alligator. As an initiatory process, all the visitors had to walk from the barge to the shore along a narrow plank, and this necessitated feats on the part of stout gentlemen which in a circus would have covered them with immortal honor. Plank-walking under such circumstances is always difficult, and when the performance has to be gone through by a portly functionary in full Court dress and cocked hat, anxious to preserve his dignity, yet afraid of losing his balance, the result has no medium, but is at once either sublime or ridiculous. During yesterday's visit there was a little of both extremes, and successive efforts gave rise to much amusement among the party, as each individual walked ashore, with more or less peril from the mud and water. The party were conducted over the works by Mr. GLASSE, and the various processes which the cable undergoes in the course of its manufacture were fully pointed out and explained. Two small iron cohorns were also fired by a spark sent through a short piece of the cable.

Since our last notice of the progress of this great undertaking, with the exception of a short interval of forty hours last Monday and Tuesday, the work has advanced incessantly day and night. The "strand," "closing," and "serving" machines, which revolve with such astounding rapidity, and whose noise can be heard even to the centre of the river, have done their work well, and spun an additional 500 miles of cable. Nearly 900 miles are now completed, and at least 1,200 would have been ready could the wiredrawers have supplied wire as fast as the machines consume it. But unfortunately, has not been the case, for the daily consumption of fine wire has been greater than all the wiredrawers of England could furnish, and the consequence is that less is ready for shipment than was wished or anticipated. The making of the two shore ends of the cable is well advanced. Those portions—namely, for 10 miles from the Newfoundland and 15 miles from the Irish shores, are being manufactured of immense strength, in order to resist the action of the waves over rocks, and dangers from vessels, anchors, &c. They are made of 12 No. 1 wires, forming a cable 1¼ inch in diameter, and weighing about 6 tons to the mile. The size of the wire used in these ends gradually diminishes as deep water is reached, so that it tapers down where it joins to the diameter of the main portion of the cable. These No. 1 wires are welded on to No. 2, which, in turn, are joined to No. 3, and so on, as shallow water and liability to accident are decreased. At these ends the gutta percha and "sewing" of greased and tarred hemp is also made proportionally thicker, to lessen the chance of accident from compression of the outside spiral iron casing.

The manufacture of the centre portion of the cable has also begun. In order to avoid risk from the first strain at starting, about five or six miles of the centre will be made of the strongest steel wire. In place of twisted strands the cable will here be bound with 8 No 13 solid wires of steel, so that this part of the telegraph will, it is asserted, bear the weight of twelve tons with safety, or nearly twice the amount of dead strain that is likely to come upon it at the outset.

The preparations for shipping the cable are nearly finished, and the operation of transferring the ponderous coils from the factory to the hold of the Agamemnon will commence on Tuesday or Wednesday next. Workmen from the dockyards are now engaged in laying down moorings for the Agamemnon, which will arrive off GLASSE & ELLIOT's to-morrow (Saturday) morning. No less than ten anchors have been fixed to secure her from motion while this important work is going forward. From the factory to this side of the ship ten barges will be moored stern and stern, and along these the cable will be slowly wound by a twelve horse power engine. It will be stowed away in the hold in one tremendous coil 45 feet in diameter and nearly 12 feet high. No vessel better suited than the Agamemnon for this purpose could be found in the Navy.

There is not the least ground for the reports that the United States frigate Niagara is not to take the other half of the cable, manufactured by NEWALL at Birkenhead. At first there were some doubts as to whether it was worth while to make certain alterations in the vessel, which were necessary in order to avoid risk in paying out the coil But this question has been definitively decided, and either last night or this morning the Niagara quitted the Thames for Portsmouth Dock-yard, where some of her stanchions will be taken out, and her fine warderoom not a little disfigured to accommodate her long passenger. This vessel is undoubtedly not so well suited for the work as the Agamemnon, and on board of her the cable will have to be piled in two or three coils, fore and aft, an arrangement which would have been better avoided, if it were possible. Both at Birkenhead and at East Greenwich the manufacture of the cable at one end will be continued, while the other end is being shipped. In fact, both firms will work up to the last moment, in order that in paying out across the Atlantic a liberal allowance may be made for slack without fear of running short. The Susquehanna will accompany the Niagara, and we believe the Leopard goes with the Agamemnon. All the vessels will rendezvous at Cork harbor, when the final arrangements will be made as to starting. The Cyclops is now out in the Atlantic taking soundings along the proposed deep-sea route.

At Rosas, GLASSE & ELLIOT's yard a fine submarine cable is being made for the Norwegian Government. This is, as far as we are aware, probably the first electric telegraph which has ever been used for fishing purposes. During the fishing season the shoals of herrings enter the fiords of Norway at most unexpected intervals, and at places where often not more than one or two fishing-boats are to be found. Before the boats from the surrounding bays and fiords can be summoned to the spoil, the herrings have generally spawned, and are away to sea again. To prevent these repeated disappointments and losses to the fishermen, the Norwegian Government is about to lay a submarine cable along some fifty miles of the coast most frequented by the shoals, with land stations at short distances, communicating with the fishing villages. The instant the shoal is seen in the offing, therefore, (and it can always be known at a distance by the whales which surround it,) a message will be sent along the coast telling each village the fiord or bay which it has entered. Alas for the poor herrings! What will become of them now that science enters the deep against them, and their enemy lurks in their watery home? They may elude whales and fishing-boats, defy tides, winds and waves, but what can they do against the electric current? They will splash heedlessly over the queer looking rope on the bottom, without thinking that it is telling their numbers and the way they have taken, and guiding their pursuers to the destruction of them all.

A small "sub mud" cable, to be used in communicating with the workmen engaged in clearing the mouth of the Danuba, is also in course of manufacture at GLASSE & ELLIOTT's. It will be regarded with interest, as the material embodiment of the Paris protocols.

From the London Times, June 5.

The arrangements for shipping the Transatlantic electric cable have at length been concluded, according to the original plan entered into by the British and American Governments. The Agamemnon is to leave her moorings at Greenhithe this morning, at 9½ o'clock, and will proceed to the basin prepared for her reception off East Greenwich, Commodore SHEPHERD, Superintendent of Woolwich Dockyard, having been directed to dispatch a party of riggers to give the requisite assistance on her arrival. Mr. MCDONALD, Master-Attendant at Woolwich, accompanied by Mr. JONES and a party of between forty and fifty seamen riggers, will be in attendance at Greenwich, to make fast the lashings and lay the vessel to her destined moorings. A telegraphic order was dispatched to Davenport on Wednesday evening, to arrest the proceedings commenced on board the St. Jean d'Acre, a compact having been concluded for adapting the United States' ship Niagara so as to receive the Liverpool portion of the wire, it having been considered that sufficient time will yet elapse for that purpose, the period of paying out the cable being the month of August next.

The Central American Treaties.

THE CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY THROWN OVERBOARD BY LORD PALMERSTON—OPPOSITION TO THE MONROE DOCTRINE—IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS.

From the London Post, (Ministerial)

The language of diplomacy is usually technical and sometimes obscure; but we must confess that we are at a loss to discover why either technicality or obscurity should be imported into those Parliamentary explanations and discussions which everybody knows are provoked for the sole purpose of enlightening the public with respect to the progress and results of negotiations in which the country is interested. At the present time and for some years past the condition of the Central American Republics is a matter which has excited deep and anxious attention, both in England and in the United States of America. The most refined arts of diplomacy have been exercised, first for the purpose of securing the nantrality of the important line of railroad which traverse the Isthmus of Panama; secondly, for the purpose of defining the political status of the Mosquito Indians; and thirdly, for the purpose of equally binding all powerful maritime nations by mutual obligations from the acquisition of territory the possession of which would give to one the virtual command of the most important geographical and military position in the world. It now appears that the whole web of this curious diplomacy has been unraveled, and that it is doubtful whether the Bulwer-Clayton Convention can be reckoned amongst existing things any more than the recently repudiated Clarendon Dallas Treaty. Last night Mr. DISRAELI very properly put a question to the noble lord at the head of the Government respecting the latter treaty, and in reply he received an explanation, which would no doubt be perfectly satisfactory if the public could carry in their recollection the history of these negotiations with which the right hon. gentleman and the noble lord are, of course familiar. Every question connected with Central America has, at the present moment, unusual gravity and importance, because it is a matter of notoriety that the Government of the United States is about to undertake belligerent operations against the Republic of New-Granada,—not without apparently sufficient provocation—and that an English squadron has been ordered to assemble on both sides of the Isthmus to watch the proceedings of our American brethren. The brief discussion of last night, if not technical, was abundantly obscure; but this obscurity can be easily removed by a short statement of the reasons which have led her Majesty's Government to the rejection of the Clarendon Dallas Treaty. The occupation by England of the Bay Islands, off the coast of Honduras, was considered by the United States Government to be inconsistent with the letter and spirit of the Bulwer-Clayton Convention. To remedy this difficulty, in the Autumn of last year a convention was concluded between Great Britain and the Republic of Honduras, which provided that the former should cede to the latter Ruatan and the other Islands of the Bay group. This cession was not made unconditionally; for after provisions securing the rights of British subjects who had settled upon the Islands, and providing for their future government as "a free territory," the convention contained an engagement on the part of Honduras not "to cede the islands, or any of them, or the right of sovereignty over such islands, to any nation or State whatever." It further recited that "whereas Slavery has not existed in the said Islands, the Republic of Honduras engages that Slavery shall not at any time hereafter be permitted to exist therein" This last engagement, as between Great Britain and Honduras, can only be considered as the assertion by the former of a policy which she has honorably and consistently pursued. The Clarendon-Dallas Treaty subsequently negotiated contained an express reference to the Honduras Convention, and one of its separate articles bound the two contracting parties—Great Britain and the United States—to recognize and respect in all future time "the independence and rights of the said free territory of the Bay Islands as part of the Republic of Honduras." The Senate of the United States, which possesses the power of accepting or rejecting treaties, thought proper to introduce words which provided that the two Governments might recognize the sovereignty of the Bay Islands without being bound by the provisions of the convention of last Autumn. Upon this assumption the cession of the islands by England would have been unconditional, and Honduras might at any moment have handed them over to the United States, and made them not "a free" but a "Slave Territory"—an additional nucleus of that system of Slavery which either by filibusterism or other means some portion of the United States people wish to see extended throughout the regions of Central America. With the "dread" President, which the decision in the case of DRED SCOTT supplies, the British Cabinet has, beyond question, acted wisely and well by having refused to sanction a course which would have played directly into the hands of the slave-holding planters of the South. The treaty has been rejected upon the technical ground that, having been formally couctuded, the alterations proposed by the Senate could not be sanctioned by her Majesty. Under these circumstances, negotiations are still in progress, and no one can doubt that their conduct in the hands of Lord NAPIER, whose popularity has already obliterated every recollection of the enlistment dispute, will lead to a result equally honorable and satisfactory to both parties—to England as to the United States. The Queen, as the Sovereign of the magnificent province of Canada, is the second Power on the continent of North America, and in that capacity she has an undoubted right to oppose, not only every possible enforcement of the Monroe doctrine, but that gradual extension of the curse of Slavery which appears to be the suicidal and insane policy of a considerable portion of the American people. The loss of the Bulwer-Clayton Convention, of the Honduras Convention, and of the Clarendon-Dallas Treaty, will be amply compensated if England should now have the happiness to save Central America from the infliction of that domestic institution, equally abhorrent to the laws of God and man, which is the plague spot—the damnosa hereditas—of the people of the United States.

THE TREATY FOR THE CESSION OF THE BAY ISLANDS NOT RATIFIED BY HONDURAS—THE HONDURAS INTEROCEANIC RAILWAY.

From the London News, June 1.

We understand that since the speech of Lord PALMERSTON in the House of Commons on Friday night, in answer to Mr. DISRAELI's question relative to this subject, intelligence has been received in London of the ratification, by the Honduras Government, of the treaty of commerce and friendship between that Republic and Great Britain; as also of the ratification of the "additional article," providing for the neutrality of the Interoceanic Railway, that is to traverse the state of Honduras from Porto Cabellos, on the Atlantic, to the Fonseca, on the Pacific. It is added that the Convention, which was signed at the same time as the foregoing treaty, last Autumn, in London, by Lord CLARENDON and Señor HERRAN, the Honduras Plenipotentiary accredited to England and France, and which provides for the cession of the Bay Islands and the arrangements respecting the Mosquito Territory, has not been ratified by Honduras, for what reasons has not yet been communicated to the representatives of Europe. Señor HERRAN, who resides in Paris, has received the assurance of Count WALEWSKI that the French Government is ready to ratify a treaty in every respect similar to that just completed between Great Britain and Hondnras, including the "additional article" securing the independence of the Interoceanic Railway. On the surveys of this line a large staff of engineers has for some time been engaged, having been accompanied from New-York by Señor ALVARADO, the Honduras Minister at Washington, where he likewise signed a treaty with the Government of the United States, identical with that already referred to as between Great Britain and Honduras, and embracing the "additional article," which makes the Honduras Railroad an unimpeded highway for the common use, on equal terms, of the citizens of all states alike.

The Hispano-Mexican Dispute.

UNPROMISING ASPECT OF NEGOTIATIONS—PRESENT CONDITION OF THE DISPUTE—APPREHENSIONS OF HOSTILITIES—THE SANTA ANNA MOVEMENT.

Madrid (May 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

The hopes of an amicable and speedy adjustment of the quarrel between Spain and Mexico, which were founded on the arrival at Madrid of Señor LAFRAGUA, the authorized negotiator on behalf of the country last named, have not as yet advanced much towards a realization, and, upon the whole, I fear the state of the affair cannot be considered satisfactory. Little or nothing of what has passed between Señor LAFRAGUA and Señor PIDAL has come to the knowledge of the Madrid public, but a portion of the press, and especially the Espana newspaper, has made itself remarkable by its unfriendly insinuadoes and exaggerated pretensions, calculated to envenom the question and increase its difficulty of settlement. The motives of these journals for adopting this unusual, uncalled for, and unpatriotic course—unpatriotic because it tends to and provokes a war with Mexico, from which Spain could derive no possible benefit worth the naming, while such a conflict would assuredly expose her to great risk and loss—may easily be conjectured; but it is more interesting and important to remark that the Ministerial papers have taken exceedingly little trouble to countaract the effects of perfidious insinuations and exaggerated estimates of the satisfaction due from Mexico to Spain.

I am enabled to give you, in a brief compass, an exact sketch of the present etete of the Hispano-Mexican question, as it stande up to this very morning. In the first place, it is much to be regretted that Señor LAFRAGUA did not think it in accordance with his instructions to come at once to Madrid instead of lingering in Paris. It is possible, and even probable, that the difficulty might then have been settled long before the meeting of the Cortes. Now the feeling in both Chambers is such as to render its pacific arrangement much more doubtful. And, besides this, the progress made by the negotiators—as I presume we may term them, although the Mexican Envoy be not officially received—Señor LAFRAGUA and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, has been hitherto extremely slow. The English and French Ministers here have spared no effort to remove difficulties, smooth away asperities, and inspire both parties with mutual confidence; but hitherto very little progress has been made towards a solution of the question.

The Spanish Government demands, certainly not without reason, the signal punishment of the robbers and assassins of Cuernavaca. The Mexican negotiator, it is said, pledges himself that all shall be done that it is possible to do. Where the Spanish Government shows itself unreasonable is in refusing to renew diplomatic relations until the punishment shall have been actually inflicted. Spain is of those whose sufferings do not teach them mercy. She should remember the forbearance that has so frequently, within the last 20 years, been shown to her, feeble and distracted. How often, within that period, have her promises to do her best been accepted as current coin? How often have internal circumstances and political convulsions been pleaded by her to other Powers as argumenta ad misericordiam? How often has her weakness proved her strength in the case of just claims brought against her, and which she was unable to meet? She should not forget this when dealing with Mexico.

A troublesome question, and one which may very probably ultimately break off the negotiations, is that of the execution of the treaty for the payment of Spanish claims. Spain has, on her side, the plausible, perhaps the rightful argument, that as the treaty was signed so must it be executed. Shylock demands his pound of flesh, and will have all that is set down in the bond. Mexico declares her readiness to execute the treaty, but adds, through Señor LAFRAGUA, the expression of her conviction that Spain cannot desire to insist upon its manifestly fraudulent part. Two-thirds of the claims are admitted as good, and she proffers immediate payment, but she asks for a revision of the other third. Spain, perfectly aware that some of the bonds are fraudulent, but knowing also that they belong to Spaniards, (some of them wealthy and of high degree,) refuses, and probably will persist in refusing, the revision, which, in common fairness, she ought not to deny. It is by some of these claimants that a portion of the Madrid press is said to be influenced. Be that as it may, there seems a strong feeling abroad against making any kind of concession to Mexico, and the Spanish Government (even if it be well disposed to an arrangement) is not strong, and hesitates to set this feeling at defiance. But there is another (more real and a greater) obstacle to the peacemaker. It is the conviction that, should things come to the worst, England and France will step in at the eleventh hour, cover Spain with their ægis, and oppose, in pursuance of their own necessary policy, any encroachment of the United States on Spanish possessions. The Spanish Government seems safe, and their reliance may lead it to folly and grief.

At the moment the negotiations are suspended until the arrival of the Mexican mail, due at Southampton on June 1 If it brings authentic intelligence of chastisement inflicted on the delinquents, this will give a favorable impulse to the ulterior march of the question; but if the expected news be within the mark, and less than the requirements of the Spanish Cabinet, it is not improbable that Señor LAFRAGUA, unless Lord HOWDEN and M. TURGOT are able to detain him, will leave Madrid on account of the refusal of this Government to recognize him officially. In this case hostilities may be expected.

There is a rather widely-spread belief here propagated by Señor SORELA, the late chargé d'affaires in Mexico, that a hostile movement from Cuba would produce a revolutionary one in favor of SANTA ANNA, said to be entirely favorable to the Spanish cause. I have strong reason to think that the Spanish Government reckons upon this, losing sight of the probability that there might occur a simultaneous and antagonistic movement in a country adjoining Mexico, a movement which would find great support, and which would be hailed, from the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi, with joyous and exulting acclamations.

It is to be feared that the Mexican question presents very serious difficulties, and is by no means so near to its settlement as some have recently supposed.

The New Expedition in Search of Sir John Franklin.

The following letter from Captain M'CLINTOCK has been received by Mr. S. R. GRAVES, the Coalman of the Liverpool Shipowners' Association:

UNITAN SERVICE CLUB, Pall mall, May 13.

DEAR SIR: I take the liberty of addressing you the more freely, perhaps, because by your letter you seem to feel considerable interest in the object of my voyage. I regret much that I cannot visit Liverpool now as all the work is thrown upon my hands. In this note I simply purpose to offer you my best thanks for your cordial offer of assistance, and also to afford you a few details of my plan, and the means placed at my disposal for carrying it out.

As you may not have a convenient pocket map at hand for reference, I send you Lady FRANKLIN'S pamphlet, which contains one. Upon it you will see marked out the area to be searched. All the other lands laid down have been searched.

I intend to sail about the end of June, from Aberdeen, and proceed to Barrow Strait,—ascertain that the provisions, stores, and boats left at Fort Leopold and Beeching Island by the recent searching expeditions are in good order, in the event of my having to fall back upon them,—examine the state of the ice in Peel Strait, and, if practicable, proceed down it into the unknown area.

Should I not succeed here, I intend to return to Port Leopold, and proceed down Prince Regent's Inlet to Bellot Strait, and there make another attempt to pass into and through the field of search to Victoria Land, where I shall Winter, and in the ensuing Spring, before the thaw sets in, complete the entire exploration, and search by means of sledges drawn by men and by dogs.

In endeavoring to reach Victoria Land, it is my intention to avoin, if possible, any risk of becoming involved in the ice; and, should I not succeed in reaching Victoria Land, I will return to Bellot Strait to pass the Winter, as we know by experience that the retreat of the ship from there amounts almost to a certainty. From Victoria Land the homeward voyage is equally certain, but by way of Behring's Strait.

The means of accomplishing Lady FRANKLIN'S object, the completion of the search, and now placed at my disposal, are ample. The vessel is a three masted screw schooner yacht, with fore topsail and topgallant sail; the topsail reefs from the deck; she is decidedly a clipper—diagonally built, 132 feet long over all, 320 tons builder's measurement, with a light draught of water; trunk engines, of 30-horse power; crew numbering 30 individuals, including an Esquimaux interpreter.

Almost all will be old shipmates of my own in former Arctic voyages; they shall be fed and clothed as in the Government expeditions, and receive double pay. I, therefore, anticipate no difficulty in keeping up precisely the same discipline as that which we found to answer so well in the three Arctic expeditions in which I have served. The vessel is now in the hands of Messrs. HALL, Aberdeen, for the purpose of being fortified, by means of doubling, extra holdbeams, stringers, &c., to enable her to withstand icepressure; and upwards of 100 men are at work upon her. All Arctic men agree in pronouncing her to be the best adapted vessel ever selected for Arctic service. From her sharp midship section she will rise to ice pressure which would crush in the sides of a wall-sided vessel. Her speed, under steam, when deep, is expected to be six knots.

She will carry five weeks' fuel for full speed, and two and a half years' provisions—being enough to last us for a second Winter, should we unavoidably be detained. I believe I have nothing more to add, except to say that the volunteer offers of service from officers, seamen, and landsmen, are very numerous; and as I have already secured the very best of material, so I hope, also, to be fortunate with the personnel of the expedition.

Thus, having all the means, I gladly accept the responsibility; and no efforts upon my part shall be wanting to secure the accomplishment of an object so earnestly desired by the great and good of all nations.

Believe me to be, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

F. L. M'CLINTOCK.

To S. R. GRAVES, Esq., No. 9 Baltic-buildings, Redcross-street, Liverpool."

Walker's Visit to Washington.

Correspondence of the Richmond South.

The former President of Nicaragua, General WALKER, arrived here to-day, accompanied by Colonels LOCKRIDGE and WURTS, and took rooms at BROWN'S. There was no public demonstration whatever, or even any evidence of curiosity to see the famous filibuster, who entered the city and drove up to his hotel in the quietest manner possible. There were a few calls, yesterday, at the hotel, by private friends, to see the General; but his rooms were strictly closed to all visitors, while he remained in secret session with a few of his Nicaraguan associates, among them Gen. HORNSBY, who has been awaiting him here for some time past. Captain FAYSOUX is also here with WALKER, but I understand that he will leave for Philadelphia to-morrow. I had the pleasure of seeing and conversing for a few minutes with Gen. WALKER, and of remarking how unchanged he was in his personal appearance, except from the loss of flesh. He seemed to be in excellent health, and very cheerful; in fact, he is never known to exhibit anything like despondency, and he has worn the same peculiar smile of indifference to fortune whenever I have seen him. He conversed about commonplaces, and I did not address him any question as to his mission to Washington, as I well knew it would be useless to attempt to draw any information from him on that subject. All reports of his intentions here are the merest guess work, as he has never communicated them, even to any of the officers in his suite, who satisfy themselves that "nobody will ever know what General WALKER is going to do, until the time comes." The reporters, who are besieging the General at all hours of the day, will find their inquisition into his affairs a very profitless one. The most they will probably extract from him will be that drawling, unmeaning monosyllable of his, "Yes es," pronounced in a tone of the most melancholy stupidity, to everything they can say. The republican simplicity with which the General receives his visitors here is not a little curious. He has no reception room whatever, but occupies for all purposes one of the most unpretending rooms in the hotel; and as he keeps no servant, he answers the door himself. The visitor follows his card up two or three flights of stairs, to the door of one of the commonly furnished rooms; he knocks and the door is opened by a little plebian-looking man, who looks slowly at him very much in the manner, it must be confessed, of a gentleman usher into the august presence. That man is General WALKER himself, and the visitor finds himself thus face to face with the most remarkable man of the age.

The Minnesota has been ordered to sail on the 25th inst., for China. The Waterwitch arrived at Washington on Friday, with the crew and guns for the Plymouth.

BURDELL ESTATE.

Close of the Testimony—Evidence offered to Impeach the Testimony of several Witnesses—Mrs. Crane's step son and husband's nephew called to impeach her—The Final Arguments of Counsel not to be made till the Decision of the Surrogate upon the application for a Commission to examine Wm. C. Hyde, of California.

SURROGATE'S COURT.—THURSDAY, JUNE 18.

The examination in the matter of the Burdell estate was resumed before the Surrogate at 10 o'clock A. M.

RECORDER SMITH'S TESTIMONY.

Recorder Smith, called by the contestants, was then sworn, and testified as follows: I was present for a short time during the examination of witnesses before the Coroner's inquest. The Coroner requested me to assist him; I conducted the examination of Miss Augusta Cunningham.

Q.—Will you state the manner and appearance of Miss Augusta as to self possession while testifying before the Coroner?

Mr. Clinton objected to the question.

The Surrogate ruled that the question was admissible.

A.—She testified with great deliberation; I did not observe in her manner anything like excitement.

Q.—Did you observe her at any time to smile or laugh?

Objected to by the counsel for the claimant.

The Surrogate decided that the question was admissible.

A.—I remember her doing so upon one occasion.

Q.—How was it when she was interrogated, did she answer slowly or rapidly? A.—She answered with great deliberation; at times there was such an interval elapsed after the question was put before she could answer, that I repeated the question.

Cross-Examination—I think it was on Saturday she gave her testimony; as far as my connection with her examination was concerned, it ended on that day; I remember an officer arriving on that day with a habeas corpus first for Mrs. C., and subsequently for the two daughters; at the time I was consulted upon the subject, it was when the habeas corpus came for the daughters; the examination of Miss Augusta occupied, I should think, two or three hours; there was a very large crowd there, and the excitement was very great; I do not think my eyes were off from the young lady from the time I commenced the examination till I closed it; I recollect that I was very mild in my manner in examining her.

EZRA BLISS' TESTIMONY.

Ezra Bliss was then called by the claimant and testified as follows: Resids at West Twenty-seventh-street; am a nots and bill broker; was at No. 31 Bond-street twice at the inquest, on the first Sunday, and on the Monday or Tuesday following; saw Rev. Mr. Marvine and several gentlemen in conversation with him; saw a person who was a stranger to me; asked Mr Marvine if he thought the Doctor was the man he married; he said that there were strong points of resemblance between him and the man he married; he was in the front parlor or in the hall; there were several persons standing around, among others a policeman who has testified here.

Cross-examination—This was between two and three o'clock in the afternoon; this conversation was after Mr. Marvine had been examined; the other persons present were strangers to me; Mr. Marvine said he thought that the whiskers on the man he married were a little heavier than on the Doctor; the conversation lasted about five minutes; have seen Mr. Marvine since than when he was under his examination here; had a conversation with Mrs. C. some time since at the Tombs; she did not send for me; I went there mainly from curiosity; had no conversation with her about the incident; communicated it to Mr. Clinton about ten minutes since.

JOHN CONNERY RECALLED.

John Connery was recalled by counsel for contestants.

Mr. Clinton asked what the counsel desired to prove by the witness.

Mr. Tilden said that he wished to show by this witness that Mrs. Cunningham declined, at the beginning of the inquest, to state what her name was, until she had the advice of counsel, and she said that she had not communicated the secret of her marriage to any body, even to her children.

After a spirited discussion between Mr. Clinton and Mr. Tilden, as to the introduction of testimony upon the point in question, the Surrogate decided that the evidence was inadmissible.

The witness then retired from the stand.

GEORGE W. PARSONS' TESTIMONY.

Mr. George W. Parsons, called by counsel for contestants, was sworn, and testified as follows: Am a lawyer; was originally one of the attorneys in the cause of Warner vs. Griffin; was in the United States Circuit Court on the 27th of October last; the panel of Jurors was called by the Clerk, to see who would answer; know Judge Dean, and did not see him there that day; Mr. Barnard was the counsel for the plaintiffs; I appeared to attend the cause in consequence of the absence of Mr. Barnard; it was disposed of on that morning, upon my motion, till the following day; am somewhat acquainted with the practice of that Court; did not see Dr. Burdell in Court when the cause was called; I knew him very well.

MR. STILWELL RECALLED.

Mr. Stilwell, recalled by counsel for contestants, testified that the Court opened at 11 o'clock, A. M. on Monday, the 27th; there were two panels of Jurors called; on the first day of each term there is always more or less delay in the business; the Court took up the calendar about twelve o'clock.

Cross-examination—The term commenced on the third Monday of October; the calendar was not then called; Judge Betts presided, and he said that Judge Nelson would not be in town till the following Monday, and the Court was then adjourned.

MR JOHN W. CRANE'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. John W. Crane, called by counsel for claimant, testified as follows: Am a step-son of the Mrs. Crane who was called as a witness in this suit; am a dentist by profession; the reputation of Mrs Crane is very bad—would not believe her under oath.

Cross-examination—Am her step-son; there is difficulty between her and her husband; my father has no more animosity against her than she has against him; I live with my father when he is at home, but he is now absent in Europe; in this controversy I take sides decidedly with my father; I came here of my own free will, in order that "vice might not triumph over virtue."

Q.—What do you mean by that? A.—I know she is a very bad woman, and would swear to anything; the evidence given by her I consider to be on the side of vice.

To Mr. Clinton—My feeling against her is because of her actions, her past life, and the treatment of my father.

To Mr. Tilden—A divorce suit between her and my father is still pending.

Question by Mr. Clinton—Was it commenced because she was living in open adultery?

DR. PUTNAM'S TESTIMONY.

Dr. Clark S. Putnam was called, and testified as follows: Live at No. 35 Bond-street; was a witness subpœnaed in the Griffin and Warner suit; was in the United States Circuit Court on the 28th of October, as a witness in that Court; I think Dr. Burdell was in Court that day, but could not say positively; I saw Dr. Burdell cross Bond-street from his house, in company with Mr. Lane, to Dr. Main's, on Monday, the 27th.

Cross examined—I was a witness for the plaintiff; I saw Mr. Lane with Mr. Keyser when we first commenced getting up testimony some month or two previous to the trial; saw him attending Court; read Mr. Lane's testimony this morning; did not refresh my mind by reading it; did not communicate to any one before that, that I saw Dr. Burdell cross the street; I attended the Court the next day after I was notified and found that another cause was pending; I was only in attendance upon the Court on the 28th; was not there the day previous or the day after; Mr. Keyser came down to the Court on Monday, and finding that the case would not come on that day, he he sent around Monday evening and notified the witnesses to attend on Tuesday.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE W. HILTON.

George W Hilton was called by counsel for contestants, and testified as follows:—Reside in Buffalo: have been Judge of the Superior Court there and also Recorder; have known Mr. David M. Grant as resident of Buffalo for about 14 years; know him as a clerk previous to his going into business; never heard anything said against his truth and veracity.

Cross-examination—My acquaintance with him has been of a business character; he kept a carpet and furnishing store; must have known him from 1845; think he has resided there all the time; never heard of any criminal warrants out against him for false pretences; do not know what he has been doing for the last year or two, but I suppose he has been there and that he had a store there in what is called the Granite Block, below the American; have not had any dealings with him for 6 or 8 years.

Q.—Have you ever heard of any patent frauds of his in Buffalo?

Objected to by Mr. Edwards.

To Mr. Edwards—Never heard anything of a criminal character against him.

DR. CRANE'S TESTIMONY.

Dr. Henry Crane was sworn, and testified—Reside at No. 103 West 43d street; am a dentist by profession; know Mrs. Mary W. Crane; her general character is bad; I would not believe her under oath.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Am a nephew of Mrs. Crane's husband; have taken no side in the controversy between them; am intimate with Mr. Crane, and have been for a number of years.

FREDERICK SCRIBA'S TESTIMONY.

Frederick Scriba, called by counsel for contestants, was now sworn and testified: I reside at Newark, and am cashier for Doremus, Nixon & Co., of this City; have known David M. Grant since the Winter of 1849 and 1850; upon inquiry then I found his character to be good; have had business and friendly relations with him since; his reputation for truth and veracity a good; I would believe him under oath.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Know the firm of Haggerty & Co.; I never heard of Grant defrauding them; since '49 or '50 do not know that I have heard his character discussed except by members of our house; have had friendly personal relations with him, but have not had social relations with him, such as the interchange of visits of our respective families; never called upon him socially; it devolved upon me to ascertain his credit; we had dealings with him up to 1855; have seen Mr. Grant within the last year.

Q.—Has Mr. Grant made an assignment to your firm?

Question objected to by Mr. Edwards, and ruled out by the Surrogate.

To Mr. Clinton—Never heard of any frauds of his; have seen him at General Hall's; never heard of his defrauding any man at No. 8 West-street.

This case was here closed on the part of the claimant.

RICHARD S. ROBERTS' TESTIMONY.

Richard S. Roberts was called by counsel for contestant, and testified as follows: Reside at Clinton-avenue, Brooklyn; know Stephen Knowlton; would not believe him under oath where his interests were affected.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

There was a difficulty with Mr. Knowlton; I have written anonymous letters to Mr. Knowlton; consider it manly to write such letters; am not ashamed to put my name usually to my letters; was not ashamed or afraid to put my name to the anonymous letter I sent to to Mr. Knowlton; the difficulty with him was in a church matter; my place of business is at No. 51 Maiden-lane, and am an importer of hat trimmings; I have never known of more than one difficulty with Mr. Knowlton; the opinion I have stated was based upon this difficulty; have heard a great deal about his character in connection with that and other matters; have heard others besides Mr. Eastman who have spoken unfavorably of Mr. Knowlton's character; aside from the church matter I could not mention any other person but Mr. Eastman, who has spoken unfavorably of Mr. Knowlton; don't know how many anonymous letters I have written to him; am a member of Clinton Avenue Congregational Church: don't think I wrote more than one anonymous letter; possibly I might have written two; don't know what fictitious signature I put to this letter.

Mr. Clinton handed up Mr. Knowlton's scrap book, and asked him to identify the letter which he wrote, which the witness did.

I consider it Christian to call a man a "head devil;" my private opinion is that Mr. Knowlton is; I could give my reasons for it; do not profess to be a perfect man.

Q.—Is it your habit to write anonymous letters? A.—It is not; don't recollect of writing any other anonymous letters besides this; I have no hostile feelings towards Mr. Knowlton, nor any desire to blacken his character.

DANIEL P. BARNARD'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. Barnard was sworn by the counsel for contestants, and testified as follows: Am a counselor-at-law, residing at Brooklyn; was counsel for the plaintiff in the case of Griffin and Warner; was in the United States Circuit Court on Tuesday, 28th of October; the case was called for trial; I answered "ready" for the plaintiffs; a gentleman on behalf of the defendants answered he was not ready, as he desired to procure Judge Dean to try the case, and that the Judge had not come in or down town, and he had not been able to see him; it was then put off till the next morning, Wednesday; I attended on that morning and met Judge Dean; a case which had the preference came on, the Sickles case, and when I ascertained that my case was not likely to come on, I then left with Judge Dean; the Judge stated that he had just come into the case and he wanted to look into the case and prepare for it; did not see the Judge on Tuesday; this cause came on finally for trial on the 10th of November; on Tuesday evening Judge Nelson said that the case was set down and ought to come on; but on account of the death of Mr. Kirkland, one of the attorneys, it was postponed.

To Judge Dean—Wednesday morning the Sickles cause had the preference; Tuesday morning I answered ready, but the defendant was not ready; was never in Court when you asked time to prepare for defence; was not in Court the 27th; was not aware that the case had been set down for that day; did know Dr. Burdell before the trial; I only know from my notes that Dr. Burdell was in Court as a witness.

JAMES F. HALL'S TESTIMONY.

James F. Hall was called by counsel for contestants, and testified as follows: Am a member of the firm of William Hall & Co.; have known David M. Grant for eight years; have seen him often here and in Buffalo; he had his letters directed to our care; he was a boatman, rowing about the Quarantine anchorage, which was frequently done.

The Recorder denied the motion, stating it was a question of fact for the Jury to decide.

Mr. Van Buren then addressed the Jury, on behalf of the prisoner, and was followed by District-Attorney Hall, for the prosecution.

The Recorder charged the Jury that the vessel Benjamin Adams was in a condition that would subject the defendant to all the penalties (if the evidence showed that he had violated the law) which the act imposes. Also, that under the first count of the indictment, which charged him with inveding the quarantine anchorage without permission of the Health Officer, if they found he had so invaded the anchorage, they should find him guilty; and that under the second count they should be satisfied from the evidence that the prisoner had communicated with the vessel Benjamin Adams.

The Jury retired for an hour, and returned a verdict of guilty, under the first count, for invading the quarantine anchorage contrary to law.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—June 16.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

The four seamen, on board the General Pierce, convicted of manslaughter in killing the master of the vessel, and one of them of murder, and the others of manslaughter in killing the cook, were brought up for sentence. Mr. Nash, their counsel, moved for a new trial, on the ground that as Smith was the only one who had been convicted of murder, while the others had been acquitted of that charge, and only found guilty of manslaughter, he was entitled to a new trial, on which he could have the benefit of their evidence. The Court, however, did not consider that ground for a new trial, and proceeded to pass sentence on Smith, that on the 13th day of August next, between 8 A. M. and 2 P. M., he be hung by the neck till he be dead.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—June 17.

Before Judge Betts.

THE SLAVE-TRADE—CASE OF THE MERCHANT.

The case of the schooner Merchant, seized as forfeited for being fitted out for the slave-trade, was called again upon the calendar to-day. The claimants were ready, but the prosecution was not ready—their witnesses being absent. Judge Betts said his rules about calendar causes must be enforced as well against the United States as any other party, and the claimants might call on the cause. Mr. Joachimsen, however, moved for an attachment against some of his witnesses, returnable to-morrow morning, and the case was finally laid over till that time, then to to proceed peremptorily.

COURT CALENDAR—Friday, June 19.

Superior Court.—Nos. 602, 623, 351, 352, 443, 8, 9, 97, 1622, 716, 717, 553, 229, 603, 590, 369, 553, 701, 168, 674, 722, 723, 725, 730, 731, 735, 736, 737, 739, 740.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary	12	12	12	12
Middling	14	14	14⅛	14⅛
Good Middling	14¼	14⅜	14⅜	14⅜
Middling Fair	14¾	14⅞	15	15⅛
Fair	15	15⅜	15⅜	15⅜

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is generally more freely offered, and is in rather slack request at lower and irregular prices. Sales, 6 500 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$5 00@$6 15
Straight State	6 15@ 6 30
Extra State	6 30@ 6 50
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 15@ 6 45
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 30@ 6 50
Fancy Michigan	6 40@ 6 55
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 60@ 8 40
Extra Ohio	7 75@ 9 00
Fancy Genesee	7 10@ 7 25
Extra Genesee	7 50@10 00
Extra Missouri	8 00@10 50

Canadian is still heavy and cheaper. Sales have been reported of about 700 bbls., in lots, at from $6 25@$9 for superfine to very choice extra ₩ bbl. Southern continues in slack request, at declining prices. The transactions since our last comprise about 1,000 bbls. low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 20@$9 75 ₩ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and needed, at $4 25@$6 50 for Fine to Superfine ₩ bbl. Corn Meal is dull and heavy, at $4 for Jersey, and $4 20@$4 35 for Brandywine, ₩ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat is plenty and less valuable, with a livelier inquiry for it, from millers and shippers. Sales 26,300 bushels, including ordinary to fair Western Red, at $1 46@$1 52½; and choice Southern White, at $1 98, ₩ bushel. Rye is dull and nominal at from $1 20@$1 25 ₩ bushel. Barley and Barley Malt remain as last noticed. Oats continue quite plenty and heavy at 60c.@63c. for Western; 54c.@60c. for State; 52c.@58c for Canadian; and 50c.@56c for Jersey and Pennsylvania, ₩ bushel. Corn is sparingly sought after, and is less valuable. Sales 16,000 bushels, at 88c. for Mixed in store; 90c.@92c. for Yellow; and 91c.@94c. for White, ₩ bushel.

LEAD—Has not varied.

MOLASSES—Is quite plenty, yet it is very sparingly purchased. Porto Rico, 30c.@37½c.; Cuba Muscovado, 30c.@36c.; Clayed Cuba, 30c.; New-Orleans, in bbls., 70c. @75c. ₩ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Exhibit no important change.

OILS—The general inquiry is tame, prices of the principal kinds are nominally supported.

PROVISIONS—Pork is in slack request at drooping rates. Sales, 250 bbls., in lots, at $23 25@$23 30 for Mess; and $19 20@$19 25 for Prime ₩ bbl. Cut Meats are in limited demand, and are heavy at 11c.@11¼c. for Hams, and 10c. for Shoulders, ₩ lb. Bacon is scarce and quiet at 11¾c.@13¼c. ₩ lb. Lard is moderately inquired for, and is firm. The transactions since our last reach about 420 bbls. and tcs., mostly fair to prime, at 14¼c.@14¾c. ₩ lb. Beef is in fair request at full prices. The transactions since our last consist of 275 bbls., at $14@$15 for Country Mess; $16 50@$17 for repacked Western Mess, and $17 50@$18 for extra Western do. ₩ bbl. New Prime Mess Beef, $28@$31 ₩ tc. Beef Hams, $23@$23 25 ₩ bbl. Butter is plenty and in very moderate demand, at 15c @20c., for new Ohio; 17c.@22c. for common to very good new State, and 23c.@30c. for prime to choice do., ₩ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 8c.@10½c. ₩ lb.

RICE—Continues in moderate demand at full rates—$4 25@$5 25 for ordinary to prime, ₩ 100 lbs.

SUGARS—Are quiet. Though many holders desire to sell, they are not disposed to reduce their claims to suit buyers; hence the inactivity. The heavy stock here, however, tends to depress the market, and to defeat the efforts of factors to keep up prices.

WHISKY—There were 630 bbls. Ohio and Prison disposed of, at 33c.@33½c., mainly at 33c., ₩ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Appeared about the same. To Liverpool—Cotton, 3-32d. ₩ bale; Flour, 3s. ₩ bbl.; Grain, 2¾d @ 3½d. ₩ bushel; Beef, 60s. ₩ tierce; Resin, 5s. @7s. ₩ bbl.; and Heavy Goods, 7s 6d.@12s. 6d. ₩ ton. For other ports proportional quotations.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THOUGHTS, FEELINGS AND FANCIES.
WILEY AND HALSTED,
No. 351 Broadway, have just published

THOUGHTS, FEELINGS AND FANCIES, by Mrs. Nestell Boyer.

From the Preface.

This book is the result of a habit early adopted by its author, and long adhered to, of jotting down from time to time, as occasions served and convenience permitted, such impressions deemed worthy to be noted as occurred to him in the intervals of active professional business.

1 vol. 12mo. Fancy cloth; bevel boards; gilt top. $1 25.

II.

TUPPER'S PROVERBIAL PHILOSOPHY,
IN BLUE AND GOLD.
Complete in one neat 32mo. vol. 75 cents.

From the Albany Atlas.

No one can glance at this work without perceiving that it is produced by the inspiration of genius. It is full of glorious thoughts, each of which might be expanded into a treatise.

Laboratory, Middle Village, L. I., where every variety of beautiful designs, many of which are entirely new, will be found.
Mr. H. has no doubt his customers will be sufficiently satisfied with the quality of his works without his enumerating the number of premiums received (he has a few) at the late fairs, which has long since become almost a byword. Sufficient to say that he will challenge the world to produce any better works, and is perfectly willing, if necessary, to test the same in any way where there are impartial parties to decide. The subscriber pledges himself that everything shall be as represented. Goods delivered in any part of the City free of charge.

Office of the Eagle Fire Company,
New-York, June 18, 1857.
AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, this day, the following preamble and resolutions were passed:

Whereas, The Board of Directors has received the sad intelligence of the death of AQUILA G. STOUT, the President of this Company, who departed this life at his residence in this City, after a short illness; therefore

Resolved, That this Board have heard with deep regret of the unexpected death of their President, Mr. Stout, also for many years has acted with them in the care and management of this Company.

Resolved, That we entertain a grateful recollection of the kindness and courtesy which have marked our intercourse with Mr. Stout, since he has been the President of this Company.

Resolved, That we remember and duly appreciate the probity of his character, the clearness of mind, and prompt and active habits of business that distinguished him; that we are indebted to his zeal, intelligence and industry in resuscitating the Company after the disastrous fire of 1845, in securing public confidence in its character and resources, and promoting, during his administration of its affairs, its respectability, prosperity and success.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family of our departed friend, and sincerely condole with them on the loss of an affectionate husband and father, whom it has pleased Heaven to remove from their circle.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

At the same meeting, JAMES N. COBB, Esq., was elected President of the Company.

By order of the Board of Directors.
J. H. LEGGETT, Secretary.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The arguments of counsel before the Court of Appeals on the constitutionality of the new Police Law, were brought to a close yesterday, by Judge EDMONDS, who addressed the Court for the plaintiffs, FERNANDO WOOD, &c. Mr. EVARTS impressed upon the judges the great need, in the existing state of things, of a prompt decision on their part. It is expected that in the course of the ensuing week that decision will be rendered.

The City was entirely quiet yesterday, except within the iron railing of the City Hall Park, nor was there any great crowd there. Mayor WOOD was not taken before the Recorder, the hearing upon the habeas corpus having resulted in his discharge by Judge RUSSELL. Before he was set at liberty—it was a coup d'etat that saved his Honor—a second writ of habeas corpus was issued, which was made returnable forthwith at the Mayor's Office. Afterwards the hearing was adjourned for one week. The Mayor had an interview with the Governor during the day, of which very different versions are reported. Of the multitudinous proceedings in Court against the Mayor and rioters—of the condition of the wounded, of whom one is likely to die—of the disposition of the police, and of other matters which everybody talked about yesterday, though at their homes and at their work, and not as on Wednesday in the public places only, we give a full account this morning.

The Europa's mails, from Boston, reached this City yesterday morning. Among the extracts, which we publish elsewhere, from our foreign exchanges, will be found an interesting account of the progress of the Atlantic Telegraph enterprise. Nearly 900 miles of the cable were completed on the 4th of June, and the operation of transferring the coils to the hold of the Agamemnon, was then about being commenced. The London Times contradicts the reports that the Niagara was unfitted to receive one half of the cable manufactured at Birkenhead. On the morning of the 5th inst., the Niagara left the Thames for Portsmouth Dock-yard, where she will be arranged for the reception of the Liverpool portion of the wire.

The London Post, organ of Lord PALMERSTON, has a rather significant article on Central American affairs in which it doubts "whether the Clayton-Bulwer Convention can be reckoned among existing things any more than the recently repudiated Dallas-Clarendon Treaty." On more than one occasion the articles in the Post have foreshadowed the policy of the British Government with reference to Central American affairs, and this one, in particular, merits attention.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times, in a letter dated the 29th ult., states that the hopes of an amicable and speedy adjustment of the quarrel between Spain and Mexico, which were founded on the arrival at Madrid of Señor LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Negotiator, have not as yet advanced much towards a realization, and, upon the whole, the state of the affair cannot be considered satisfactory.

A letter from our correspondent on board the U. S. steamer San Jacinto, now at Hong-Kong, gives some interesting and important information concerning the progress of hostilities in the Celestial empire. Our correspondent's account is the more valuable as it gives an American view of the Chinese troubles, while, with the exception of those hitherto published in this journal, all other accounts are usually received through British sources, and are, naturally enough, biased in favor of British interests.

Our Albany correspondence reveals a curious condition of affairs in our State Treasury Department. The last Legislature made appropriations amounting in the aggregate to over $3,100,000, and the whole amount which the Comptroller can command is less than $1,800,000. And of this amount the greater part is not yet paid in by the County Treasurers—there being due from the County of New-York alone the sum of $500,000. The time within which the law requires returns to be made by the County Treasurers having expired, the Comptroller has directed the Attorney-General to bring suits against the delinquents. Meanwhile the State may be considered in a state of bankruptcy.

Advices have been received from Topeka, Kansas, to the 12th instant. The Free-State Legislature succeeded in obtaining a quorum on the 11th, when Governor ROBINSON sent in his message. The Legislature have resolved to complete the State organization, and will enact laws and make provisions in view of future State elections. Our dispatches are contradictory as to the whereabouts of Governor WALKER. Our correspondent says he is at Lecompton, making preparations to canvass the Territory, and another says he is at Topeka, where he has spoken twice, and is trying to defeat the action of the Free-State men. The first is undoubtedly nearest the truth.

The village of Corning, in this State, is suffering from the effects of a terrible freshet. The principal bridges have been torn away, a number of houses have been swept off, nearly all the cellars have been flooded, and communication between the upper and lower parts of the village has been entirely cut off. The destruction of property is very great, and the running of trains on the Erie Railroad has been temporarily suspended. At last accounts, however, the water had in a measure subsided, and the danger was considered past.

The deficit in the Ohio State Treasury is not far from $900,000. A report is now current at Cincinnati that, in consequence of the defalcation the July interest cannot be paid. The State officers are trying to make a loan, but their power to do so is doubted. The Legislature will be called together to overcome the difficulty.

An emigrant train has been attacked by the Cheyenne Indians, about 80 miles West of Fort Riley, and entirely destroyed. Six persons were killed and four wounded.

THEODORE MARINUS VAN LIMBURG was on Wednesday introduced to the President, and presented his credentials as Minister Resident of His Majesty the King of the Netherlands. The usual formal speeches were made on the occasion.

The Mansion House and two adjoining buildings, at Cape Island, N. J., were totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. No damage was done to the other hotels.

In the Board of Aldermen, last evening, a resolution was adopted, directing the Counsel to the Corporation to conduct the defence of all suits brought against members of the Board of Aldermen or Councilmen, brought in consequence of any action taken in the appointment of CHARLES DEVLIN, Street Commissioner. They also resolved to sustain the Mayor by all legal means, and to meet daily until the excitement shall have died away.

The National Guard left Boston last evening, at 7 o'clock, by the Stonington train, where they were to embark on board the steamer C. Vanderbilt for New-York.

The Anti-Wood, alias Reform, Convention of the City Democracy met, last evening, in the City Hall, ELIJAH F PURDY, presiding, and examined into the result of the Ward organizations, adopted on Wednesday night. From the Third, Seventh and Ninth Wards reports were made that the organizations in these Wards were not complete, and a further extension of time asked for. The Sixteenth Ward returns were sent back, and Mr. THOMAS DUNLAP was appointed umpire to settle the differences in that Ward. From the Twenty-second the ticket headed ALEXANDER WARD was received. The Convention then adjourned till Thursday.

The testimony in the matter of the "Burdell estate" before the Surrogate was closed yesterday. Evidence was introduced by counsel on both sides to impeach the testimony of several witnesses who had been examined during the present trial. A step-son of Mrs. CRANE and also a nephew of her husband were called to impeach her character for truth and veracity. A motion is pending before the Surrogate for a commission to take the testimony of WILLIAM C. HYDE of California, which he takes time to consider. If the commission be refused, the counsel will then make their final arguments in the case at such time as shall be hereafter agreed upon by themselves and the Surrogate.

DOMINICK RAGANA, a boatman, was yesterday tried and convicted, in the Court of General Sessions, for a violation of the Quarantine Laws, in rowing passengers to a vessel within the Quarantine anchorage contrary to the orders of the Health Officer. He will be sentenced to-day by the Recorder.

General WALKER attended Wallack's Theatre last evening, made a neat speech, was escorted to to the Lafarge House by a band of music and a crowd, where he again spoke from the balcony. He honored the TIMES with a left-handed compliment, and was followed by General WHEAT and others—the band meantime playing "Hail Columbia," "Yankee Doodle," "Root Hog or Die," &c.

The fourth anniversary of the Mariners' Family Asylum, on Staten Island, near Vanderbilt's Landing, was held yesterday, with very interesting ceremonies, in presence of a very large attendance of visitors. The Asylum has thirty-five inmates at present, and its finances are in good condition.

At 7 o'clock yesterday evening a fire broke out in the smoke-house rear of the four-story brick building No. 361 West-street. The flames extended to and destroyed the front building. The loss on the stock amounts to $12,000. It was owned by Mr. GEO. C. REED, a member of the National Guard, who is now in Boston. Insurance not known. The building was owned by WM. B. ASTOR. Loss $3,000. No insurance.

The alarm for the Eighth District at 6¼ o'clock yesterday afternoon, was caused by the breaking out of a fire among some cases of glass bottles on the third floor of the building No. 144 Liberty-street.

The Recent Crimes of Fernando Wood and their Penalties.

Ten warrants were yesterday issued against Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, in suits which have been brought against him by different policemen, who were wounded in the performance of their duty in endeavoring to arrest him, on the 16th instant. Four of these warrants were issued by Judge MITCHELL, presiding Judge of the Superior Court, three by Judge DUER, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and three by Associate Justice BRADY, of the Common Pleas. Mr. WOOD was held to bail, on each of the ten charges preferred against him, in the sum of five thousand dollars—in fifty thousand dollars altogether. They will all be tried at the proper time, and the respective Juries who shall be called upon to decide the question of damages, may mulct him in the sum of ten thousand dollars, for the benefit of each separate individual who was injured at his instigation. Besides these ten warrants, an order was also issued, yesterday, by Judge HOFFMAN, of the Superior Court, requiring WOOD to show cause, on Tuesday next, why he should not be punished for criminal contempt, in resisting process of the Court. The penalty for the contempt may be thirty days imprisonment, together with a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars, and it is also indictable as a misdemeanor, which is punishable with one year's imprisonment, and another fine of two hundred and fifty dollars.

On the civil warrant of arrest, at the suit of Mr. D. D. CONOVER, for riotous assault, during which he was injured, Mr. WOOD was held to bail in the sum of five thousand dollars, and the damages which a Jury can find against him are ten thousand dollars. Under the criminal warrant for the same riotous assault, the Mayor is liable to heavy fine and to imprisonment. It will be recollected that Mr. WOOD resisted the execution of both of these last warrants, and that, consequently, two more warrants were issued by the Recorder, which led to the final recognition by the rebellious Chief Magistrate of the Metropolitan Police which he had so long affected to despise. This tardy recognition, which was mainly due to the firmness and energy of Major-General SANDFORD, prevented the Mayor from plunging into a short but desperate career of still more reckless crimes, the consequences of which it is fearful to contemplate. As it is, the offences for which he has already been either arrested or prosecuted form but a small portion of those for which it is to be hoped that he will be brought to punishment, under the action of the laws and of our Grand Juries.

"From and after the first meeting of the Board of Police, under the provisions of this act, it shall possess all the power and authority heretofore conferred by law upon the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York, or upon the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of said City as Police Commissioners, * * and from and after the said first meeting of the Board of Police of the 'Metropolitan Police District,' the duty and authority and power of each and all of the aforementioned officers in relation to Police Government, appointment and discipline, SHALL WHOLLY CEASE."

This is THE LAW. Whatever the private views, or interests, or tastes of Mr. WOOD might be in the matter, it was his bounden duty to set the example of acquiescence in it, until the question of its constitutionality should have been decided on by the properly constituted authorities. He has rendered himself liable by disobeying it: 1. To punishment for misdemeanor for every single separate instance in which he has exercised duty in defiance of the provisions of the Act. 2. To prosecution indictment and damages for every trespass, and for each assault or battery committed by any member of the Municipal Police, all of whom received authority for their actions from him. 3. To all the penalties which the law awards for inciting to riot, by instructing officers to resist CONOVER by concerted means. 4th, To the death penalty for murder, in case Crofort, which is most probable, shall not survive his wounds. The New-York statute makes no distinction between a principal in the first and second degree, in cases of murder, or of accessories before the fact. "Every person," says the law, "who shall be a principal in the second degree to the commission of any felony, or who shall be an accessory to any felony before the fact, shall, upon conviction, be punished in the manner herein prescribed with respect to principals in the first degree." The third subdivision of the fifth section of the act, in the revised statutes, concerning crimes and punishments, under the title of "Crimes punishable with death," moreover declares that "killing shall be murder when perpetrated, without any design to effect death, by a person engaged in the commission of any felony." That the assaults with murderous weapons, and with intent to kill, instigated by Mayor WOOD, on Wednesday last, were felonious, few in the community will question. Should the unfortunate CROFORT die from the stabs which he received, it may be taken for granted that the Grand Jury will take immediate action against those who caused his death, and the sad spectacle may be witnessed of the Chief Magistrate of this great City being put upon his trial for murder.

For the "Metropolitan" Policemen, in their assaults upon the "Municipals," were undoubtedly acting as the "posse comitatus" of the Coroner, in which capacity the most unreasonable supporters of our would-be Napoleon will be forced to recognize a quality of legality beyond cavil or denial.

Such are the melancholy results of the insane attempt of a disaffected executive official to erect himself into a supreme judicial and legislative authority! Every private individual has an undoubted right to appeal from State legislation to the Constitution, in accordance with which the laws must be framed. But resistance to law, on the part of those whose duty it is to enforce it, is simply monstrous, and can only result in the riotous triumph of anarchy or the forcible victory of the law, whose reign, in a Republic, should be as peaceable as it is beneficent. An officer, reluctant to enforce the execution of a superior law, has no other choice than to yield unwilling obedience, or to resign his place. Disobedience and, above all, conspiracy to prevent the execution of an obnoxious statute, is equivalent to rebellion.

The Judicial Ally of the Mayor.

Every step which has been taken in the progress of the conflict between Mr. WOOD and the constituted authorities of New-York, has given fresh confirmation to the growing popular conviction that the Mayor of the Metropolis has, for some time, been engaged in organizing a formal conspiracy against the public order of the community.

It is impossible for any candid person to read the report of the proceedings had before the City Judge RUSSELL in relation to the Mayor's application for a writ of habeas corpus, without being satisfied that Judge RUSSELL has made himself a party to such a conspiracy. The previous conduct of this functionary, in regard to the new Police, had afforded prima facie evidence of his absolute disregard of his duties and his responsibilities as a judicial officer. He continued to act as a "Commissioner" in concert with Mayor WOOD, and to uphold the claims of Mr. MATSELL as "Chief" of Police after the first meeting of the duly appointed Metropolitan Board, and thus clearly brought himself within the scope of the Statute providing for the punishment of all conspirators guilty of "obstructing justice or the due administration of law." (2 Rev. Stat., 4 edit., 874, sec. 8, sub. 6.) For it is not to be asserted for an instant that the act appointing the Metropolitan Board of Police Commissioners was not to be regarded by Judge RUSSELL as a law binding upon himself until such time as it should have been decided by the competent Court to be unconstitutional; and this act provides that, "from and after the first meeting of the Board of Police of the Metropolitan Police District, the duty and authority of all and each the aforementioned officers, (the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of New-York City,) in relation to police government, appointment and discipline, shall wholly cease and vest in the said Board of Police constituted by this act, except that the Mayors of Brooklyn and New-York shall be, with the Commissioners, members ex-officio of the Board of Police."

The authority of the Metropolitan Board having now been acknowledged by the Mayor upon the effective persuasion of Major-Gen. SANDFORD, it remains to be seen in what way Judge RUSSELL shall be held to account for his conspiracy with Mr. WOOD to defeat the execution of a law of the State. Meanwhile a new light is thrown upon the Judge's past behaviour by his extraordinary conduct in the matter of the habeas corpus. He began by issuing a writ vicious in form—such a writ in fact as no Judge properly alive to the minute responsibilities of his office (and no Judge who trifles with the terms of so important a writ can be trusted with the substance of justice) could possibly have issued.

In the next place he adjourned the hearing upon the writ, originally made returnable to his office in Chambers-street, from that office to the Mayor's office—without presence of the body of the defendant—whereas, without having jurisdiction over the body, he could not legally change the writ once granted.

The District-Attorney appeared at the Mayor's office (into which he only obtained entrance after undergoing personal violence and insolence at the hands of the Mayor's officers) and there protested against the hearing of the writ in the private office of the defendant and in the presence of his disorderly personal retainers. Thereupon Judge RUSSELL finally agreed to adjourn the proceedings to the Court of General Sessions, the District-Attorney waiving the production of the defendant's body.

The hearing came off yesterday, and resulted in the discharge of the Judge's accomplice. The consistency observable throughout the illegal course of Judge RUSSELL's actions did not however, obtain between his observations made in the progress of the argument and the grounds taken by him in his final decision.

Indeed the direct reverse was so conspicuously the case as to justify and even to provoke an inference that the Judge's written arguments, like his public activity, must have emanated from a "power behind the Bench." For instance, the Judge said, in the course of argument, that he "would not regard the affidavit"—the "affidavit was not before him"—and yet his first ground of discharge is "that the affidavit is insufficient to hold."

Moreover, Judge RUSSELL, not meeting the argument of the District-Attorney against his jurisdiction, imagined a point never raised by the District-Attorney, which he combatted, to the effect that a writ of habeas corpus could not be issued between the issuing of a warrant, and the return of the defendant to the magistrate who issues it.

In short Judge RUSSELL wasted a great many words in attempting to establish two points which we strongly suspect will not be accepted as good law by the courts or the people of the City or the State.

The first of these points concerns the virtue of official station, and goes to the length of asserting for the Mayor of New-York the same exemption from wrong that inheres in the King of Great Britain. The second affects the private rights of every citizen, and the value of all our courts of justice, and tends to decide that if Justice A. issues a warrant for the arrest of Mr. B., Mr. B., preferring that his case should come before his personal friend, Justice C., may have a writ of habeas corpus sued out, returnable to Justice C., who thereupon coolly says to the prosecutor of B., "I will discharge Mr. B. unless you elect to continue the case before me!"

How Commissioner Devlin got his Office.

The nomination of Mr. DEVLIN to the office of Street Commissioner by Mayor WOOD, the prompt action of the Board of Aldermen in confirming his nomination, notwithstanding that they had strenuously opposed him at first, and the extraordinary steps taken by them to induct him into office, have naturally excited a very lively curiosity on the part of the public to learn the secret of such remarkable proceedings. We believe that we can unfold a clue to the mystery, at least of the agreement of the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor, though the mystery of the nomination by the Mayor of a man like Mr. DEVLIN to an office of such importance as that of Street Commissioner, may be surmised, but cannot now be positively stated. It is well known that he was not the candidate of the Democratic members of the Board of Aldermen, who had vainly endeavored to urge upon the Mayor the nomination of another person. But, the necessities of the case were urgent, and the Mayor was determined that not only his own man should be Street Commissioner, but that he should have his own way in naming a successor to Captain WILEY, who has been translated to the Custom House to be the successor of Assistant Surveyor RYNDERS, as Inspector of Ships. The difficulty was at last settled in caucus. Mr. DUFFY, the brother-in-law of Alderman WILSON, was made Inspector of Ships, and Mr. DEVLIN was accepted by the Aldermen for Street Commissioner on the condition that the immense patronage of the office should be divided among the Aldermen by lot. All the best offices in the gift of the Commissioner were made up in parcels and numbered, and the prizes put into a hat, each Alderman being entitled to the number he might draw. No. 1, the highest prize, was drawn by Alderman HARRIS, of the Third Ward. This office is the Collector of Assessments, which has been considered the very best office in the City Government; and it was bestowed by the late Commissioner, upon his father, JOSEPH R. TAYLOR, who now holds it. Alderman HEALY, of the Fourth Ward, drew the third prize, and the others, to the number of eleven lots, fell into the hands of the other Aldermen. At least, such is the secret that has leaked out of the caucus, and, though we cannot vouch for its absolute correctness, we have good reasons for believing it to be essentially true. It affords some solution of an otherwise most mysterious transaction. That there has been a monstrous fraud perpetrated upon the people, there can be no doubt, and before this matter of the Street Commissionership shall be finally disposed of, there will be developments made which will astonish the public, accustomed as they are to stupendous acts of rascality in connection with our Municipal Government.

More Rebellion.

From Washington—By Extraordinary Telegraph.

The Cabinet has been suddenly called together, and is now sitting in deliberation upon an extraordinary letter just received from the Collector of the port of New-York.

NEW-YORK, June 14, 1857.

TO THE PRESIDENT—Sir: The late instructions of the Treasury Department, requiring me to be vigilant in the execution of the Tariff Act of 1846, with the amendments of the last session, have induced me to reëxamine the legislation of Congress upon that subject, and I have come to the conclusion that those acts are unconstitutional. You are aware that my oath of office requires me to obey the Constitution of the United States, as well as the laws of Congress. Of course, if those laws are in violation of the Constitution, I must obey the Constitution, and disregard the laws. Now I am entirely satisfied that the Tariff Acts of 1846, and amendments, are a Tariff for protection, and not of revenue; and that they violate the Constitution of the United States, which permits Congress simply to raise revenue—not to protect one branch of industry at the expense of another. Under these circumstances, I have but one course to pursue, and that is, to disregard the Tariff, and to refuse to execute the Tariff laws, until they are declared to be constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. It is proper to say that the judgments of the District or of the Circuit Courts of the United States will not be sufficient to remove my constitutional scruples, or swerve me from my duty. Nothing short of the decision of the highest Court in the United States will be sufficient. You will please, therefore, to take notice, that, on the 1st day of July next, I shall stand by the Constitution, and uphold the rights of this locality. No duties will be collected, except such as may be necessary to pay the salaries of myself and the faithful band of officers who intend to stand by me in this emergency. I am proud to say that the Mayor of New-York, who, you are aware, is a master of constitutional law, approves of this course, and has promised to aid me, with the immeuse force at his command, in suppressing the indignation of the merchants, which may naturally be expected. Yours, respectfully,

H. J. R——D.

Prof. MCCOY, Editor of the Prohibitionist, and Secretary of the State Temperance Society, Thursday resigned both positions. The Prohibitionist will probably be removed to this City, and joined with the temperance papers here.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18.

Mr. PANNELL has been reappointed Surveyor of Customs at Wheeling. This completes the action of the Administration in all the cases where the commissions of Custom House officers have expired.

Baron VON LEIMBURG was yesterday introduced to the President by Assistant Secretary of State APPLETON, and delivered his credentials as Minister of the King of the Netherlands. Mutual assurances of a desire to maintain the friendship which has always existed between the two Governments were expressed. Baron VON LEIMBURG was in full Court dress.

The President has officially recognized JEAN NOTTBECK as Vice Consul for Russia at New-York; WARNER DRESSEL as Consul for Baden at Baltimore, and HENRIQUE V. WARD as Consul for Chili at Boston.

The examination just completed in the Coast Survey Office fully confirms the fact of sufficient depth of water in Long Island Sound for the passage of the Great Eastern.

The Cabinet, to-day, had a special meeting to consider the question of the overland mail to California.

The President has recognized ENRIQUE F. FALLOT as Consul from Chili, in New York.

It is said that Col. RICHARDSON, of Illinois, has declined the Governorship of Utah.

Judge STILES and United States Marshal DOLSON, of Utah, have arrived here.

Gen. Walker's Letter to the President—Costa Rica and the Transit—The Overland Mail Contract.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 16, 1857.

The letter addressed by Gen. WALKER to the President, in relation to the position which he held in Nicaragua, and the conduct of Capt. DAVIS, of the St. Mary's, in the forcible seizure of the schooner Granada, while under the Nicaragua flag, and in Nicaraguan waters, was delivered to the President to-day.

It appears that in Gen. WALKER's interview with the President, he made some remarks upon the improper interference of Capt. DAVIS, as the cause of his return, and that the President requested him to reduce the statement to writing. There was no conversation between the President and Gen. WALKER in relation to the affairs of the latter, except that Gen. WALKER alluded to Capt DAVIS' acts, and the President requested him to reduce his statement to writing. The letter itself was sent to you by mail.

I understand that it is Gen. WALKER's intention to return to this city on his way to the South, in five or six days.

I do not know that he has any fixed plan as to his return to Nicaragua, but, as he has appealed to the people, he will probably await some popular movement in his behalf.

The President has been consulted in regard to the means of reopening the Nicaragua Transit, by several parties, and, upon one point, he has made up his mind, and declared, yesterday, that he would not permit Costa Rica to interfere with the transit. The claims which Costa Rica makes to the Transit are founded, not only upon former territorial disputes with Nicaragua, but upon a right of conquest. The President admits neither claim. Costa Rica will find, too, that her claims, upon which she has already made two exclusive grants of a right to the Transit, will be resisted by other States of Central America.

Meanwhile, parties have gone to Costa Rica, with a view to procure less impracticable grants, and to obtain also the assent of Nicaragua to them.

The contract for the overland mail to San Francisco is likely to be given either to the Express Companies who propose St. Louis as the shortest point, or to Mr BIRCH, the California contractor, who proposes to start from Memphis. X. Y. Z.

ACTION OF THE FREE-STATE LEGISLATURE—A MESSAGE FROM GOVERNOR ROBINSON—CONTRADICTORY ACCOUNTS OF THE MOVEMENTS OF GENERAL WALKER, &C.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

TOPEKA, K. T., Friday, June 12, via JEFFERSON CITY, Thursday, June 18.

The Legislature met on the 9th, but did not obtain a quorum until the 11th, when Governor ROBINSON delivered his message to both Houses. The Legislature will complete the State organization, and laws are to be enacted, and provision made for future State Elections.

Gov. WALKER is at Lecompton. He intends canvassing the Territory. MANCHESTER.

[DISPATCHES FROM OTHER CORRESPONDENTS.]

TOPEKA, K. T., Wednesday, June 10.

The Legislature convened yesterday, but adjourned until this morning to leave room for the action of the Convention.

The Convention passed strong resolutions instructing the Legislature to complete the organization, and have it ready for the necessity of the people.

Gov. WALKER and suite are here. He has spoken twice, and is trying to defeat the action of the people.

The Pro Slavery men made a step towards having the Legislature broken up, but the Executive authorities have not sanctioned it.

TOPEKA, K. T., Friday, June 12.

The Free-State Legislature is now in session, and busy at work. Last night Gov. ROBINSON sent in his message. It created a sensation, and is said to be an able document.

The Legislature are proceeding to perfect County and Township organizations. Governor WALKER and his suite are disconcerted. No attempt has been made to break up the Legislature.

The Democrat says that W. A. PHILLIPS has been chosen a State Senator, instead of United States Senator, in place of Col. LANE.

CHICAGO, Thursday, June 18.

The Kansas Free-State Legislature met at Topeka on the 11th inst. Governor ROBINSON sent in his message. It recommends immediate and thorough organization of the State Government, and codification of the laws; examines the inaugural of Gov. WALKER; contends that the Topeka Constitution is the only clear expression of the popular will of Kansas; thinks it incompetent for the neighboring States longer to exercise sovereignty in Kansas, and declares it impossible for Free-State men to vote at the bogus election. He concluded by saying he will maintain the position of resistance to usurped authority at all hazards and at all times.

The Village of Corning Flooded.

TREMENDOUS FRESHET—BRIDGES AND HOUSES SWEPT AWAY—RAILROAD TRAVEL INTERRUPTED, ETC.

CORNING, N. Y., Thursday, June 18.

The village of Corning is flooded. The principal bridges and walks have been torn away, and the destruction of property is immense. The working classes have suffered severely, a large number of their houses having been washed away. Communication between the upper and lower parts of the village has been entirely cut off. The running of the trains on the Erie Railroad is temporarily obstructed, but they will doubtless be running regularly to-morrow.

The freshet has now in a measure subsided, and the danger is passed. The cellars of the business portion of the village are filled with water, and masses of timber fill the streets.

Great Fire at Cape Island—Mansion-House and Kursaal in Ruins.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

CAPE ISLAND, Thursday, June 18.

About a quarter to twelve o'clock last night flames were discovered issuing from the rear of the Mansion-House.

The fire spread so rapidly that all efforts to subdue it were unavailing, and in a short time the Kursaal and the two adjoining buildings, together with the Mansion-House, were enveloped in a sheet of fire.

This morning they are a mass of ruins. No damage was done to the adjacent hotels. M.

The Bunker Hill Celebration.

CLOSING PROCEEDINGS—ENTERTAINMENT OF THE NEW-YORK GUESTS—REVIEW OF THE SEVENTH REGIMENT, ETC.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 18.

The Bunker Hill Monument Association, whose head-quarters are at the Winthrop House, were entertained last night at the residence of Ex-Mayor SMITH. They were attended by Wallace's Band.

An easterly rain-storm prevented the parade and review of the New-York and Boston Military this morning, on the Common, by the Governor. It is hoped the review will take place this afternoon.

Colonel DURYEA and the field officers of the Seventh Regiment, Major BUCK and the officers of the Washington Greys, and a large number of other civic and military notabilities, were splendidly entertained last evening by Col. T. BIGELOW LAWRENCE at his mansion in Beacon-street.

BOSTON, Thursday—P. M.

It has been decided that the review of the Seventh Regiment, of New-York, and other military, shall take place this afternoon.

The Washington Greys return to New-York via Fall River to-night.

The Seventh Regiment leave in a special train at 7 P. M. for Stonington, and will reach New-York to-morrow morning.

BOSTON, Thursday—8 P. M.

Governor GARDNER and staff reviewed the Seventh Regiment, of New-York, this afternoon. A drizzly rain did not prevent the attendance of many thousands of spectators, and the soldierly appearance and proficiency of movement exhibited by this splendid regiment elicited great applause and universal admiration. At 6 o'clock the regiment, under the escort of the First Regiment and National Lancers, left their quarters at the Revere House, and marched to the Providence depôt, where a special train was in waiting. They started at 7 o'clock for home, an immense crowd of citizens heartily cheering, and wishing success to the glorious Seventh Regiment of New-York.

Much regret was expressed at the brief stay of the battalion of Washington Greys, under Major BUCK. They arrived last evening, and left for home, via Fall River, this afternoon. The Second Regiment escorted them to the depôt.

New-York Hose Company No. 5 visited Salem to-day, escorted by Hancock Company, of Boston. They left for home to night.

Oceanus Company, of New-York, visited the Navy-Yard, State's Prison and other institutions to-day. They were escorted by the Charlestown firemen. They will probably leave to-morrow night for home.

CHARLES LINCOLN, of the Marine Artillery, had his hand blown off while engaged in firing a salute in honor of the New-York Regiment, as it passed through the city this evening.

An Emigrant Train Attacked and Destroyed by Indians.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, June 17.

A Fort Riely correspondent of the 9th states that the Cheyennes had attacked and destroyed an emigrant train eighty miles west of that post. Six persons were killed and four wounded. He also says there are Indians in the rear of SUMNER's force.

The Deficit in the Treasury of Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, June 18.

A report is current here that the State, owing to the defalcation in the Treasury, will not be able to meet the July interest. The State officers are trying to make a loan, but their power to do so is doubted. An extra session of the Legislature will be called. The total deficit is not much less than $900,000.

Destructive Fire at Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Thursday, June 18.

An extensive fire broke out here last night, destroying the whole block of buildings occupied by the Bank of West Tennessee, the Commercial Bank, J. W. MCCRACKEN & Co.; GOODLETT, NABORS & Co.; STEWART, KING & Co.; S. MCMANUS, and GUESSMAN & HEFFMANN; also, a number of offices occupied by cotton factors. Amount of loss not yet ascertained.

An unknown steamer was seen to strike off Nantucket, at 12½ o'clock, on the 16th inst, but she got off in about an hour, and put to sea again under sail, steering North.

Movements of General Walker.

General WALKER is an early riser, said to be habitually so—at any rate, he got the start of the reporters yesterday morning, having left his quarters at the Lafarge House before 7 o'clock in the morning, and, notwithstanding the most industrious efforts to find him, he completely eluded pursuit. It was said he took breakfast with General HENNINGSEN, in Twelfth-street, but we could not trace the rumor to any authentic source. Other reports stated that he had gone to Brooklyn, to spend the day with a friend, but, so far as could be learned, he had not been seen after passing out of the door of the Lafarge at the unseasonable hour above mentioned.

Another rumor prevailed that the General and his friends would be serenaded by Dodworth's Band during the evening, on which occasion he would deliver himself upon Nicaraguan affairs generally, but this story, like all the others, could not be traced to any certain source.

The last rumor and the only one that seemed to possess any feature of truth, was that he would visit Wallack's Theatre in the evening, which had a show of authority in the shape of sundry large placards pasted through Broadway, which read as follows:

"GEN. WILLIAM WALKER VISITS WALLACK'S THIS EVENING."

Having failed to get a sight of the great filibuster, during the day, our Reporter contented himself with stopping at BRADY's, in Broadway, and taking a look at his reputable photograph, redeeming, indeed, the terribly scaly counterfeit of him that the same artist's ambrotype presented.

THE GENERAL AT WALLACK'S.

The Theatre was unusually crowded, in anticipation of seeing Gen. WALKER. Shortly before 8 o'clock he entered the house, with Gen. HENNINGSEN and lady, Capt. FAYSOUX, Col. WATERS, Gen. CAZNEAU, and others, and took a seat in BOX No. 2, which had been reserved for him. His presence was greeted with cheers. When the curtain had dropped, at the close of the second act, the calls for WALKER grew tumultuous, and he rose up and addressed the audience as follows:

GENERAL WALKER'S SPEECH.

Permit me, in returning my thanks to you for these expressions of your sympathy, to return those thanks by referring to a scene painted by the great dramatic poet of the century. When Jeannie Deans went to the Duke of Argyle to beg the life of her sister, she wore the tartan of her country; after pressing her suit with impassioned earnestness, she said to the Duke, "I thought your Grace's heart would warm at the sight of the tartan." He answered, "When the heart of Maccullum More ceases to warm at the sight of the tartan, may it cease to beat, and lie cold under the sod." And I say now—"When this heart shall cease to beat in favor of the liberties and institutions of my native land, and to such marks of approval of my countrymen, may it cease to beat, and lie cold under the sod."

Gen. WALKER sat down amidst cheers and the waving of handkerchiefs from the ladies, prominent among whom was Mrs. General Cazneau and her lady friends, who occupied the opposite box.

The General and his staff left the Theatre at the close of the first play, a band of music having already arrived and commenced playing in the street. He was escorted to the Laferge House, where the band halted and struck up "Hail Columbia."

General Walker soon appeared upon the balcony.

General Walker said: "This outpouring of the heart proves that the cause of the Americans in Nicaragua is the cause of the Americans in the United States. Nothing but the deepest popular sympathy—nothing but the real instincts of the people can ceuse such self-expressions of sympathy for the past, but are guarantees of hope and encouragement for the future. I hope that the war in Central America is not ended—that there is a truce and nothing more. For myself I feel there has been too much noble blood shed on that soil to allow it to sink into the ground—it must rise and produce most glorious fruits for the future. One of our bitterest enemies has given us hope,—one of your morning papers has thought proper to express the opinion that I have no attributes of success but luck. I am proud of such a compliment from an enemy. When the Roman General returned from the war they were accustomed to eulogize him for his sagacity, his wisdom and his courage, and to exclaim that more than all he was favored by the gods. I feel proud of such a compliment to myself and to the cause in which we have been struggling; and I have no doubt that the gods who have carried me thus far through the war, and have not suffered our cause wholly to fail, will yet carry it forward to the entire accomplishment of whatever is for the glory of the American people.

The band played "Yankee Doodle," and then a call was made for Gen. Wheat, who came out and spoke at considerable length, in which he said the cause of freedom in Nicaragua was not dead; that Gen. Walker was going back stronger than he ever was before; that upon his second coming he would be acknowledged as the greatest man in the assembled world, &c.

H. N. Wild, Col. Hall, Col. Blankman and others spoke, and the band continued to play until a late hour, notwithstanding a drizzling rain.

IMPORTANT FROM CHINA.

Present Aspect of the War—Attitude of the Chinese Towards the English and Americans Respectively—Destruction of Pirate Junks—Movements of the American Squadron—Operations of the Rebels—Shipwrecks—Coolie Horrors—Hauling Down the American Flag by British Authorities.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

United States Steamer San Jacinto,
Hong Kong, China, April 15, 1857.

Your correspondent has duly received from you a package of papers for which he is thankful. Said papers contain some "art criticisms" which have not given satisfaction to the afflicted ones. Well! whose the coat fits let him wear it. I only regret that the Navy has not an able exponent of its rights and wrongs: an attaché, who has the ability and inclination to show up its beauties and beasts, lights and shades. I heartily wish every one of our national legislators who makes a move towards reform in the Navy success. The institution only needs to be seen as it is, by the people,—who know less of it than any other of our "Democratic institutions"—and we will have what is consistent with our Democracy, a republican Navy, and not what it is now, a nursery of snobs, and the hot-bed of aristocracy.

I once heard tell of a man who ordered the sea to be whipped because it would persist in being unruly: whether the sea obeyed or not I have never learned.

There has been no reform in the Navy as yet, for the reason, I suppose, that Milton gives, that "Devils with devils damned, firm concord hold,

Men only disagree."

Since the departure of the mail on the 15th of March, little of importance has occurred to disturb the equanimity of the dwellers in China, affairs remaining in statu quo. The events of the past month I will briefly sum up; of war news there is but little to give; miscellaneous some, and of Coolie horrors much.

I am able to give you from reliable sources, as follows: Yeh, the Governor of Canton—who, with Admiral Seymour, are by far the most conspicuous personages on the stage of action in China—still continues to issue his proclamations to his countrymen, hurling his anathemas and breathing his blessings out upon the heads of the barbarians in no very mild terms. By barbarians, of course he means especially the English, whom he loves with an everlasting love. I must say that Yeh shows great ability in the composition of his epistles. That he is a ruler possessed of great energy and ability has been clearly proven since the breaking out of the present war. Prompted and provoked to harsh and cruel conduct by the arrogance and outrages of the English, misrepresented by them, he should not be misunderstood and judged too harshly of at home. I believe Americans sufficiently understand Englishmen to know how totally unprincipled they are when speaking of an enemy, and how prone to villify and detract. It should always be kept in view by Americans that the Chinese are to them more friendly by far than to any other people. When the cry of "foreign devil" is howled in the ears of an Englishman, the American is saluted and recognized as "our American brother." This was the case previous to the present war,—even in the southern part of the Empire where the people are more hostile to foreigners than in any other part. In the north it was perfectly safe for Americans to go two hundred miles into the interior, and it was common for missionaries to go fifty or sixty miles into the interior in the discharge of their duties. That the English are intensely jealous of this fact is very evident; that they rejoice with a joy unspeakable, but not full of glory, that we are in trouble with the Chinese is equally evident. We were fast monopolizing the tea and silk trade, a traffic which for very good reasons England wishes to pass exclusively into her hands. Here then is the key to British rejoicing over our participation in their troubles in China. That she wishes us to "lose caste" there is no doubt. To any resident foreigner whose judgment is unbiased, it is plain that English policy tends only to one thing here in the East—self aggrandizement.

The English treatment to the Chinese is almost invariably cruel and unjust. By keeping these facts in view, and also that the ways of the Chinese are not our ways,—they being an exclusive people,—we will not, perhaps, so strongly sympathize with those who cry "war to the knife." What has been done by the United States Squadron of late in China, could not be avoided, and was no doubt just, but for the sake of our best interests let us wish for no more trouble with this people, as accounts of the state of affairs here will go to the world through English channels. I would advise people to believe only one-half of what they read and hear from that source. One fact I have observed, that those speculating gentry here who call themselves Americans,—who have been acquiring wealth at the price of Chinese blood, finding that the Chinese were not so easily bullied as they supposed, are now the first and loudest to sing the song of peace. But I am rambling from my subject.

Troops are arriving here almost weekly. The H. Company's steamer Zenobia and H. B. M. steamer Inflexible arrived on the 23th and 28th of March, the latter having one of the long expected fleet of gunboats (Starling) in tow. The first was laden with native troops. The arrival of those troops has given the denizens of Hong Kong a greater sense of security than they have enjoyed since the commencement of the war.

Military operations for the past month have been as follows: On the 19th of March H. M. steamship Hornet took, near the island of San Shan, about ninety miles from this place, a fleet of nineteen piratical junks. Out of twenty-four only five escaped. This, from all accounts, was the affair of the season. The junks were attacked by the ships' boats, which dashed in amongst them, pouring in a deadly fire of musketry into the crowds of Chinese who were prepared to repel boarders. The action lasted for one hour, and resulted as above. The British loss was none killed and one wounded; Chinese loss very great, though not exactly known. The island of San Shan is known as the burial place of St. Francis Xavier. He came here from his Japan Mission in 1551, and died the following year.

At Canton and on the river everything is quiet. The ruins of the factories, &c., are being rapidly removed by the Chinese, and probably ere this there is not "one stone left on another." The gardens have been totally destroyed by digging salt into the soil.

On the 9th of April Commodore Elliot made a boat attack upon a fleet of thirteen war junks, and took and destroyed all of them. The Chinese resisted stoutly, making a great deal of use of their most potent weapon, stink pots. As usual, their loss was large; on the side of the English none killed and only one man was wounded.

As to the doings of the United States East India squadron, Commodore Armstrong yet awaits advices from his government, which will, no doubt, be received by the next mail, expected the 25th of this month. We are at a loss to know how our doings out here will be received by the government and people at home. I hope the Commodore will be sustained and upheld by the powers that be. Much as I regret the injury done to our interests by this war, yet I must say that in the attack and destruction of the Barrier Forts by the Americans, we simply did what was right. We await the judgment of the great unwashed however.

The U. S. steamship Portsmouth started on the 11th of April for Singapore, to investigate the why's and wherefore's of the hauling down of the American flag by the British authorities on the bark Henrietta Maria, whose Coolie history will be found in this epistle. I send you a version of the affair clipped from the Friend of China of April 4. Of its truth I cannot speak, for this is the English of it. I think a dinner party will settle it all.

The U. S. ship Levant is at Shanghae undergoing repairs, upon the completion of which she is to proceed to Hong Kong.

We are most anxious on this ship for our orders home. The East Indian is a most delightful station to leave. An active two years' cruise in these seas is all that should be required. There can be no greater punishment inflicted upon an officer of the navy than to be ordered to the East Indies. The Coast of Africa is preferable to it. We have been rejoiced that we are brought nearer home by the establishment of a semi-monthly mail. Let those having friends in this part of the world send no mail matter to them viâ California, for in nine cases out of ten they will fail to receive it. Send viâ England.

A report reached Shanghae a short time since that the rebels had taken the important city of Ho-how, in the black tea district. This or some other cause has very materially affected the tea market, that article having doubled in price within the last four or five months.

The rebels are in force near Canton. The soldiers and militia having collected to seize and fight the rebels in the district of Ching Gen and Loy che, having entered the mountain district, were inclosed and surrounded by the rebels and several thousand of them put to the sword. In some of the provinces in the south famine prevails; many of the poor are coming to Hong Kong to save themselves from starving. Rice is enormously high and scarce in the interior, as also it is everywhere in China.

Of crimes and casualties there are legions. There is certainly an excess of the first: murders are common in Hong Kong; a case of poisoning now and then lights up the background. On the night of the 1st of April the Government auctioneer, Mr. Marquick, was strangled to death in his bed, and robbed by the Chinese in his employ. Seamen are frequently murdered, and very rarely is it that the murderers are caught.

The American steamer Antelope, belonging to the firm of Russel & Co., having grounded on a rock off Taichow Bay was forced to throw overboard some $18,000 worth of tin and other freight, to lighten her before she could be got off. The Antelope is Boston build, and only the fact that she was unusually strong saved her from "breaking her back."

I have to record the loss of the British bark Challenger, Clanson commander, about one days' sail southerly from Shanghae, by striking a rock. Officers and crew reached Shanghae in the boats.

The American bark Sea Nymph reached Shanghae on the 1st of March, and reported as follows: "That when in lat. 29 50' N., lon. 131 41' E., she sent boats to the Hamburg brig Posa, and found that she had been deserted apparently about one month, and is a buoy. She appeared to have a general European cargo on board, mast of which was under water."

You have no doubt heard of the loss of the American whaler Alice Mandell, which was lost sometime about the 1st of last month. The last remaining boat, supposed to have been lost, containing the fourth mate and seven seamen, arrived here on the 16th of last month, they having reached Macao on the 13th in a state of great exhaustion. This was the boat which the San Jacinto went in search of, but failed to find.

Of "coolie horrors" there is a legion. Weekly and sometimes daily, we hear of some tragedy that—save in this now bloody land, where a dweller therein gets hardened to the recitals of bloodshed—makes the blood run cold. Were I to enumerate the full particulars of each tragedy it would take up more space than you or I have to spare.

The British ship Gulnare, 1,100 tone register, left Swatow for Havana, on the 11th of March, with a cargo of coolies. On the morning of the 12th, they in a body attacked the third mate and sentry in the forepart of the ship, yelling like a pack of devils. The officers and crew rushed to the rescue and saved the mate and sentry, who were seriously wounded. The coolies fought like tigers, and in some cases were fairly cut to pieces before they could be driven below. After that they still continued the fight, throwing up billets of firewood, etc. Finding they could not regain the deck, the coolies broke up their berths and set fire to the ship in the main, mizzen and poop hatchways. The leaders in the incendiarism were forthwith shot down, when the rest extinguished the fires. Ten of the coolies were killed, three drowned and fourteen wounded, several jumped overboard on the passage of the ship to this place, where she arrived on the 13th of March.

The American ship Cœur de Lion arrived at this place on the 15th of March, and reports that on the 26th of February a bark was descried in an apparently unmanageable state. Upon boarding her she was found to be the Dutch bark Henrietta Maria, which left Macao in February last with a cargo of coolies, bound for Havana. A disturbance had occurred between the crew and coolies, in consequence of which the officers and crew, except four, had left the vessel. Two hundred and forty Chinamen left at the same. The remainder of the crew, with sixty coolies, had been knocking about the China seas ever since, until fallen in with by the Cœur de Lion. The Captain of this ship placed his mate in charge, ordering him to proceed to Singapore. One of the seamen had received three stabs from the Chinamen, who had complete possession of the vessel. The Captain and his company are supposed to have reached the main land, and fallen into the hands of the Chinamen.

The Peruvian ship Carmen left Swatow on the 1st of March for Callao, with seven passengers and a cargo of 201 Coolies. On the 8th of March, when off the Great Natamas, about 8 P. M., the interpreter warned the Captain that the Coolies meditated a revolt, intending to take the ship. They were forthwith sent below; all was quiet until the next morning, when the Coolies were permitted to come on deck. Whilst the crew were at breakfast the Chinese went forward and threw into the hold a quantity of burning straw, upon which the officers and crew armed themselves, and forcibly drove the Coolies below, fastening down the hatches. The powder was thrown overboard, and an attempt made to quell the flames, but in vain; they spread over the whole ship in a few minutes, scarcely giving time for the hoisting out of the boats, without water, provisions or compass. Finding that there was no sail in his boat, the Captain returned to the ship for one; this was the last that was seen of him. About this time some of the Coolies forced the hatches and took to the rigging; the mast soon went by the board carrying all with them. It is supposed that the Captain's boat went down with the ship, which soon sunk. The most of the Chinese were suffocated by the smoke—all of them perished except an interpreter, from whom it was ascertained that it was the intention of the Chinese to have murdered the officers and crew, and to have beached and plundered the vessel.

You are, perhaps, sickened by the recital of these "horrors," and have had a surfeit of narrative of the same. That this atrocious trade should be allowed by Christian nations, is a matter of surprise and grief. The interests of humanity should make the traffic piracy. That the traffic should be carried on by civilized men, is only another evidence of fact that men are dead to all that is right, just and humane, when gain is the lever that moves their impulses. Why, Sir, we have men here in China, Americans, who are engaged in this and the opium traffic, who would steal the gray hairs off their old mother's head, and pinch the bread out of their children's mouths, did they but hope to aggrandize themselves by so doing. The sum and substance of villainy is centered among foreigners here in China. I no longer wonder at the term "outside barbarians." These are the men who, in the forcible and impressive language of naval authorities, "entertain so finely," where grand dinners and fine wines blind our officials to all that is right and wrong. These are the men whose battles we are fighting and rights protecting. "Take it and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey."

As for commercial news, I have but little to communicate. Silks are high owing to the increased demand. There will be over 100,000 bales exported this year. Teas are also high and rising in price. The articles most in demand here are Rice and Flour. The last is hard to be had at $20 and $25 per barrel; the first at $4 50 per picul. Freights and tonnage—Canton now Shanghae to London, £2 to £2 10s. for Tea; and £5 for silk. To New-York, £5 per 40 feet.

THURSDAY, June 18—P. M.

The changes in Money affairs to-day are not important. Some fair 60 to 90 days paper was taken at 9 ₱ cent., and strictly prime at 8 ₱ cent. These are a little dearer rates than ruled early in the month and indicate some preparation for the more active mercantile employment of Money under the new Tariff. At a few of the large banks, the offerings for discount this week are quite full; others report a falling off. For the moment, general trade is dull, and at the same time there is not much speculative employment for money in Wall-street. Most of the active shares dealt in on the Stock Exchange are relatively scarce. Of the stock and bonds of four of the prominent Railroads, costing together a hundred and ten millions of dollars, we estimate that the Street is carrying, at present prices, less than three millions, all told, say $2,000,000 value in shares, and $1,000,000 in bonds—the last an outside calculation. The recent heavy fall has not only lessened the value, but the number of shares held among the Brokers. These facts account in part for the continued and very marked ease in demand money loans, while the shipments of Bullion are going on at the rate of $2,500,000 to $3,500,000 a week. This week a prominent banking firm, who have not hitherto, this Summer, been exporters of Gold, will ship about $500,000 by the Collins steamer on Saturday. The two steamers sailing on that day will, from present appearances, take about $1,700,000. Nevertheless, the Bank average for the week promises well, and we hear no complaint of the running down of the reserve from any of the Wall-street banks. We remark, however, that the tendency of the late almost general increase in their capitals, has been to modify the views of some of the managers as to the necessity of carrying a large amount of Specie. They cannot well afford to do it and keep up their 8 or 10 ₱ cent. dividends on their enhanced capitals, since the increase in the actual or undrawn line of deposits cannot in all cases be made to correspond. To say nothing of the wisdom of the change of policy, it seems quite certain that $10,000,000 a minimum of Specie average is likely to be deemed by even the "conservative" bankers of the Street, as quite sufficient on the enhanced capital of $60,000,000—the general features of the trade and finances of the country, (including the all-important point of the growing crops, which now promise almost universal abundance,) being all right. The business of the Sub-Treasury, on both sides the account, has fallen off very much this week. The receipts to-day were only $42,197, and the disbursements $63,271. The balance this afternoon $11,646,693.

The Stock Market opened weak at the early Board, but on the second call of the list, and at the second session of the Brokers' acquired considerable strength, and left off higher than yesterday. The business done was not, at first, up to the usual average amount, while the bidding for cash stock, as the day progressed, by a prominent operator who has the reputation of having recently shifted to the Bull side, was quite spirited. This was especially marked in New-York Central, Erie, Southern Michigan and Toledo. Several of the Western stocks were neglected, and the few sales made were at lower prices; Pittsburg, 40; La Crasse, 71½; Galena, 90; and Illinois Central, 133¾. The general market left off firm; Erie, 32¼; Central, 82⅝; Reading, 72⅝; Michigan Southern 46¼, seller 10 days; and Toledo, 58⅛ ₱ cent. The Band list rules dull.

The foreign mails by the Europa, at Boston, to June 6 from Liverpool, and to the 5th from London, advise nothing important in American Stocks. Prices keep steady, and the quotations for Illinois Centrals, Eries and Southern Michigan are relatively from 3 to 5 ₱ cent. ahead of this market, though made on our higher quotations of May 18. The movement of the precious metals since the sailing of the Fulton and Vanderbilt was again large. From Australia, $3,000,000, and from Boston $1,000,000. In a day or two the Asia, from this port, would be in with $1,500,000. The Bank of France bullion for the month was reported $6,250,000 higher, and the bank of England, for the week ending May 30, $1,135,000 higher. [A typographical blunder in Wilmer & Smith says lower.] The reserve in the latter is again over ten millions sterling. Consols closed in London, by the circular advices, 94 ₱ cent. for money. A later telegraphic dispatch says full 94 ₱ cent. The Cotton trade reported fair, and Breadstuffs, owing to the fine weather at home, had relapsed into dullness. The Bank of British North America, which has an agency in this City, had declared a regular half-yearly 3 ₱ cent. dividend, and also, an extra 3 ₱ cent. dividend, carrying a liberal surplus to the account of reserved profits. We copy in another place an interesting leader from the London Times, on the English Railway system and its profits, suggested by a general movement among stockholders to have this interest better cared for by the Government. Several of the suggestions of the writer are not wholly inapplicable to the state of things in the American Roads. The British Export list of the first quarter of 1857 has been published, footing up £28,827,000 sterling, or at the rate of five hundred and seventy-five millions dollars ₱ annum. Deducting the proportion to the distant Colonies of the Empire, the Foreign Export Trade proper, for the year, would indicate in British manufactured fabrics about $410,000,000, while the Exports to Foreign Countries of the United States in ordinary American Produce, is but little short, this year, of $300,000,000, and $65,000,000 in the produce of our Gold mines. During the quarter just mentioned Great Britain exported

To the Colonies	£8,191,090
To the United States	6,281,720
To France	1,631,672
To Germany	2,892,930
To other States	10,030,081
Total, 3 months	£28,827,493

The Land sales of the Illinois Central Company the first two weeks in June were to the value of $284,664, or 21,445 acres, at an average of $13 30 ₱ acre. The entire sales in June last year were $241,291.

London Money Market.

From the London Times, June 5.

Short loans on Government Securities were in extreme demand at from 6½@7 ₱ cent., and but for the accommodation afforded by the Bank of England the dealers would have found considerable difficulty in arranging the account.

The pressure for money and the discontinuance of purchases on account of the savings banks have caused a reaction in Exchequer-bills, which renders it not improbable that some considerable portion of the amount dated in June will be sent in for payment instead of for renewal on the 8th inst. In that case the Government balances at the Bank will have to be drawn upon, and the supply of money in the market will be temporarily increased. The final quotations to day were 4s. discount to par for the June descriptions, and par to 3s. premium for those of March.

The activity in the discount-market to-day, and the extent of the applications at the Bank consequent upon the settlement in the Stock Exchange and the ordinary commercial requirements of the 4th and 5th of the month, are believed to have been extraordinary. The amount of bills falling due to-morrow is heavy, but when these shall have been met a short period of comparative ease may possibly be experienced.

The final quotations of the French three per cents. on the Paris Bourse this evening were 69f 85c. for money and 69f. 20c. for the end of the month, showing a recovery of nearly ½ ₱ cent. The full yesterday is stated to have been caused by a forced closing of some of the accounts of needy speculators.

The price of silver is firm, at 5s. 1¾d. ₱ oz. standard, owing to the Eastern demand. The price realized for the remittance by the packet which arrived from the West Indies in the middle of last month was 5s. 1½d. ₱ oz.; but in the interval higher rates have been paid.

From the London News, June 5.

It is calculated that operators for the rise who have during the last six months maintained their position, and paid the rates of "continuation" current at each settlement, must have made a loss of about 4 ₱ cent., taking Consols at the closing quotation of to-day. It is not, therefore, matter for surprise if some of those speculators should evince a disposition to close their accounts. The pressure for money in the Stock Exchange, in connection with the monthly settlement, was to day unmitigated, as much as 8 ₱ cent. ₱ annum being paid in exceptional cases to carry over speculative purchases.

The demand for money was again active to-day in nearly all quarters, and a good commercial demand is anticipated to-morrow. In endeavoring to read the future of the market, it must not be overlooked that, although the drain of silver to the East is so severe that the next steamer is expected to take out fully a million sterling in silver, the position of the Bank of France has steadily improved. It is reported in Paris that the stock of specie and bullion held by that establishment is now 30,000,000f., or say £1,200,000 sterling, more than at the date of the last return.

Since the departure of the last packet the pressure in the London money market has been almost greater than ever. This is to be attributed to the shipment just completed of £750,000 in silver to India and China, and the preparations to transmit £1,000,000 more in the course of a fortnight. But for the unfavorable quotations of the Chinese rates of exchange, received by the last overland mail, the Bank of England would by this time have been prepared to reduce their rate of discount from 6½@6 ₱ cent. Under existing circumstances, although £600,000 of gold, long overdue from Australia, has just arrived, it is impossible to conjecture when a relaxation may take place. The tendency, notwithstanding the large exportation of silver, is rather toward an increase than a decrease in the Bank stock of bullion, but the improvement is altogether slow and uncertain. One favorable fact that has just transpired is that the bullion in the Bank of France is believed to have received an augmentation equal to more than a million sterling during the past three weeks.

In the Consol market the speculators still cling abstinately to their anticipations of the approach of better times, and therefore continue to borrow money at the rate of 6½ ₱ cent., to keep their hold upon stock which pays only 3 ₱ cent. In railroad shares and other securities the operations are less active and few new enterprises meet with the least attention or favor. The £1,000 shares of the Atlantic Telegraph Company on which £500 have been paid, are quoted at £10 or 90 discount.

Office of J. S. Reed & Co., Bankers,
Marion, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. Herring & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bitts, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the remains down to you? We feel under so much obligation to you for their protective your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

AUCTION SALES.

E. H. Ludlow, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF "CLERMONT," THE elegant country seat of the late Montgomery Livingston, at Clermont, Columbia Co., N. Y., at Auction.—E. H. Ludlow & Co. will sell at auction on WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1857, at 9 o'clock P. M., at the Mansion House (on the premises).

In pursuance of a judgment in partition.

The property consists of about 300 acres or land. On it is a mansion house built of brick and stone in the chateau style of architecture. The rooms are celebrated for their beauty and proportion. The property is so well and favorably known, having been the residence of Chancellor Livingston and afterwards of Mr. Robert L. Livingston, that a particular description is unnecessary. The house is bounded on its eastern side for a distance of nearly half a mile by the Hudson River; along the river banks clumps of fine old forest trees break the river into a variety of picturesque landscapes. On the opposite side of the river and in the background of several pretty villages, are the Catskill Mountains. The view of the mountains from this place is surpassingly beautiful, and perfectly healthy.

Its lawns, (for it has three,) avenues and trees (it is believed) are unequaled in this country.

The soil is of the very best; the garden excellent: a gardener is now working it.

There are large orchards with great varieties of fruit trees.

It lies about a mile and a half north of the Railroad Station at Tivali, Dutchess County, to which the trains run in about three hours, and where the trains stop.

The library consists of some 2,000 volumes of choice works, and will be sold at 10 o'clock A. M.

The celebrated Gobelin Tapestry hanging in the drawing-room will be sold immediately after the property.

Persons can leave New-York by one or more trains in the morning, and attend the sale or inspect the premises and return in the afternoon.

THE BONAPARTE ESTATE.—AT PUBLIC sale, on WEDNESDAY, June 24, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, New York, the extensive park and grounds of Henry Beckett, Esq., situated at Bordentown, New Jersey, formerly the property of Joseph Bonaparte, containing two hundred and thirty four acres of land. A large and very handsome modern mansion, about sixty feet square, with three story wing and requisite outbuildings, has lately been erected on the most eligible portion of the park, commanding a splendid view of the river Delaware. The house is built in an unusually substantial manner, handsomely finished throughout, and with all the conveniences of a gentleman's town residence. Its convenient position for travelling is unsurpassed, there being six or seven daily lines of communication between New York and Philadelphia, and branches to the western and northern parts of Pennsylvania, making it peculiarly eligible for a large public institution. The house is handsomely furnished throughout, and the whole of the personal property may be had if desired.—Maps, showing the location and extent, with full particulars, may be had on application to PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHI-CAGO RAILROAD COMPANY.

MORTGAGE BONDS CONVERTIBLE.

$3,500,000 FOR CONSTRUCTION. $6,500,000 FOR REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT.

Date, January 1, 1857. Principal payable January 1, 1887.

Interest at seven per cent., payable July 1 and January 1.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 465 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept. 1, 1864, and July 1, 1873, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which those three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which 3,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER, New-York, covering the Company's Road of 465 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depôt grounds, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depôt grounds of great value in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund.

The Redemption Bonds will remain under the control of the Trustees, and be issued only from time to time, as they can be exchanged for, or are required to be used to redeem the outstanding Bonds of the three Companies consolidated, and the privilege of such exchange is now extended to holders of those Bonds, and their attention is especially invited to the advantages that will result alike to the Consolidated Company and themselves by such exchange.

The Construction Bonds are offered for sale to provide means to finish the Road between Plymouth and Chicago, 93 miles, and to ballast it and equip and furnish it with a full stock of Rolling Machinery, Engine-Houses, Shops, Station-Houses, &c., the estimates for all of which are nearly $3,000,000.

The Capital Stock of the Company is fixed at...$16,000,000
The present cost of the Road is about.....13,000,000
The paid Capital is nearly.....6,000,000
The Funded debt secured on the Road is.....4,838,000

The earnings of the Road, mainly from local traffic, since the consolidation, from the 1st of August, 1856, to the 1st of May, 1857, eight months, have been over $1,330,000. The net earnings for that time are at a rate of over 7 per cent. on the entire cost of the Road. They are the earnings of an unfinished and but partially ballasted and equipped road.

The earnings for 1857 are estimated at $2,000,000.

The Road is operated for 382 miles, from Pittsburg to Plymouth, Indiana, where its business passes to and from Chicago over another more circuitous route of different gauge.

The 82 miles between Plymouth and Chicago are in progress of construction, and far advanced toward completion. Four thousand tons of American iron are purchased, 40 miles of track can be laid this season, and the whole work completed to Chicago within twelve months: after which the earnings will increase, as is believed, with the development of the business of the road, to a permanent income of $4,000,000 per annum.

The guaranties of this result are believed to exist in these facts:

1. The road has immense resources for local traffic in passengers and freights. It connects by the shortest line Pittsburg and Chicago, and passes through fourteen and 15 county towns, (including the terminal,) the valuation of whose property for taxable purposes in 1855 exceed $150,000,000—the counties embracing some of those the best developed and most productive in Ohio and Indiana, and the towns being among the most important centres of trade between Pittsburg and Chicago.

2. The road has over 15 lateral railway connections, bringing it in communication with the whole Western Railroad system—these connections conferring marked advantages to the road as a route over various and large portions of its line from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, and from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, &c. A reference to a map will more fully illustrate this point.

3. The Road is a single line, without branches, and the longest continuous Railroad in the United States, and for its whole length of 465 miles, part of a great central route, in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 818 miles from Philadelphia to Chicago, and of 906 miles from New-York to Chicago, viâ Philadelphia, and on completion of the Alleatown Road in Pennsylvania, of 895 miles only from New-York to Chicago, thus saving from 52 to 73 miles in distance viâ Philadelphia, and from 93 to 93 miles viâ Allentown, as compared with the great routes through New-York—making also the shortest route, of 798 miles viâ Harrisburg, between Baltimore and Chicago. In alignment and grades the entire line from Chicago to Philadelphia has marked advantages, no grades existing between Chicago and Philadelphia, going East, over 52 feet per mile. Between Pittsburg and Chicago no grades occur exceeding 47 feet per mile, and for 235 miles there are no grades over 26 4-10 feet per mile, and for more than that distance the route is practically a straight line. The Road, therefore, must become one of the most important, if not the most important, permanent avenues of American commerce, and its traffic will be limited only by its capacity.

4. The Road will be completed at a low cost, as compared with other leading through lines, and has corresponding advantages in grade, alignment, &c., for safe, speedy and economical operation, and easy and cheap maintenence.

A full Exhibit of the history, condition and prospects of this Road, with copies of the Bonds, Mortgages, Articles of Consolidation, &c., has been prepared and will be furnished for the information of parties desiring to invest in the Bonds.

The Company solicits a full investigation of the merits of this loan. It is offered as one in every respect worthy the attention of capitalists, and applications are now invited for the Construction Bonds, $150,000 of which have already been sold.

A subscription for $1,000,000 of the Construction Bonds, conditional on that amount being taken, with the option to subscribers of taking $2,000,000 at the same rate, is open at the office of the Company, No 37 William-st., (2d floor,) where all needful information will be furnished.

JOSEPH K. EDGERTON, Vice-President.

Office of Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company, No. 37 William-st., New-York, May, 1857.

Metropolitan Bank, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DI-rectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 2, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Options, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the instalments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the instalments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the instalment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Information, pertaining to the details of this issue, can be obtained by inquiring at the office of the Company.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, in pursuance of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the 1st day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 29th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered. (most otherwise not be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

FORT HAMILTON, BAY RIDGE AND STATEN

THE POLICE WAR.

phatically that he struck or otherwise assaulted anybody in the police office at the City Hall, on Tuesday, as charged in the warrant for his arrest issued by Recorder SMITH. The warrant has not been served upon him yet, and he is unable, he says, to account for the delay. He shows a bold front around the City Hall, and has rather invited service than otherwise. He has sent his counsel to Recorder SMITH and ascertained that a warrant had certainly been issued. To inquiry of counsel whether the Recorder would admit the Alderman to bail, the Recorder is said to have answered dubiously. The bail ought to be some $5,000, but as the party making the complaint of assault still lies in danger of his life, he (the Recorder) might deem it improper to admit any bail.

As for the facts of the alleged assault, the Alderman says that instead of assaulting any one, he prevented several from being knocked down and beaten. He declares that he arrested two men, who were making themselves active and cruel with their fists and clubs. Relative to the service of the warrant, he avers, with profane emphasis, that no Metropolitan Policeman shall arrest him. He will fight his best, and they will have to fight their best, before they take him in custody. He will allow Mayor Wood's Policemen and the five Municipal Policemen appointed by the Board of Supervisors to arrest him, and none others.

ASSAULT BY A MUNICIPAL POLICEMAN.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Thompson C. Dunn, of the City of New-York, carman, being duly sworn, says that on Wednesday, the 17th day of June, instant, between the hours of five and six in the afternoon, this deponent was in Sherwood's Restaurant, corner of Broadway and Park-place, in said county, when John Oakford, having on the uniform and star of the Municipal Police of said City, came into said restaurant, accompanied by another of said Police officers, and soon after followed by half a dozen or more of said Police; that deponent was standing in said restaurant, in conversation with several persons, when said Oakford came up; that the subject of conversation was Mayor Wood, against whom ill opinions were expressed by different persons then present; that said Oakford was not known to this deponent; that said Oakford said to deponent and others that Simeon Draper was as bad a man as Fernando Wood, and addressed deponent, and asked how he knew anything against Fernando Wood, to which deponent replied, by common report and his treatment of his partner, to which said Oakford replied: "You are a damned liar!" Deponent said, "You are a gentleman," and said Oakford immediately struck deponent a heavy blow over his right eye, which felled deponent to the ground; that deponent was stunned by the blow, and severely cut and bruised; that said Oakford had some instrument on his knuckles; that deponent, after getting upon his feet, asked said Oakford his name and number; that he replied, "Kiss my a—!" and soon left the place. That this treatment was entirely unprovoked by and unexpected to this deponent; that said Oakford was an entire stranger to this deponent, and had no conversation with him or any persons with him, other than as above stated.

THOMPSON C. DUNN, No. 53 Perry-street.

Sworn before me this 18th day of June, 1857.

JAMES M. SMITH, Recorder.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The Mayor Sustained by the Aldermen—The Board to Remain in Session Daily.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CHANCY, President, in the Chair, when the following business was transacted:

The following resolution was offered by Aldsman MCSPADON, and adopted:

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation he and he is hereby instructed to conduct the defence of any suit brought against the Mayor of the City, or against any of the Aldermen or Councilmen, whether in courts of civil or criminal jurisdiction, which have been instituted by reason of the appointment of CHARLES DEVLIN to the office of Street Commissioner, or which have grown out of or have any connection with the official action of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality, in respect of such appointment.

The following preamble and resolution was offered by Alderman MOSPENDON:

Whereas, The City has been and still continues in a state of extreme and dangerous excitement in consequence of the attempt of D. D. CONOVER, under the alleged authority of the Governor of this State, to usurp and occupy the position of Street Commissioner, which vacancy under the plain provisions of the Charter, can be supplied only on the nomination of the Mayor; and

Whereas, The said parties have since resorted to unusual and vexatious proceedings, by the issue of innumerable warrants and processes of law, requiring excessive attendants of bail, and not calculated to bring the existing controversy to any satisfactory conclusion, but to foment and increase the present popular excitement and alarm, therefore

Resolved, That this Board pledges itself to sustain the Mayor and the Municipal Authorities in every legal manner, at the existing crisis, in their efforts to vindicate the laws and charter of the City, and secure effectively the peace and order of the Metropolis.

Resolved, That this Board remain in continuol session until the termination of the existing excitement, and that we cordially tender to the Mayor our services in every legal form, as the Chief Magistrate and highest Executive officer of this City.

Alderman TUCKER hoped the resolution would not pass. There was no necessity for it. It was the duty of every Executive officer to maintain the peace, and he believed that would be done. To pass such a resolution was to increase the excitement. He had hoped the farce had been played out; they had had enough of it. Such a measure passing the Board would only tend to continue it, and therefore he was opposed to its adoption. It could see no necessity for the Boards meeting every day—they could be called together at any time when necessary.

Alderman BLUNT moved to refer it to the Law Committee. If those persons had done anything wrong, he, for one, was not willing to make himself responsible for their acts. And he saw no good reason for doing so at the present time. The motion to refer was lost. The ayes and noes were called, and the resolutions were adopted by a vote of 15 to 4.

A report directing the Chief Engineer of Fire Department to procure 75,000 feet of leather hose, was accepted, and the resolution adopted.

The following resolution was adopted;

Resolved, That the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department be, and he is, hereby authorized to take for public use any five engines not in actual service, and place the same in possession of any organized Fire Company that will work the same.

The Board then adjourned to this morning at 10 A. M.

THE POLICE WAR IN THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Argument of Charles O'Conor for the Appellants.

Points on which they base their Claims to Victory.

Mr. Evarts' Argument for the New Commissioners.

The Legal Points submitted for the Respondents;

Argument of Judge Edmonds for the Plaintiffs.

Before Hiram Denio, Chief Justice, Alexander S. Johnson, Geo. F. Comstock, Samuel L. Selden, John W. Brown, Alonzo C. Paige, Wm. H. Shankland, and Levi F. Bowen.

The People of the State of New-York, on the relation of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York, Plaintiffs and Appellants, vs. Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Chelwell, and James S. T. Stranahan, Defendants and Respondents.

The Court of Appeals was opened in the Senate Chamber, in the Capitol, on Wednesday morning, and the above case was immediately called on.

Mr. CHARLES O'CONOR commenced the argument of the case on behalf of the appellants. He commenced by dwelling on the importance of the case then submitted to the people of the State and to the inhabitants of the cities in particular. In a legal point of view, however, he considered it a very simple question, and had feared that he would find some difficulty in finding words enough to occupy the two hours given him.

Mr. O'CONOR then read the "Statement of Facts" of the appellants which we have already published. He continued by remarking that the case turned upon the question whether the Constitution was to be interpreted by the Judiciary according to its spirit, or according to its letter. Because the Constitution did not expressly forbid an offence, the respondents assumed that it was authorized by some twenty words at the end which were thus made to nullify the spirit of the whole instrument. This the appellants were prepared to deny.

Mr. O'CONOR then went into an argument in regard to the different divisions of the State, which he claimed were by fundamental law, irrespective of any Constitution, counties, cities, towns and villages with their subdivisions. Mr. O'CONOR then showed the derivation of the word county, and maintained that the police, both in this and the mother country, had always been a local institution. The Legislature, however, had undertaken to change all this, and divide the State into districts and precincts.

The counsel then proceeded to read and argue upon his various points.

In the first place, he contended that it was the office of a written constitution to declare in more effectual manner the form and framework of the Government which the supreme authority has approved. Experience has taught that this may only be done by classifying the powers of Government and vesting them in independent departments. The Constitution of 1846 does this, and therefore contains effectual guards against administrative abuse.

It created and defined, in express words, the two great administrative departments, the Legislative to frame laws, and the Executive to carry them out, without giving either of those departments the slightest influence in the choice it evoked from the original source of all power, the judicial department.

To this department, guarded as it was from all corruption, was given the power of declaring the supreme law, and of restraining all attempts to evade it. This was not done in express terms, but by inevitable implication.

Constitutions must be approached by the judiciary with the greatest reverence, but still there was room for interpretation and construction. The duty of the Court is to seek for the spirit which pervades the constitution, and interpret it in good faith accordingly.

"Construction," says a learned writer, "is the deduction of meaning from the spirit of the text, where it is not plainly referable from the letter. Let everything that is in favor of power be closely construed, but everything in favor of the liberty of the citizen be comprehensibly construed, inasmuch as power can protect itself, while the citizen needs protection. For the same reason, this writer continues, we ought always to construe comprehensively in favor of the judiciary as against the Legislature. The power of local government is subject to the supreme central power, and that central power must therefore be guarded against. After some further remarks, and an appeal to the Court to defend the judiciary in the assault now made upon it by the Legislature, and to save the City of New-York from the bloodshed and anarchy that threatened it, Mr. O'CONOR proceeded to read his second point. This related mainly to the question of the Legislature having power to abolish the divisions of counties, towns and villages. The counsel quoted several sections of the Constitution in which these divisions are recognized.

If it be true that the Legislature cannot, for general purposes, make other divisions than counties, cities, towns or villages, yet for specific purposes it was argued that they might—for taxation, or for lamp and watch districts. Thus they might take two thirds of New-York, and one third of Brooklyn, and call it an arrondissement. So for purposes of police, they might make a new coat out of two or three old coats, and redivide, and set off in scraps and parcels, and make new districts, and having thus confounded the whole subject of local government, they might get around that prohibition which forbids the alteration for purposes of general government, and the whole scheme and design of the Constitution is defeated.

The leading intent of the whole Constitution was to decentralize. Confidence in the people and distrust in those whom they have chosen appear in every line. The patronage of the Governor and the Legislature was taken away and placed in the hands of the people or of the local authorities. Even the power of "gerrymandering" was taken from the Legislature by vesting the power of forming election districts in the hands of the County authorities. But the present Legislature had hit upon a new method of gerrymandering, and there was no express negative to be quoted against it.

Third Point. The Metropolitan Police Act, in its whole scope and design, and in every one of its provisions, is repugnant to the letter and spirit of the Constitution; and it is consequently void.

I. There is a manifest intent pervading the Constitution that districts shall not be created for permanent purposes of civil government which are "new, anomalous and unknown" to the people and to the Constitution itself.

II. The Legislature cannot be permitted to defeat this design or to circumvent and overreach the provisions of the fundamental law by new and unheard-of devices.—(Warner vs. The People, 2 Denio 275.)

III. The division of the country into separate districts with powers of internal government, administered through officers chosen in and by the vicinage, is the distinguishing feature of a Free State. To carry this principle to the utmost practicable extent was a leading object of the Constitution. If all local officers may be appointed by the central power that object must fail, and each county, city, town and village, so far as official patronage is concerned, may, by Legislative magic, be reduced to the condition of an Eastern pashalic or satrapie.

IV. There is nothing in the suggestion that necessity might arise for the creation of these anomalous governmental districts. Such is not the fact. And, if it were, the people in their fundamental law have refused to acknowledge it.

1. The divisions recognized for permanent purposes of civil government contemplate society in its normal condition. The exigencies of insurrection, war, pestilence, famine, &c., invoke the military power of the State, or the employment of temporary civil agencies, not permanent officers.

2. Pilots and coast-guards of every description must always be employed in reference to natural divisions. They do not come within the idea of arbitrarily-formed local districts. Officers to attend the movement of vessels or property along the whole course of a natural or artificial stream, or even along a railroad, or in a balloon route, when one shall be established, might well be brought within the same principle.

3. Hospitals and asylums for the reception of patients without reference to the local residence of such patients, and prisons, or other public establishments of like general character, have no feature of political locality.

4. It may be conceded that many acts which have been passed for the draining of swamps, and for the building of bridges, court-houses, &c. by State appointees within the limits of particular counties, cities, towns, &c. and at their cost, are valid. These are mere temporary agencies for the performance of a single specified act. Under this head, much irritating odious abuse of the legislative power, and much virtual usurpation may occur. But the want of effectual restraint at that point, is no reason for throwing down the barriers which have been provided at others.

V. Even if the general concluding words of Art. 10, § 2, should be deemed of obscure or doubtful import, they cannot be so construed as to set aside or render inoperative all the positive provisions of the Constitution concerning local offices. The operation claimed for them would make void the first and fundamental article in the bill of rights. Const., Art. 1, § 1.

1. If these words, as probably designed by the Committee who framed the section, shall be deemed applicable to local officers only, then they must be construed reddendo singula singulis, i. e., "elected" by the people of the counties, cities, towns or villages, or "appointed" by the authorities thereof, as the Legislature may direct.

2. If they are to be applied to all officers, State or local, the same principle of construction must be followed. As to State officers, they, too, must be "elected" by the people of the whole State, or "appointed" by some state authority.

3. The construction is necessary to avoid the loathsome conclusion that the people, by an ill-worded supplement, have virtually repealed a great part of their own Constitution.

Fourth Point.—The repealing clause is inoperative.

I. The Legislature did not intend to abolish the pre-existing system, unless the new device contrived to take its place should take effect. Simple, absolute and unconditional repeal was not intended, but only substitution or repeal sub modo.—(Time vs. The State, 26 Alabama 165, 170. Fasen vs. The State, 6 English's (Ark.) R. 4, 81.)

II. The whole design and frame-work of the act depend upon the provisions which are void. In such a case, all mere incidents must fall with their principal.—(Warren vs. Charlestown, 2 Gray 84, 97, 98. Exchange Bank vs. Hines, 3 Ohio State R. 34.)

Such was a summary of the arguments which he had to urge on the part of the appellants, and he respectfully submitted to their honors that the judgment of the Supreme Court should be reversed, and judgment entered for the people.

OPENING ARGUMENT OF WM. M. EVARTS, ESQ., FOR THE RESPONDENTS.

Mr. EVARTS then addressed the Court. He agreed with Mr. O'C. in regard to the importance of the case under argument. But the inquiry into the constitutional powers of the State Government were of more importance to the people of the State than any points concerning local government or the election of mere local officers. It was in the attitude in which we regarded this particular law and the fundamental power of the State, that the importance of this case consisted.

It would be found that a great portion of the argument of the other side had been applied to preliminary matters. The major proposition of the other side was that all laws must be in consonance with the Constitution of the State; and the minor proposition that this law being repugnant to the Constitution of the State is invalid. They would claim as a converse proposition, that what was not repugnant to the Constitution of the State in legislation is valid, and that this law is not repugnant to the Constitution of the State. The first section, as well as the title of the law, announced in a plain, straightforward manner what the Legislature intended to do. Its title was "An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof." The first section carried out the first part of the title—the remaining sections were to carry out the details. Within the constitution of the police district and the attribution of duty the Court has the whole subject-matter of this act. It might be conceded that in the act there was some particular authority given in reference to particular offences, such as keeping gambling houses, &c. It would be found that the Legislature had throughout consulted the existing civil divisions of the State, and had given authority to the local Governments in respect to the raising of the money to pay the police, to declare the number of police, &c.; so that these Commissioners might be considered as officers to act under the direction of the local authorities. It rested in the power of the local authorities to defeat the operation of this law, because they were trusted to supply the whole force and operation of the act. The Supervisors had it in their power to say of what number their police should consist. The authorities of New-York might disband the present police force, and make no provision for the payment of a new police. The Supervisors of New-York could do as they had done—say that the police force should consist of only five men, but they could not at the same time say that the other police force of 800 men should be under the control of the authorities of the City; for the law said that the police force of the district should be under the control of the Commissioners. By force of this statute any officer of the Metropolitan Police could execute a warrant any where throughout the State without having his warrant indorsed by the local Magistrate. Though it was not deemed necessary to have a large police force stationed elsewhere in the State, it was thought advisable to have this central force in the Metropolitan District, so that wherever, within the State, there was riot or insurrection, there was this large topical police force that might be called on, and thus save the necessity of calling on the military.

The act was a necessary one, a proper one, a useful one, and should by no means be attributed to partisan motives or to the grasping of patronage by the Executive. Were it usual at the present day to have preambles to acts, the preamble to this one might read as follows:

"Whereas, offences against property have of late increased in and near the Metropolis, and the local establishments of nightly watch and nightly police have been found inadequate to the prevention and detection of crime, by reason of the frequent unfitness of the individuals employed, the insufficiency of their number, the limited sphere of their authority, and their want of connection and co-operation with each other; and, whereas, it is expedient to substitute a new and more efficient system of police in lieu of such establishments of nightly watch and nightly police, within the limits hereinafter mentioned, and to constitute an officer of police, which, acting under the immediate authority of one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, shall direct and control the whole of such new system of police within those limits, it is therefore enacted, &c. &c."

Such was the preamble and such were the grounds for the establishment of a police by the British Parliament in the time of GEORGE IV. In 1844 the Legislature of this State took into consideration the inefficiency of the Police in the metropolis, and passed a law establishing a day and night police. In 1845 the same State of New York further took charge of the Police, and further amended the system by making the Mayor its head and giving the appointment of the men to the Aldermen of the Wards. In 1853 this same Legislature again interfered and placed the appointing power in the hands of a Board of Commissioners appointed by the State, the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge. Has insisted that they were a Board of Commissioners appointed by the State. It is true two of those officers existed before and were only selected as such Commissioners by the Legislature. It was clear that if the Legislature could lodge that power in such three officers, it could lodge it in any other three. There was no distinction between lodging that power in three officers elected for other purposes, and lodging it in the hands of three men appointed for the purpose and holding no other office whatever. In 1857, the police system—the authority of which was so lodged—did not, it must be said, work well either for the stationary citizen or the temporary visitor. The expansion of the population of the city of New-York and of the city of Brooklyn, the population of Richmond and Westchester, also increasing, needed some adaptation of the police system peculiar to the altered circumstances. The population of these places, doing business in the city and residing elsewhere, are at one period of the twenty-four hours in one county, and at another period in another.

The law may prevent the New-York City Policemen doing duty in Brooklyn or on Staten Island, but it does not prevent the New-York rowdy fighting in a riot in Brooklyn. And what was there to prevent New-York pickpockets following a crowd into and exercising their profession in Richmond County? Why deny the upholders of the peace the privilege which its violators enjoy?

Mr. Evarts went on to say that the first point for the respondents was, that the act establishing the Metropolitan Police District is within the constitutional power of the Legislature. The State of New-York is a body politic, a political and social civil unit—the people of the State of New-York are political, uniting in the body called the State of New-York. We are citizens of the State of New-York, and between the boundaries of the feeble individual on the one side, and the powerful Government on the other, there stands no master whatever. And let me say, that the law-making is the only power necessary to Government. The Governor and the Government are the only relations necessary to civil society. Now, when the governors meet in Convention, everybody in the State is supposed to be there, with all the powers belonging to civil society, and they arrange and distribute that power, or reserve it to themselves as they think fit. They say, in effect, that we will not pass any laws encroaching upon the liberty of speech or of the press,—taking private property for public use, without compensation, and each of us are left after the Convention has done its work, with our individual rights not subject to that power or control. Our Constitution undertakes, also, to exercise certain powers of specific legislation, the whole power of the legislation which the people possess, being vested in the Legislature chosen by them, with power to pass all laws not disposed of by the Constitution. So true is this, that the Legislature is the only form in which the people can make laws, and if a body of the people themselves, in convocation, pass laws they are not legal, because they have placed themselves in the hands of the Legislature, in the Senate and Assembly, where the whole people assemble to make laws in such way as the Constitution has provided.

The subject of this act, therefore, he contended was within the control of the Legislature. The first duty of any law-making body was the protection of the peace. This was the second subdivision of their first point:

II.—The subject matter of this act is wholly within the legislative power.

The following citations of statutes and authorities show the variety, reach and scope of police powers:

See 4 Bl. Com., ch. 13, "Offences against the public health and the public peace or economy." 5 R. R. S., 881, Title Misdemeanors. 1 R. S., 818, Title, "Regulations for the Preservation of Public Health." Id. 818, "Quarantine," in the port of New-York. 2 R. S. 6, "Of the Internal Police of the State."—21 titles. Charters and Ordinances of Cities, for the prevention of fires. 2 R. S. 1813, 2d ed., 698, § 83, power to order destruction of buildings to prevent spread of fire. (18 Wend., 126, the Mayor vs. Lord. 2 Denio, 461, Russell vs. the Mayor. 5 Mass. R., 437, Commonwealth vs. Sessions of Norfolk. 9 Id. 388, Same vs. Sessions of Middlesex. And see 11 Peters, 102; Corporation of New-York vs. Miln, where the subject of Police Regulations was largely considered. 5 How. U. S. R., 504, the License Cases.)

Having disposed of those authorities, he came to the next question.

III.—That any pretence that the Act of the Legislature in question, either in form or substance, encroaches upon the Judicial or Executive power of the State as lodged by the Constitution in appropriate courts and officers.

There is no pretence that, in form or substance, it invades the individual rights of members of the State, reserved from all Government by the Constitution, or, in fact, existing at the time of its adoption; nor does it, in the remotest degree, touch the integrity or affect their harmonious relation to the State or to each other in the frame and scheme of government established and to be maintained under the Constitution.

II. It does not create, "for any permanent purposes of civil government," or for any governmental purposes, any new civil division of the State.

A civil division of a State for the purposes of government exists only when, within its limits, it has an organization and administration of separate, however subordinate and special, government.

III. The act, in intent and effect, purpose and plan, is an exercise of the police power of the State, by delegation from the State Government to a Board of Commissioners, over the population within certain existing civil divisions of the State whose local governments and magistracies are made to cooperate, in their several functions, in the execution of the legislative will.

IV. The whole control of the civil divisions of the State, of what they shall be, and how far their local legislation and administration shall reach, and how it shall be conducted, is, in the nature of the case, with the Central Government.

Whatever restrictions upon this power are claimed, must be found in the Constitution; and if there be any touching the exercise of Police power by the State throughout its borders, they must be pointed out.

V.—It may readily be conceded, without approaching the subject in hand, that whatever provisions in conservation of local rights or powers to and in the civil divisions of the State the Constitution contains, could not be avoided or defeated by legislative changes, either in the designation or bounds of these civil divisions, or in the arrangement of their magistracies and the powers of their governments. The substance remaining, the Constitution would apply, notwithstanding the change of name and form.

Sixth point.—The question is of the power of the Legislature in the police of the State and of all the parts of the State, not of the wisdom or policy of this or that exercise of such power.—Brown vs. Maryland, 12 Wheat., 439.

1. It must be admitted that the Legislature could repeal all the police powers by law vested in any local authorities.

2. It must be admitted that the Legislature could suspend to and existing system of police powers lodged in local authorities a general system regulated by State magistrates, and its force made up by State enrollments.

3. It must be admitted that this additional State system may either be applied only to parts of the State, as the Legislature may determine, or, if applied to the whole State, may be accommodated in its form, strength and pressure, to the different social needs of the various parts of the State.

4. It must be admitted that if existing local police powers can be repealed before any State system is established, such repeal may be made after, or simultaneously with, the establishment of a State system.

II. The principle of the objection of repugnancy to the Constitution made to this Act goes to the denial of the essential sovereignty of the State Government, and exalts the local authorities and the inferior civil divisions of the State into supremacy over it.

1. If, on any occasion or in any necessity, the State can exercise, of its own central vigor, and by its own official administration, the police powers set in motion by this Act, to any extent, form or effect,—if it could do so in case of famine, pestilence, invasion, insurrection, local or general—the Legislature, not the Judiciary, are vested with the power and with the discretion of its exercise.

2. If this police power of the State is abrogated by on implication arising out of the recognition of the civil divisions of the State in the Constitution, and an expressed purpose to maintain special and subordinate local administration within them, it is impossible to save the whole body of legislative power from the same fate.

No legislative measure does or can, operate, except over or within one or more of the civil divisions of the State; and there is no legislative measure of administration but what, by the authority of the State, might be confided to local officers for its conduct.

3. The reasoning on which this objection rests makes the parts of the State greater than the whole—disproves the rule by the exceptions—annihilates the mass of legislative power deposited with the Central Government, by exhibiting the fragments which have been lodged elsewhere.

Seventh Point.—The question of repugnancy of a statute with the Constitution, as a judicial question, is determinable by a comparison of the text of both, in the sensible meaning of each, interpreted so as to elicit the thought that the words express.

All considerations beyond these limits are not forensic, but deliberative—not judicial, but legislative. (Fletcher vs. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87. Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 188. Jones vs. Patten, Paige, J., 2 Seld., 12, 13. Oakley vs. Aspinwall, Bronson, J., 3 Comst., 568. The People vs. The Mayor of Brooklyn, Ruggles, J., 4 Comst., 428-9. Newell vs. The People, 3 Seld., 9. Ruggles, J., p. 84. Johnson, J., pp. 97-99. Edmonds, J., p. 109. Wells, J., pp. 124-2. The People vs. Cowles, Johnson, J., 3 Kern., 359 60. Wynehamer vs. The People, 3 Kern., 378. Comstock, J., pp. 392-3. Johnson, J., pp. 419-13. Hubbard, J., pp. 429-32. Hubbard, J., pp. 451-52. T. Johnson, J., pp. 473, 476-7. Grant vs. Courtee, Supr. Ct. Gen. Term, Wright, J., Pamphlet pp. 8, 11, 12, 14.)

The Constitution of this State is a written Constitution. No distinction can be taken between a written Constitution and what is written in the Constitution.

The notion of "the spirit of the Constitution" as something other than, or superior to, the body of the Constitution, or what is embodied in the Constitution, is either purely visionary and fanciful, or, if it be substantial, is universal judicial despotism, or absolute popular anarchy, as it may chance to shape itself.

The notion that a law may be not repugnant to any one portion of the Constitution, and yet be repugnant to the whole Constitution, is illusory.

Eighth Point.—The logic of the objection to this act for repugnancy to the Constitution has no other force or support than that it is repugnant to the second section of Art. X. of the Constitution, rightly interpreted in connection with the general frame of the Constitution in the distribution of power and of the administration of power.

I. The text of this article does not touch the subject or purview of this law.

II. The general purpose imputed to the Constitution, to decentralize power, is not in conflict with the Act.

The extent of that purpose, and the manner in which it is to be executed, are defined by the text of the Constitution itself.

It makes the entire legislative force of the State elective.

It makes the entire judicial force of the State elective.

It makes all the enumerated county officers elective, and all county town officers not enumerated elective, except as the Legislature may direct them to be appointed by the local authorities.

It leaves all village and city officers to be elected at large or by divisions, or appointed by local authorities, as the Legislature may direct.

Here the purpose of decentralization stops. The Constitution so far declares its will, and provides for its execution, in the disposition of offices: all beyond is left absolutely to the action of the Legislature. "All other officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, and all officers whose duty may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people, or appointed as the Legislature may direct." (Const., Art. X. 2.)

The effect of all this is:

(A.) To make certain offices elective by the whole State.

(B.) To make others elective in judicial, county, town, city, and village districts, and divisions.

(C.) To fill others by local election or appointment, as the Legislature may deem best.

(D.) To leave all others then existing, and not so provided for, and all others the Legislature might thereafter create, to the sovereign discretion of the Legislature.

III.—The purpose of the Constitution to decentralize power has been greatly overstated.

The executive power remains central, except as the Constitution has to a partial extent, and the Legislature may to a further extent, decentralize it.

So far as it reaches, the principle of decentralization applies equally to local offices and to those not local. The principle not being universal, its effect in each particular case must depend upon the terms of the Constitution and upon particular rather than general reasons.

Our construction, as explained and limited, does not and cannot subvert the policy of the Constitution. It only leaves to the Legislature that part of the sphere of official creation which the Constitution has not itself preoccupied.

IV.—The instances and illustrations of the power to create new offices, and new spheres of duty, and to delegate administration of governmental functions, and to provide offices and functionaries for them, otherwise than by local election or appointment, presented by the legislation of the State since the adoption of the Constitution, are numerous.—See Statutes cited in Supplement to Points —(infra.)

Ninth Point.—The objection to the act on the ground that the fifteenth section "invades private property without compensation," does not arise on this quo warranto, but the section is not open to this animadversion.

Tenth Point.—The relator is without title to the office, on the ground that the new law (1857) is Constitutional, or that the old law (ch. 228, Laws 1853) is unconstitutional.

He was not elected a Police Commissioner.

He was not appointed by any local authority.

If the function of Police Commissioners is an office, a person must be elected or appointed to fill it; attaching it ex officio to another office would not be to elect or appoint, but would be a mere evasion. And if it is not an office per se, a quo warranto will not lie to oust an intruder and admit the relator. If the office is that of Mayor, or Recorder, or City Judge, it is an answer to the action that the defendants are not alleged to have intruded into the office of Mayor, City Judge, or Recorder.

Eleventh Point.—The judgment should be affirmed.

DAVID DUDLEY FIELD,
JOSHUA M. VAN COTT,
WM. CURTIS NOYES,
WILLIAM M. EVARTS,
FRANCIS B. CUTTING,
} Of Counsel for Respondents.

The time of adjournment having arrived, Mr. EVARTS suspended his argument until the afternoon session.

The evening session of the Court commenced at 4 o'clock P. M., when Mr. Evarts concluded his argument, and was followed on the same side by Mr. Cutting, who spoke till the adjournment of the Court.

PROCEEDINGS YESTERDAY.

Yesterday morning the Court assembled at 9½ o'clock, when Judge Edmonde rose to make the concluding argument on the part of the appellants. He observed that if, in the course of his remarks, he should fail to give to the arguments of counsel on the other side the attention which they deserved, he trusted it would be attributed to the right cause—the limitation of time to which he was bound. He would first notice the tenth point of the respondents, in which they aver that the relator is without title, as he was not elected a Police Commissioner. He submitted that, on a quo warranto, it was of no moment for the Court to pass upon the title of the relator, being a matter with which they had no concern.

If he were reasoning with the Legislature on the propriety of passing, he could not present the necessity for such a law in more glowing colors than had been done by the counsel on the other side. With reference to the anarchy now prevalent in New-York, the bloodshed and strife, he charged it on the law which he now had under discussion. The counsel had asserted that there was in the hands of the Legislature power to provide no police for this great State. He was not there to question that power, but to insist that out of the letter and spirit of the Constitution there was a limitation of those powers. He conceded that there was a general power in the Legislature for establishing a police for the State, but what he contended for was that there was no provision for an independent police, subsisting irrespective of local authority, and the appointment of such a police was, he maintained, an infraction of the Constitution. He would concede the power of the Legislature to create new territorial divisions in the State, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the Constitution. The power of the State to incur debt, for instance, was unquestioned, but the Constitution placed a restriction upon it, and a question arising from that restriction had once been passed upon in that Court.

The Legislature might change the boundaries of counties, but the Constitution provided that no new county should be erected. It has been argued that the Legislature might centralize the Police force; the Chief of Police might reside at Albany, and he might have a deputy in each town, who might take their orders from Albany. This would indeed be a State Police, and though no violation of the Constitution, would be found to be impracticable. The Albany Chief would soon become a cipher; his local deputies would act independently of him, and the office would continue a local one.

It has been urged that the Legislature might repeal all the Police Laws relating to the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, without meeting the restrictions of the Constitution. Is this such an act? You may repeal police laws without meeting such restrictions, but in the enactment of a new law, appointed to such and such duties, you meet, as we contend, the restrictions of the Constitution, and override them, as is done with the present law.

Another objection made by the counsel is, that there is no express prohibition in the Constitution—nothing prohibiting the Legislature from passing such a law as this. There certainly is something in the Constitution with reference to the election or appointment of local officers; and it is for us to find out what that something is. The spirit of the Constitution must be studied to get at its meaning in any particular instance. There was not a deed or document produced in a court of law that had not to be studied for its spirit as much as for the letter. Judge Story and others had written on this point, that where ambiguity occurred in the wording of the Constitution, which is in fact a prohibition. The learned gentleman referred their Honors to several cases from the law books, in support of this proposition, and proceeded to enforce it, with great earnestness, and at great length, depicting the direst consequences to the liberties of the people from this attempt of the Albany Legislature to centralize all power in their hands.

Mr. Evarts pressed for an early decision of the case, in view of the present state of affairs in the City. The Chief Justice replied that the Court was fully aware of the importance of an early decision.

The case was then left with the Judges, who will render their decision probably during the next week.

THE LATE RIOT.

Mayor Wood's Interview with Gov. King

THAT BOGUS "STORMY CONFERENCE."

Who is Street Commissioner?

Mr. Conover Couldn't See the Mayor to Submit his Sureties.

IMPORTANT LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

Commissioner Cholwell Arrested and Alderman Wilson Bailed.

IS MAYOR WOOD RESTRAINED OF HIS LIBERTY?

Mr. Conover Prepares a Quo Warranto.

The City Flags Hoisted Over the City Hall Yet.

The late riot in the Park continues to be the town talk, though by 3 P. M. of yesterday, all the Policemen had been ordered away from the City Hall, though the Mayor went home alone at 3½ P. M., though there was no crowd about any of the public buildings that so late were the head-quarters of the contestants, though the Street Commissioner's Office was open as usual for ordinary business, Mr. Devlin acting in the place of the late Joseph S. Taylor, Esq., and though there was nothing but the tattered City flags still flying to remind one of the Mayor's victory. There was nothing generally talked about but the Mayor's riot. There was some questioning why the flags were flying. They were not hoisted until near night of the famous Tuesday, the keeper averring that they had forgotten in the turmoil that it was the battle of Bunker Hill Anniversary. His memory served him about the hour that the Sheriff served the habeas corpus. They were kept flying all day Wednesday, the keeper averring that he wanted to get them dry. They were flying all night and yesterday through the whole of the storm. Whether they were dry at 9 o'clock when they were taken in we have failed to discover.

MAYOR WOOD'S CONFERENCE WITH GOV. KING.

Ex-Alderman Sturtevant, who, under the circumstances, ought to know, assures us that what was published as the Meyor's version of the interview with the Governor, was inaccurate in several respects. In the first place he says the Governor did not seek the interview, and, therefore, did not send "two of his personal and political friends" as Ambassadors to his Honor to ask for it. The way it came about was this: Mr. Charles Stetson, of the Astor House, called on Mayor Wood to request his approval of an ordinance lately passed by the Common Council, in favor of narrowing the sidewalk in Vesey-street by St Paul's Church-yard. Mr. Stetson—it was a business transaction—mentioned that Gov. King was at the Astor House, and doubtless would be heppy to receive a call from Mr. Wood. Mr. Stetson, soon after he left the Mayor, met Mr. Sturtevant, and said: "Mr. Sturtevant, you are acquainted with the Meyor. I wish you would see him about that bill, and at the same time invite him to come and see the Governor." Mr. Sturtevant assenting, went over to the Mayor's Office about 1¾ o'clock. After speaking awhile of the ordinance, Mr. S. mentioned that the Governor was at the Astor House, and that he (Mr. S.) would be glad if the Mayor would go over and pay His Excellency a visit of courtesy. The Mayor said he would be happy to do so, for he had very pleasant recollections connected with the Governor, but he was fearful that his visit would be misconstrued, for the papers had published a rumor that the Governor intended to turn him out of office. Mr. S. advised him to be above the effect of rumors, telling him that as the Chief Magistrate of the City it was his duty to call on the Chief Magistrate of the State who was his superior officer, and render his respects. The Mayor agreed to go. Mr. S.'s carriage was at the door, but the Mayor declining it, took Mr. S.'s arm, and they walked over to the Astor House, where the Mayor was introduced to the Governor. Gov. King sat down on a sofa with him and they entered into conversation. Commissioner James G. Bowen was in the room when Mayor Wood entered, but he hurriedly left—without speaking to any one, leaving no one in the room with the Governor and Mayor, but James G King, Jr., the Governor's nephew.

When Commissioner Draper met the Governor, a few minutes after the Mayor left, the Governor informed him of the interview, saying that their conversation had been guarded. Relative to the affairs of the City the Mayor had expressed his views at length, defending the position he had taken, remarking that he was a law-abiding and order-loving citizen. The Governor signified his disapproval of the Mayor's course, but was glad that he had an appreciation for law and order, and said he should hold him responsible for it. He told him, substantially, that he was pleased with the pacific measures adopted by Gen. Sandford and the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, as well as with the course of Mr. Conover. The Mayor told him that Mr. Conover had failed to comply with the requisitions of the ordinance of 1849, requiring him to give two sureties of $10,000 each, to be filed in the Comptroller's Office, and to receive the Mayor's approval. The Governor confessed that he had not been so informed, and with mutual expressions of personal good feeling, they separated.

General Nye says that the Commissioners and Mr. D. D. Field met the Governor on his arrival at the Astor House, where they had a supper provided, at which the Governor sat down with them. Previous to the supper, Commissioners Draper and Nye retired into a private room with the Governor, and gave him a detailed account of all that had been done in relation to the Street Commissioner's office, and the disturbances which had taken place. The Governor expressed his entire approval of their course—there was nothing of an unpleasant nature between them. The General added that the statement of the Herald was utterly false.

THAT BOGUS AND "STORMY CONFERENCE."

The Herald published what purported to be the "stormy proceedings" of a conference of Commissioners Draper and Nye with Gov. King, on the night of his arrival in the City. The Governor is represented to have been very wroth at his summons to come on from Boston, disapproving entirely of the course of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners in the late troubles, and of Mr. Conover's endeavors to gain possession of the Street Commissioner's Office. Mr. Draper says that the report, like every other in that paper, on the same subject, is altogether untrue and imagined to order by the "little reporter." On the other hand, says President Draper, there was no "stormy conference;" we laid the matter before the Governor, and when he had heard the whole, he expressed unqualified approval of all that had been done,—both by the Police Commissioners and by Mr. Conover.

It is a little curious who could have informed the Herald of the "stormy conference." Our reporter and one other (who certainly was not from the Herald) were in the room with the Governor until President Draper, Commissioner Nye and His Excellency retired to a private room, and without any witnesses conferred. As neither one of the party of three would be likely to report the matter to the Herald, the source of our neighbor's information is a profound marvel to the town. To our reporter at midnight of Wednesday, (just before the conference,) and again next morning, (several hours after it,) the Governor expressed his satisfaction with the proceedings of the Commissioners of Police.

ALDERMAN WILSON PLACES HIMSELF IN CUSTODY.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday morning, Alderman WILSON, accompanied by his counsel, entered the Court. The counsel, addressing the Recorder, said that the Alderman, having heard that a warrant had been issued against him, on a charge of riot, had, like a good citizen, come to deliver himself into custody without waiting for the execution of the warrant. He was ready to give bail to any amount the Recorder might require.

The Recorder immediately ordered him to find bail in the sum of $5,000. CHARLES DEVLIN, the Mayor's appointee for Street Commissioner, was on hand and gave the required securities.

DID MR. CONOVER SUBMIT HIS SURETIES TO THE MAYOR?

The Mayor, in his interview with Governor King, made this strong point against Mr. Conover:—that the latter had failed to submit to him his sureties as required by the law. One of our reporters called upon Mr. Conover, yesterday, and received from him the following statement of the attempts made by himself to submit his sureties to the Mayor, and how it had happened that the sureties were not submitted.

On Saturday last Mr. Conover, having obtained the bonds and sureties, with the signatures to them as required by the statute, preliminary to entering upon the duties of the office of Street Commissioner, to which he had been newly appointed, he proceeded to the Mayor's office to present the sureties in due form to the Mayor. This was about 11 A. M. He entered the outer office and sent in a message to the Mayor, announcing his desire to see him. Word was returned that the Mayor was very much engaged, and that it would be some time before he would be at liberty. He waited half an hour when he sent in a second message avowing that he had very important official papers which he wished to lay before the Mayor. An immediate response came back to this second message, declaring that the Mayor could not see him (Mr. Conover) nor anybody else that day.

These messages were conveyed back and forth through the door leading from the main office into the Mayor's private office. Upon the receipt of this latter message Mr. Conover thought it unnecessary to tarry longer, and immediately proceeded to take his departure. On his way through the narrow hall leading from the main office to the outer entrance, he saw that parties were having access to the Mayor through a side door communicating from the entrance-way to the Mayor's office. He tried to get through this door, but Mr. Matsell, Chief of the Police, who was standing by the door, commanded some policemen in attendance not to let a living soul inside. He afterwards discovered, however, that parties were allowed to pass freely to and from the Mayor through this door. All efforts to get admitted being unavailing he went away.

At 2 P. M., Mr. Conover called again at the Mayor's office and asked Mr. Ming, who was present writing, if he was the Mayor's clerk, to which Mr. Ming gave an affirmative response. Mr. Conover said that he wished to see the Mayor, to leave some official papers with him. Mr. Ming replied that it would answer every purpose to leave the papers in his care. He then showed Mr. Ming his commission from Governor King, appointing him Street Commissioner, with the seal of State attached thereto, and his bonds and the names of the sureties. Mr. Matsell, Chief of Police, seeing Mr. Ming looking at the papers, told him he should not receive any papers from Mr. Conover, nor look at any papers of his—it was dangerous business. Mr. Ming handed the papers back, and thereupon Mr. Conover went immediately away and filed his bonds with the Comptroller, and was sworn into office.

THE POSITION OF MR. CONOVER.

Mr. Conover, on the other hand, asserts that Section 19 of the Charter of 1857, is to be interpreted as referring to the powers of the Mayor, who shall be elected after the term of the present Municipal Chief Magistrate shall have expired. The 51st section of the Charter directs that the Mayor, &c., provided for in that Act, shall be elected at the first election of Charter officers to be held after its passage, and that such election shall take place on the first Tuesday of December, 1857, six months hence. By the Statute passed Feb. 3, 1849, relative to the power of the Governor to fill vacancies "where no provision is now made by law for filling the same," it is held that Mr. Conover, the appointee of the Governor, is entitled to take possession of the office. There is no provision in the Charter for filling vacancies in the office of Street Commissioner, and this is a significant fact taken in connection with the provisions of the law of 1849, both parties claiming their appointment under the new Charter.

Attorney-General Cushing had given his consent (which was requisite in the premises) for a quo warranto to issue commanding Mr. Develin to appear and show by what authority he is exercising the functions appertaining to the Office of Street Commissioner. The papers were yesterday being prepared by Mr. Conover's counsel, for this exceedingly important proceeding in law.

Mr. Develing had been expecting to have the papers served upon him all day, but that they had not arrived. He said that he had heard on good authority that they were all drawn up and ready the night before, and it was his opinion that the only object of Mr. Conover in procuring them to be issued was to intimidate him.

The alleged error of Mr. Conover was his omission to file his bond, in the sum of $10,000, with sureties approved by the Mayor in accordance with the following provision of the Ordinance of 1849:

That part of the ordinance which prescribes the steps to be taken by the Street Commissioner before entering upon the duties of his office, is found in section one hundred and fifty-seven of Chapter I of Article II of Title IV of Part II of the Act, and is as follows:

SEC. 157. The Street Commissioner, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall execute a bond to the Corporation, with at least two sureties, to be approved by the Mayor, and filed in the office of the Comptroller in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of his office.

SUPREME COURT—JUNE 19.

Before Judge Peabody.

Yesterday Messrs. Field & Sluyter, Attorneys for Daniel D. Conover, recently appointed Street Commissioner to fill vacancy occasioned by the death of Joseph S. Taylor, presented the following petition of Mr. Conover to Judge PEABODY:

To Hon. Charles A. Peabody, one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York:

The petition of Daniel D. Conover, of said City, respectfully shows that Joseph S. Taylor was elected to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York in November, 1855, and entered upon the duties of said office in January thereafter, and continued therein until June 9, 1857, when he died; that your petitioner was, on the 12th day of June, 1857, duly appointed and commissioned by the Governor of the State of New-York to fill the vacancy in that office, occasioned by the decease of the said Joseph S. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner; that your petitioner has accepted the said appointment, and has duly taken and filed his oath of office, has duly executed with sufficient sureties, and filed the necessary official bond, and has done, as he is advised and believes, everything necessary to be done by him to qualify himself for exercising the duties of said office; that appertaining to the said office is a large quantity of books and papers, maps and documents of various descriptions; that such books, papers, maps and documents have come into the hands of one Charles Develin, and are in his possession.

That your petitioner has demanded the same from him, but that he withholds the same and refuses to deliver them to your petitioner, claiming himself to be the Street Commissioner, under an alleged appointment to that office by the Meyor and Aldermen of said City.

Your petitioner therefore prays that the said Devlin may be ordered to show cause before you, on the 23d inst., at noon, at the Chambers of the Justices of this Court, at the City Hall, in the City of New-York, why he should not be compelled to deliver the said books, papers, maps and documents to your petitioner.

And your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

D. D. CONOVER.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Daniel D. Conover, the above petitioner, being sworn, saith that he has read the foregoing petition by him subscribed, and that the same is true, to his own knowledge.

D. D. CONOVER.

JAMES T. FARR, Commissioner of Deeds.

On the above petition, Judge PEABODY made the annexed order:

SUPREME COURT.

On the foregoing petition, let Charles Devlin, therein named, show cause before me, on the 23d inst., at 12 o'clock M., at the Chambers of the Justices of this Court, in the City Hall of the City of New-York, why he should not be compelled forthwith to deliver to the petitioner the books, papers, maps and documents belonging or appertaining to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York.

Dated June 19, 1857. C. A. PEABODY.

HOW GOVERNOR KING REGARDS MR. CONOVER'S COURSE.

Mr. Conover states very emphatically that Governor King expressed hearty approval of his (Mr. Conover's) course relative to the Street Commissionership. He called upon the Governor, at the Astor House. The Governor grasped both of his hands heartily, as he entered, telling him he liked the way he had acted. In the course of the interview Governor King alluded to what had been said by the Mayor relative to his failure to submit his sureties to the Mayor for approval. Mr. Conover explained how he attempted to submit the papers in question. Ex-Judge King, the brother of the Governor, who was present, at once stated that the sureties had been submitted to the extent of the requirements of the law. The Governor was pleased to hear the explanation, and concurred with his brother, the Ex Judge, in the opinion he expressed upon the matter.

A PLUG-UGLY LOOK.

The Recorder is said to have taken umbrage at some remarks made by Judge Dean, relative to his official career and character, in the argument, on Wednesday, about the warrants served upon Mayor Wood. The Ex-Judge states that he heard yesterday that the Recorder had intimated an intention to horsewhip him and pull his (the Ex Judge's) nose. The Judge says that he sent word to the Recorder that he was ready to meet him at any time and place, and efford any needed opportunity for the application of a horsewhip, or for a nose-twisting. The Recorder had not yet put in his rejoindar.

WHO IS STREET COMMISSIONER?

After all the excitement, the broken heads and anticipations of riot, of the past few days, the controversy concerning the Street Commissioner's office is at best reduced to the form of a calm, dispassionate and orderly suit at law. The passions aroused have been quieted, and proceedings in the nature of a quo warranto are about to be taken, which will bring the matter to a speedy decision before a judicial tribunal. If, after an examination, upon a writ duly issued, requiring Mr. Develin, the present incumbent, de facto, to show by what authority he exercises the functions of Street Commissioner, it should be decided that Mr. Conover is Street Commissioner, de jure, nothing can prevent his taking his office immediately. If, on the other hand, it should be decided that Mr. Devalin is entitled to the position, there will be nothing left the opposing party but to acquiesce in the judgment rendered. So the proceedings which are being taken by Mr. Conover, as detailed below, are the hinge on which this whole matter must ultimately turn. The important step that has been taken in regard to the succession in the office vacated by the decease of Mr. Taylor will be the issuing of this quo warranto, as by far the most important measure which has yet been adopted in that other matter, intimately connected with that under consideration, which has recently exercitated the public mind,—Mayor Wood's resistence to the service of judicial process,—was the order granted by Judge Hoffman, in the Superior Court, day before yesterday, commanding the Mayor to appear and show cause why he should not be committed as for a contempt. These two proceedings in Court, and the decision of the Court of Appeals, will probably settle finally the matters which have caused all the recent excitement. Meantime the parties who have been the most interested in the embroilment in relation to the Street Commissioner's office stand, two of them (Messrs. Devlin and Turner) on the Meyor's side of the bone of contention, and one (Mr. Conover) supported by those who interpret the law as Governor King does.

POSITION OF MR. DEPUTY TURNER.

Mr. Deputy Turner at the Street Commissioner's office, who has retired from the position which he at first took, that he was entitled to succeed Mr. Taylor, and that no person could be appointed either by the Governor or by the Mayor to fill the office during the remainder of the late incumbent's unexpired term He seems to have sacrificed his own convictions to his friendship for the Mayor, and to a desire to prevent the further complication of affairs. Probably he to-day believes he is entitled to the office until Jan. 1, 1859. The ground on which he assumed the control of the Street Commissioner's Department, immediately upon the decease of Mr. Taylor, was undoubtedly correct; the only point on which he disagreed with Mayor WOOD was concerning the period that he was entitled to retain it. The following is that portion of the act passed by the Common Council, approved by the Mayor May 30, 1849, entitled "An Ordinance organizing the Departments of the Municipal Government of the City of New-York and prescribing their powers and duties," upon which Deputy Turner claimed to be the head of the Street Commissioner's Office on Mr. Taylor's death, ipso facto, without any action on the part of the appointing power; it occurs at Part II., Title iv., art. ii.:

Chap. II., sec. 155. In case of a vacancy in the office of the Street Commissioner, the Deputy shall act as Street Commissioner until the vacancy shall be supplied by a new appointment, and until the person appointed shall be duly qualified.

"Under this section," said Mr. Turner, "I could not surrender the office to Mr. Conover, even if he was rightly appointed, until he had given his bonds to the Mayor and been duly qualified. I succeeded Mr. Taylor at his decease, and when Mr. Develin had been appointed and his sureties approved by the Mayor, I immediately acquiesced." The new Commissioner has no power to appoint a new Deputy: the Deputy appointed by the old Commissioner on his accession was appointed for the whole term, and cannot be removed except for probable cause.

Upon Section 51 of the Charter of 1857 Mr. Turner founds his claim to the office for the remainder of Mr. Taylor's term:

"Sec. 51. The Mayor, Alderman and Councilmen, provided for in this act, shall be elected at the first election for Charter officers, to be held after the passage hereof, which election shall take place on the first Tuesday of December, 1857; all persons who shall have been elected under former laws regulating or affecting the election of Charter officers, and shall be in office at the time of the passage of this act, shall continue in office until the officers elected under this act shall take office, and no longer, except that the offices of Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies, and of Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, are hereby abolished, and except that the persons now filling the several offices of Comptroller, Counsel to the Corporation, Street Commissioner, and City Inspector, and the officers of the Croton Aqueduct Department shall continue in office until the expiration of their several terms, and shall not be removed from office during such continuance, except for the cause and in the manner provided for in sections Nos. 20 and 49 of this act, and all other Charter offices and all School officers, and each Governor of the Almshouse, whose term of office may expire with the present municipal year, shall be also elected on the day before provided for this section."

Mr. Turner held that, under the above provision, the Street Commissioner and other officers shall continue in office (dead or alive) until the expiration of their present terms; he, as the representative of the late incumbent, would remain Street Commissioner until January 1, 1859. But Mr. Turner assured our Reporter yesterday that he has no intention of pressing his view of the matter, and is quite willing to retain his present position of Deputy Commissioner.

THE POSITION OF MR. DEVELIN.

We gave an exposition of the grounds on which Mr. Develin claims that his appointment was valid, on Thursday. Mayor Wood claims the right to fill the vacancy, because section 19 of the new charter provides that the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, shall appoint all the municipal heads of Departments other than the Comptroller and Counsel to the Corporation, who, with the Mayor, are by that instrument to be elective officers. Mayor Wood, claiming to act in accordance with the provisions of the new charter, under protest, holds that this section relates back to the present Mayor in the case of the vacancy in this office, and gives him the appointing power.

THE (NEW) POLICE COMMISSIONERS

At the office in White-street only a few policemen were present, yesterday, and there was no crowd in front of the building, owing, probably, as much to the unpropitious weather as to anything else.

About 10 o'clock the Commissioners entered the building, and, after a brief consultation with the Deputy-Superintendent, retired, with their Clerk, to their own room, where they organized for business and remained in session for some time.

After the usual formal business, and the transaction of private matters relating to the Commission, the following-named persons were appointed and sworn in as members of the Metropolitan Police Department:

J. H. Polly, Jas. Tennant, Andrew Houston, J. D. Berkwell, John N. Merrill, Wm. Clinton, (for Nineteenth Ward,) Alexander James, (Nineteenth Ward.)

Below stairs, in the Deputy's office, the Ward returns were received as usual. There were not many items of interest on them.

Sergeant Cameron reported that he visited the Seventeenth Ward Station-House at 7½ o'clock Monday evening, but was refused the right to promulgate his orders to the men by Capt. Letts. He then attempted to speak to the men as they came out, but they would not hear him; for as soon as they reached the street, they set up cheering for Fernando Wood.

He then proceeded to the Seventeenth Precinct Station-House, corner of Third-street and Bowery, where at 8¾ o'clock officers Horatio B. Park, Christopher Graham and William Montross, reported themselves to him. He adds that in all probability some three or four more will come over.

Captain Squires reported as follows:

"The addition of eight men to my patrol force last night enabled me to enter upon a more systematic and efficient course of duty in the District than formerly. All is quiet thus far, and I hope to be able to preserve the peace and enforce order."

Capt. Turnbull notes the arrest of Alderman Wilson, by policeman Mount, on a charge of assault and battery, preferred by Thomas Dutcher.

On the other Ward returns arrests for drunkenness, disorderly conduct, &c., are noted.

AT THE SIXTH WARD STATION.

Sergeant HIX, of the Seventeenth Precinct, called last evening at the Sixth Ward Station-house, and desired to read an order from the new Commissioners. Capt. Dowling prevented him doing so. Lieut. Dix then repaired to the sidewalk, and summoned all who favored the new law, to report themselves at No. 88 White-street this morning. All the force declared for the old Board and Sergeant Hix retired.

THE WOUNDED.

By order of the Commissioners, Deputy Carpenter will to-day issue an order to the various Captains, desiring them to report daily for the future the names and condition of any under their command who may be injured while in the discharge of their duty.

The physician reported yesterday that all the wounded except Crofut were doing well, and would probably recover. Mr. Loftus is likewise reported as improving.

In relation to Mr. Crofut, the following additional facts have been learned:

Yesterday he seemed to be a little easier. He had slept well the night previous, though on the whole, no great alteration had taken place since the preceding day. His family have been greatly annoyed with visitors, and Mr. C. has been disturbed by persons who pretend to call by authority. As early as 3 o'clock yesterday morning the family were aroused at the loud rapping on the door by the roundsman of the old Police, who wanted to know if Mr. C. was yet alive. His physician, Dr. Bigelow, has taken charge of the case, at the request of Coroner Perry. Mr. Jones, said our informant, called and told the family that unless they had him as physician Mr. C. would lose his pay, as he could only be paid by the Doctor's authority. In consequence of these annoyances Captain Heartt has detailed an officer at the house, with orders to keep out both friend and foe, as it is absolutely important the sick man should be kept quiet. Mr. Crofut recognizes a man named Andrew Mulligan as the one who assaulted him.

The following amounts have been received at the TIMES Office, for the aid of the wounded policemen:

ARREST OF COMMISSIONER CHOLWELL ON A CHARGE OF THREATENING MAYOR WOOD'S LIFE.

On Thursday an Irish tailor, named Patrick Garvin, made an affidavit before City Judge RUSSELL, that he had heard Jacob Cholwell, one of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, threaten to take the life of Mayor Wood, and prayed that he (Cholwell) might be forthwith arrested to prevent him carrying out his threat. A warrant was at once granted, and placed in the hands of one of the Deputy Sheriffs, who yesterday arrested Mr. Cholwell, and brought him before Justice Connolly. The affidavit of Garvin, which reads as follows, was then read to the accused:

State of New-York, City and County of New-York, ss.—Patrick Garvin, of the Eighth Ward of the City and County of New-York, doing business as a clothier at No. 383 Hudson-street, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That on the 17th day of June, 1857, at the New World House, in Hudson-street, in the said City and County of New-York, he heard Jacob Cholwell, who claims to be one of the Metropoliton Police Commissioners, say and threaten he would plunge or run a dirk-knife into the heart of Fernando Wood; and at the time of said threat, said Cholwell opened the breast of his coat and showed the handle of said knife to deponent; that said Cholwell, at such time, said he was armed to the teeth with pistols; that he was very violent against and abusive of said Fernando Wood. Deponent believes, from said Cholwell's manner, action and threats, that if he is not arrested and held in bonds to keep the peace towards the said Wood, that he will put his said threats in execution, by stabbing or running a knife into the said Wood.

P. GARVIN.

Sworn before me this 18th day of June, 1857.

A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.

Mr. Cholwell deigned no reply to the charge, merely saying he would enter into recognizances, and that his bondsman was present.

Justice Connolly said laughingly, Very well, Sir, that's all right. I shall bind you to keep the peace to the people of New-York in general, and Fernando Wood, in particular, for the space of twelve months, in the sum of $5,000. Mr. Johnson, (addressing the Clerk,) you will please fill out the necessary papers."

Thereupon Mr. Louis S. Fellowes, of No. 103 Second-avenue, stepped forward as security, and made oath to being owner, "over all his debts and liabilities," of the sum of $5,000.

The papers were then signed by the respective parties, and Mr. Cholwell and Mr. Fellowes retired.

These proceedings were had very quietly, and only a few persons were present.

IS MAYOR WOOD IN THE CUSTODY OF THE SHERIFF?

It is a great mystery to many whether Mayor Wood is, at the present time, in the custody of the Sheriff or not. In the numerous legal processes served by the Mayor's counsel, and still waiting to be adjudicated, the Mayor certainly is spoken of as restrained of his liberty, by James C. Willet, Shariff for the City and County of New-York. On the other hand, the Mayor has repeatedly declared that he is not in the custody of the Sheriff, but enjoys the fullest and most complete liberty. One of our reporters called yesterday upon the Mayor, (the "fountain-head of information," at which, on Thursday, he advised our reporters always to apply for correct facts concerning himself,) and asked respectfully his explanation. Our reporter referred to the petition of the Mayor's counsel for the habeas corpus, still pending, wherein it is stated that he is "restrained of his liberty," and wished to know how the same was to be reconciled with his personal statements to the contrery.

"O," said the Mayor, "the petition spoken of is simply drawn up in the usual form—a mere legal fiction—nothing more."

"But perhaps," ventured our reporter, hoping his remark might be deemed facetious, "the whole thing is a fiction."

"Not entirely so," responded the Meyor. "But one thing is very certain, I am not in the custody of the Sheriff at the present time, neither have I been heretofore. I have gone home alone in my carriage every night, and returned to my office alone in the morning. I have gone when I pleased and where I pleased, and shall continue to go when and where I please."

Then our reporter modestly withdrew.

It was but a step to the Sheriff's office.

REPORTER—(to the Sheriff)—"The Mayor, I suppose, remains in your custody still?"

SHERIFF—"Yes, he is still in my custody, and will remain so till the present habeas corpus is disposed of."

The able conversation that ensued between the Sheriff and our reporter elicited no facts of interest additional to those already made public. Readers must solve for themselves, from what appears above, the really mysterious question, "Is Mayor Wood in the custody of the Sheriff?"

The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met, yesterday, at 10 o'clock, according to adjournment, but did not transact any business. They adjourned till 2 P. M.

At the 2½ o'clock session of the Board of Aldermen, Alderman MONEGHAN in the Chair,

Alderman TUCKER moved a further adjournment to Monday. He afterwards withdrew the motion, in order to allow the reception of a report.

The report of a Committee on Finance was then brought up, authorizing D. T. Valentine, Esq., Clerk of the Common Council, to prepare a map of the original grants of land on this island, as a valuable historical addition to the City archives, and allowing him a clerk for that purpose, at $3 per day.

The Report was unanimously concurred in.

The Board then adjourned to Monday at 5 o'clock

Southern Opposition to Governor Walker—Santa Ana's Probable Return to Mexico—A Utah Judgeship Accepted—The California Mail Contract, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 19.

The Georgia Democratic State Convention, to be held on the 24th inst., will denounce Governor WALKER's proceedings in Kansas.

General VIDAL, SANTA ANA's father-in law, has written to SANTA ANA's friends that the former Dictator of Mexico will be again in Vera Cruz in less than ninety days.

It is now not considered probable that either BIRCH or the Express Companies will get the California Overland Mail Contract. X. Y. Z.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 19.

A telegraphic dispatch has been received from EMERY D. POTTER, accepting one of the vacant Utah Judgeships. He is an ex-member of Congress from Ohio. The other judgeship has been offered to Mr. ECKLES, of Indiana, who will probably accept. It is uncertain whether Judge STILES, who is now here, will return to the Territory. A well founded report assigns the marshalship of Utah to THOMAS H. DUNN, of Mississippi. Col. CUMMINGS will again be tendered the Governorship, and his acceptance is considered certain.

The California Overland Mail question, after undergoing thorough consideration in the Cabinet, has been referred to the Postmaster-General, who is not yet prepared to pronounce a decision. The impression prevails, however, that the Southern route will be selected, commencing at Memphis, and continuing by way of Forts Smith, Donna Anna, and Fort Yuma. The object is to have the route through country susceptible of easy settlement, and which will not be interrupted by heavy snow. Some of the bidders desire to be heard before the Postmaster-General before he shall finally dispose of the question.

Information has been received to the effect that the Spanish Government has prolonged to the 31st of December the exemption previously accorded to all vessels arriving in Spain from foreign ports with flour, grain, beans, and other mealy substances; but the exemption from all duty can only be enjoyed when the whole cargo consists of these substances. Several instances have occurred of vessels being made to pay full duties in consequence of their having on board a few staves or other trifles.

From a document recently received at the State Department, relative to the observations of the British squadron in the West Indies, it appears the fact has been ascertained, beyond a doubt, that the "Salmedina Bank" extends further to the eastward that it is laid down in the chart by nearly two miles.

Costa Rica's Claims to the Transit not to be Admitted—Policy of Mr. Buchanan's Administration relative to Central American Affairs Established.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 18, 1857.

The President has taken a decided stand in regard to the interference of Costa Rica with the Nicaraguan Transit, and has declared that her claims to the Transit, whether founded upon conquest or a disputed boundary, shall not be admitted. This is a bold determination, and implies an entirely new policy on the part of the Government—to wit: the assumption of a direct control over the Central American States and their affairs.

It is a declaration of the very policy which, it had been supposed, Mr. BUCHANAN would have most especially avoided.

The Crampton-Webster Treaty negotiated under Mr. FILLMORE's administration, and the principle of which was approved by Mr. WEBSTER's succession, Mr. EVERETT, proposed to settle the boundary dispute between Costa Rica and Nicaragua on terms favorable to the former State, and Nicaragua rejected them for that reason. The protests of the Nicaraguan Minister against the acknowledgment of the claims of Costa Rica, were always very earnest. That treaty project was generally censured by the Democratic opposition, and upon the ground that it interfered with the local affairs and disputes of the Central American States.

The President takes the ground of Mr. MARCOLETA against Costa Rica, but he differs from the position of the Democratic Party upon the question of intervention. He decides in favor of taking a part in the contest between the two States, but decides to take part with Nicaragua, and against Costa Rica in this instance. Other cases may arise, in which the President, for the time being, if this principle be admitted and established, may decide upon other questions between these two parties.

The same question, when presented to another President, may be differently decided.

Mr. BUCHANAN's decision in this case involves another point of importance. The late Administration looked quietly on, when the Nicaraguan transit was interrupted in various ways, and refused to take any steps to restore it. Mr. BUCHANAN, on the contrary, declares that Costa Rica shall not block it up, and, of course, this involves a decision that it shall not be again suspended by another power, or by any other war.

Still, again, another important point is established by Mr. BUCHANAN's declaration, to wit: a general surveillance over the transit, independently of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, and of any interest of any other power in the Isthmus. Thus, if England should happen to take a different view, at any time, of this or any other matter of controversy relative to the transit between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and should take part with Costa Rica in the question, there will arise, necessarily, a quarrel between Great Britain and the United States.

The declaration which I have alluded to is vastly more important, because more direct and practical, than anything that can be found in Mr. BUCHANAN's Inaugural. It is tantamount to a declaration of an exclusive protectorate, or rather dictatorship, over the Central American States.

One effect of the decision is to involve the United States in the war of Gen. WALKER, who claims to be the legal and legitimate Executive of Nicaragua. It promises him the potent aid of the United States as against Costa Rica. Y. Y. Z.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE LEGISLATURE—AN ELECTION FOR STATE OFFICERS IN AUGUST, ETC.

ST. LOUIS, Friday, June 19.

The correspondent of the Democrat, writing from Quindaro on the 16th inst., says that the Legislature adjourned on the 13th. Acts providing for taking of the census; appointing an election on the first Monday in August for State officers and Representatives to Congress, and locating the seat of Government at Topeka, were passed, as also a joint resolution under the Topeka Constitution census act, providing for the appointment of five Marshals, whose deputies shall take a census immediately, and make an apportionment of the State which shall give a Senate of not more than 20 members, and a House of 60.

Some of the Territorial County Judges have pronounced parts of the Census law inoperative.

It is reported that Gov. WALKER has been informed that the Constitution will not be submitted to the people.

TOPEKA, Sunday, June 14.

The State Legislature adjourned at midnight last night, after having completed sufficient legislation to maintain the Free-State organization. No steps were taken to break up their sitting.

The bogus election takes place to-morrow. The County Judges in several Counties have declared certain parts of the census act inoperative. The Pro-Slavery men have informed Gov. WALKER that the Constitution will not be submitted to the people.

BOSTON, Friday, June 19.

Hon. N. P. BANKS in a letter to GEORGE W. MESSENGER, President of the American Convention, accepts of the nomination for Governor, and says:

"I have opposed with earnestness the policy of the Slavery propagandists and have endeavored as far as laid in my power to defeat their pernicious measures, which were calculated, in my judgment, to substitute for the toleration of negro bondage in the States where it now exerts its universal and absolute dominion, thus obstructing the success of every industrial interest, and bending the Government itself to a course of measures which could not fail to cripple the prosperity and impair the dignity of free labor."

Upon the subject of foreign influence, he says his record is open and convictions unchanged, and that he is now ready, as heretofore, to concur with the people of Massachusetts in every just measure that shall tend to diminish this unnatural influence, and restore to the American people the full share of power and direction which was designed for them by the framers of this Government.

After alluding to retrenchment and reform in State affairs and urging a unity of action on the part of those who do not nominally differ in political sentiments he closed as follows:

"If in the coming canvass it shall appear that my name fails to draw together those who are separated by no great principle it shall be promptly withdrawn, and I will cheerfully fall into the ranks of the supporters of any man who can rally to another triumph the column of men that sustained the gallant FREMONT in the great canvass of last year."

Mr. ELIPHALET TRASK, of Springfield, also accepts the nomination of the same Convention for Lieutenant-Governor.

Expected Decision in the Metropolitan Police Case.

ALBANY, Friday, June 19—7 P. M.

The Judges of the Court of Appeals have been in private consultation, all the afternoon, on the Metropolitan Police bill, and the session is not yet closed. There are some rumors flying about that a decision will be rendered to-morrow. This is, probably, incorrect; but, from the diligence with which the Judges are working, a decision will, likely, be rendered on Tuesday, at the latest. Confidence is expressed here that the constitutionality of the law will be upheld; but there is, at present, no good authority for such opinion.

Great Freshets.

DAMAGE TO THE CHEMUNG AND CROOKED LAKE CANALS.

ALBANY, Friday, June 19.

Intelligence has reached the Canal Department of a fearful freshet and serious break on the Chemung Canal. Fifteen hundred feet of the bank is going between locks No. 8 and No. 28, and seven breaks are reported between locks No. 28 and No. 44. The Chemung Canal repairs have just been completed, and news of serious damage is expected from there.

THE FRESHET AT THE VILLAGE OF CORNING.

CORNING, N. Y., Friday, June 19.

More rain fell here last night, and the trains on the Erie Railroad are still detained west of this point by the flood. The passengers are taken west by the Buffalo, Corning and New-York Railroad vid Rochester.

THE FRESHET AT ELMIRA.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Friday, June 19—3 P. M.

The storm of the last two days has been unusually severe. The streams are very much swollen, and the houses on the banks are very much injured. A freight train was literally blown off the track between this place and Corning, yesterday, by a gust of wind and rain. No person was injured. The travel by the Erie Railroad is obstructed by the washing away of the banks. The weather is now clear, and the streams are subsiding. The railroad will be in order by to-morrow.

PARIS GOSSIP.

The London Times and Duke Constantine's Visit—Grand Ball to the King of Bavaria—Grandeur of the Decorations, &c.—Spiritualism in Paris—Political Matters—Secret Societies, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Monday, June 1, 1857.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, jealous of the attentions shown in France to the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, has at length fallen upon a discovery. The Emperor did not allow the Grand Duke to visit the Museum of Artillery, but he not only invited the King of Bavaria to visit this establishment, but accompanied him there himself. This time the correspondent was right; but why this difference? The Museum of Artillery is an establishment where are collected an immense number of ancient and modern arms, where all new improvements in the art of war are kept and experimented upon, and where, at this very moment, thorough trials are being made of the Emperor's own artillery inventions. King MAXIMILIAN, of Bavaria, is a friend to France, and if he were not, he is not dangerous; besides, he is an admirer of the Fine Arts, and prefers the galleries of the Louvre and Versailles, to those of Vincennes and Cherbourg. The Duke CONSTANTINE is the opposite of all this. The avidity with which he availed himself of all offers to visit military and marine works, and the care with which he took notes on everything he saw, inspired the French at last with a little distrust; and it is tolerably clear that the Prince was not invited to the Museum of Artillery because it was felt they were gratifying a curiosity that might prove dangerous to them. The London Times says that the Paris journals were prohibited from mentioning the visit of the King to the Museum of Artillery, in the hope that the event would not reach the ears of the Grand Duke; but if such were the fact, the affair has singularly failed, since Le Nord, the Russian journal of Brussels, has noticed it.

I was fortunate enough to fall among the six thousand invited guests to the grand ball of the Hotel de Ville, given to the King of Bavaria on Thursday evening last. For the Queen of England, efforts were made at the Hotel de Ville, by opening new apartments, but especially by the decoration of one of its largest courts, to add new grandeur to this already magnificent palace. What was then accomplished was regarded as a miracle of art; the the ball to the King of Sardinia was improved upon the preceding, and now we have still an improvement upon the other two. King MAXIMILIAN looked astonished as he entered the court Louis XIV., an astonishment that was quite legitimate, in such a scene of unequaled splendor. The immense salon des fêtes, three hundred feet long, was, until lately, the miracle of this admirable palace; it has had to cede the superiority to the court Louis XIV. In this court gold and the finest marbles, flowers, statues, gushing fountains and cascades, are blended with a marvelousness of effect difficult to depict. The grand double or horse-shoe stairway out of which and under which the water gushes and falls in abundance into a basin ornamented with naiads and dolphins, adds immensely to the grandeur and beauty of this court, converted into a vast room. At the opposite end of this room the students of the conservatoire de musique, nearly two hundred in number, vocal and instrumental, were concealed in two immense bosquets of exotic plants and flowers, and, thus concealed from the promenaders of the court, furnished them at the same time the sweetest of music. The other twenty-four saloons of the palace were not, however, neglected in their ornamentation for this one. The sum paid alone for the loan of the living flowers and shrubs for this ball was $10,000, and flowers and shrubs are cheap in Paris.

The great crowd, as usual, was in the Salon des Fêtes, where STRAUSS' band was stationed, and where the quadrille d'honneur was danced. The King danced with the Princess MATHILDE; his vis-à-vis was the Prince NAPOLEON, who danced with the Princess MURAT-WAGRAM. The King MAXIMILIAN II. is in appearance about forty-five years of age. He is a slim, straight man, a little over the medium height. His face, while of the German type, and not handsome, is highly expressive and agreeable to look at. There is not a particle of hauteur in his bearing. On the occasion of the presentation of the diplomatic corps, he astonished those gentlemen with his fluency in speaking a variety of languages—English, French, German, Italian and Spanish. At the Hotel de Ville his Majesty wore a light blue uniform, with epaulettes and sword, and the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honor. The King and suite supped at one o'clock, then danced a quadrille, in which the Duke of MALAKOFF figured his corpulency and rich uniform in the company of Mlle. HAUSSMANN, and in which the King took some fancy steps not often seen in the French Court, and retired at 1½ o'clock, apparently with reluctance. The dancing, however, continued till broad daylight, and then those who remained were gratified with an unusual and curious sight. The whole façade of the Palace on the Place de Grève was illuminated by a dozen lines of gas burners, following the inflections of the architecture, and the effect of these in the dawn of the morning was most singular. The place was full of soldiers and carriages, drawn up in line, and the gray light of the morning, mingling in the bright illumination from the palace, fell on the burnished shakos and arms of the soldiers with a strange effect.

I heard many foreigners say at this ball, who had seen it for the first time, that none of the descriptions they had ever read gave them any conception of its grandeur. After such a declaration, which one can readily accept as true, there is no longer any encouragement to attempt a description. And yet it is always a surprise even to the habitués, for there is always some new beauty, some new magnificence of the decorative art.

The same cannot be said, however, of the aristocratic lions who flock to Paris within the last two or three years. In the month of May, 1830, while the King of Naples was being conducted to the Tuileries in the equipage of the Court, the crowd made an immense noise, and the event was the occasion of a veritable excitement in the city. An old woman, seated in an obscure corner of the Place Carrousel, and dressed in rags, cried out, "Babi a King! Under the Emperor we saw nothing but kings!" The Parisians of the second Empire can say as much, for Paris never saw within its walls more Sovereigns or Princes. Only the people are growing indifferent to these oft-repeated royal exhibitions.

If exactitude in their engagements is a rule with comets, we have but twelve days' grace between this and total annihilation. The unwelcome visitor and the destruction that is to follow in his wake, are announced for the thirteenth June, the day on which you will read these lines. Perhaps it is the near approach of this solemn event that gives such a vogue to the spiritualists. During HUME'S first three days' residence in the Champs Elysées, after his return from the United States, he was so besieged with visitors, petitions and petitioners, that he was obliged to change his residence. The Sunday after his arrival in France he had the honor of breakfasting with the Emperor and the King of Bavaria, at the Palace of Fontainebleau. On that occasion he attempted the production of some of his remarkable spiritual phenomena, but the fluid was not liquid and his phenomena were rather indifferent proofs of his power.

HUME has become nothing less than a King, or at least a Grand Duke of an invisible empire. He treats sovereigns and grandees as do these more common people. It would be difficult to predict to what result his influence is going to lead. He has placed his young sister, who is but 11 years old, at school, and professes himself to be a student. Two or three rivals are attempting to divide with him the honors of his diabolic reputation, and one, a Mr. BUCHANAN, has already made a certain impression in the saloons. If all this is to continue a comet, would not be a bad intervention to save the world from the scandal of having turned fool.

The Democratic party at Paris has constituted its Electoral Committee in the persons of Messrs. CARNOT, BENAZET, HENRI MARTIN, BEROLD, LAGLONY, and the deputations of the Democratic journals, the Siècle, the Estafette, and the Courrier de Paris. This Committee meets to-morrow to name the candidates of the party. It is pretended that the candidates likely to be chosen are: Messrs. CAVAIGNAC, CARNOT, MARIE HAVIN, REGUET, GARNON, FERDINAND DE LASTEYRIE, GARNIER PAGES, GOUDCHOUX, and BETHMONT. But, as several of these gentlemen refused to take the oath in 1852, it is more than doubtful whether they will now conform to the requirements of the law, in offering themselves as candidates, in view of the very meagre chance of election. It is hardly worth while to compromise their position of independence for an uncertainty.

The Moniteur yesterday morning published a decree setting down the 21st of this month as the day of election for the new Chamber. The number of electors inscribed are 9,521,220. "The Government, as in 1852, will propose its candidates to the electors, and they will make their choice." The Minister announces further, that with a few exceptions the Government will propose the same candidates as at the last election. But the Minister concludes by manifesting the hope that "the imperceptible minority of hostile parties, if they dare to appear, will drown themselves in an immense popular manifestation." The reader will not fail to perceive here a faithful illustration of the representative principle as it exists in France. The Government first says it will leave electors to their choice, a figure of speech parallel to that of the Senatus Consulte, which declares that there shall be a legislative power in France, when none exists. Then it is followed by another figure of speech which is exactly parallel to the fact, that France is a despotism, and when "hostile parties" raise their heads they are to be drowned—but not so much by an immense popular demonstration as by bayonets. But is it absolutely necessary to belong to a hostile party to vote in favor of another than the official candidate? Might there not be local or other objections to the Government candidate, independent of party? I think you will agree with me that none but a government steeped in despotic acts could have so far forgotten itself as to have issued an electoral bulletin containing the language I have quoted from this one.

The trial of the members of the secret society called the Franc Juges, arrested a month ago for conspiracy against the life of the Emperor and the integrity of the State, terminated in the conviction of nearly all of the forty-four on trial, and in the condemnation to longer or shorter terms of imprisonment. The trial was public, but the journals were prohibited from publishing it. It was shown that the society was very numerous, and that it was divided into sections of four men each. They met in the environs of the hill of Montmartre, and were presided over by a young man of 24, named AUCAIGNE, a law student, who is occupied in literary pursuits. They took the oath of secresy on poniards, and pledged themselves by eternal vows and the most terrible imprecations. It was in fact but a duplicate in its initiation, ordinances and objects of its terrible predecessor, the Franc Juges of the Revolution.

There is another secret society in France, as you know, called La Marianne. Recently it has been remarked that in certain quarters where republicanism is the prevailing sentiment of the people, a considerable number of children have been presented at the heptismal fount bearing the name of Marie-Anne.

A few nights ago, while the curtain was down at the theatre Porte St. Martin, a man stepped into the dress circle and threw a packet towards the pit. The packet soon became undone, and showered over the heads of the audience hundreds of written proclamations accusing the Government of deceiving the nation, and declaring the possibility of reducing the price of bread. The man escaped before the nature of the proclamations were made known.

The Court has taken up its residence at St. Cloud for the Summer. The King of Bavaria still remains at the Tuileries. A review of the cavalry will take place to-morrow in his honor at Longchamps, Bois de Bologne.

YALE COLLEGE.

Presentation of the Wooden Spoon.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

NEW-HAVEN, Wednesday, June 17, 1857.

The Wooden Spoon Exhibition which took place last Monday evening, is universally conceded to have been a superior performance of its kind. This is the Junior Exhibition of those not allowed to speak at the "real original" performance, either on account of having received too low an appointment or none at all; for those who fall in the two or three grades below Second Disputes are not permitted to appear on Junior Exhibition Stage, unless they may wish to display their poetical talent or their knowledge of some one of the modern languages. But why the appellation, "Wooden Spoon Exhibition?" The name originated in the custom of presenting a large wooden spoon to the greatest glutton in his class. With the abolition of College Commons and the dispersion of students to private boarding houses, the eating powers of students could not be so satisfactorily determined as when all took their meals at the same table. But custom must be preserved; the spoon must be presented, and the question was to whom? All difficulties as to deciding were easily done away with by disregarding WHATELY'S rules. Thus: if a student eats a great deal he cannot be a good scholar. Such or such a person is not a good scholar, ergo he must eat a great deal. Present the spoon then to one who ranks among the poorer scholars and the custom will be preserved without departing from its original purpose.

Let the recipient be a jolly fellow and a general favorite and the certainty of selecting the proper person is still greater, for no "lean and hungry man" could be supposed to attain such a position among his classmates. So much for general principles; now for this particular occasion. Invitations as well as programmes are peculiar. The former were issued a week previous and had on a vignette a spoon drawn by four ponies which are making the best of their way to Parnassus, dimly seen in the distance. One cupid acts as charioteer, while another occupies the bowl of the spoon. The programmes have as a vignette a quartered shield, which contains on its several divisions two spoons crossed; a pair of balances with an appointment man tumbling from the elevated scale, and a spoon in the opposite scale. This quarter has the motto "mene, mene, tekel upharsin." Then an appointment man is represented emerging from the small end of a horn, and the fourth quarter bears an inverted Phi Beta Kappa Key. The shield bears the motto, "super sinistram lugemus," and beneath it is a spoon encircled with a scroll, on which is inscribed "in hoc signo vinces." Long before the commencement of the exercises Brewster's Hotel was crowded. None need imagine that because these exercises are not conducted under the auspices of the faculty that the town's people frown on them. The audiences which attend are as select and numerous as any which attend any other of the college exercises.

The first thing on the programme was very naturally an "opening load." An infirm old Irishman limped over the stage, and trundling out a wheelbarrow with a load of programmes, proceeded to distribute them. Then came the "Latin Salutatory," which was delivered by C. RICHARDS, of Cincinnati. This performance was so unique that we give one or two passages:

Vobis inferis—vobis superis—vobis omnibus who are in hoc loco lo-night salutatiouem et hearty welcome do. Especially vobis a pulcherrime puellæ who grace have joyful occasionem cum your presence et beauty. O puellæ! puellæ! Why do you entice studentes ab suis libris at Chapel et reetum flirtere with vos: Why do you induce illos catchere several colds in noctis nis scrensdibus sub tuis windowibus? O crudeliesime virgines, why do you encourage dignifiedissimos seniores makero horrida noises in the Brothers Halle which they call musicam sed vos know discordiam esse.

Sophomores, Freshmen quoquo saluto. Vos conscientiosimi pueri who refused nobis cum ludere in manly sportibus limentes forsooth ne you might hurt somebody. O generosissimi juveres, qui nobis dedistis this nobilissimum societatem Gamma nuisance. O noble Sophomores, who are ut your motto dicit, "Qu donki all onol." * * * Et nunc Juniores nunc gloriosissimam '58 le maxime saluto. Non est mihi tempus, non est ability, recountare tua permagna actionem multa sunt. Tu es deeus Yalensis respected a studentibus, loved a virginibus atque envied ab omnibus. Si quis Tutor sit vir you respect him, si quis Tutor needs correction, you do your duty. Primi in bello, primi in pace, et primi in the hearts of your country women. Macte virtute ceto '58, now as ever, "Fortiter, Fideliter, Feliciter."

In explanation of a paragraph in the above it may be allowable to say that the present Sophomore Class when Freshmen Instituted a society ostensibly anti-secret, the title of which is Gamma Nu, and that their class motto, to Anglicise the Greek, is ou dokein all' einai.

A colloquy entitled "English Classics" succeeded the salutatory. It opened with a burlesque of a Faculty meeting—for every one in authority is deemed proper game at such a time as this, from the College Sweep to the Professors—and concluded with a recitation from the Pickwick Papers, much after the manner of an ordinary Greek recitation. The impersonations of different individuals in this, as well as in other colloquies, were too manifest to be mistaken, and drew forth shouts of laughter.

The programme next announced a piece of music by Dodworth's Band, but added in a foot note that said band "was excused on account of absence from the City." Then followed an original song to the tune of "Annie Laurie." Next was a philosophical oration on "the Comet," by H. ROYER, of Trappe, Penn., and then another colloquy entitled "Initiation." It was an excellent take-off of the initiation of the Freshmen into their secret societies by the Sophomores. Those who had been through the ordeal could appreciate the terrible stories which were employed to terrify those who personated Freshmen, and the fiendish noises which were made as they were being "put through." For be it known, that on these occasions Sophomores let their traditional hatred of Freshmen have free run and exhaust their powers in inventing means to terrify and frighten them, sometimes too, with pretty good success. The different parts in this colloquy were excellently acted. No. 8 was another original song. Air, Roealie the Prairie Flower. No. 9, a Poem by W. R. FRISBIE, of San Francisco, on the "Sunny Side of College Life." Then the audience roared over a violin solo, "Home Sweet Home," by an Amateur. The burlesque was so complete that a repetition was demanded.

The third and last of the colloquies was the "Committee Meeting." Here the curtain was lifted and outsiders given something of a peep behind the scenes as the way in which "Wooden Spoon Committees" conducted their meetings for business. It afforded an excellent opportunity which was not lost, for caricaturing obnoxious tutors, telling one or two excellent stories and hitting off, rather severely too, some recent occurrences in which students have had some interest. After another song, (air "Litoria,") J. RILEY, of Montrose, Pa., delivered an exceedingly amusing oration on the Aurora Borealis. It was one of the best performances of the evening, but want of space and regard to the feelings and theories of scientific men prevent our presenting the hypothesis by which this phenomenon was accounted for.

The exercises of the evening were closed with the "Spoon Addresses." J. E. KIMBALL, of Oxford, Mass., delivered an excellent presentation Address, and B. D. SLEIGHT, of Sag Harbor, L. I., the recipient of the Spoon, replied in suitable terms.

The spoon is as usual of rosewood, beautifully carved, and bears on a silver plate, the name of the recipient, together with the class motto, "Fortiter, fideliter, feliciter."

That the spoon is no mere wooden ladle, may be inferred from the fact that it cost about thirty dollars.

The senior were to-day presented to the President in the College Chapel, and, notwithstanding the rain, their supplementary out-door exercises are now in progress.

Insurance on Bonded Warehouses.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Your paper of Saturday morning contains the action of the Insurance Companies on the storage of free and bonded goods in one store; and, it seems to me, that there is far more excitement on this subject than the case warrants, or common sense approves. That the Government should complain of such deviation from their "Regulations" is easy to understand, but why these Companies should be so roused, not so easy. It is true, their rates are less on bonded than on free stores—five cents on the one hundred dollars. Is even this little difference a wise one? We think not. Let us look at the facts of the case: A Bonded Store may contain sugar, sulphur, hemp, oil, &c.—a little of the latter on a bale of hemp—and there is the materiel for combustion in a few hours. Adjoining this store is one with free goods, which may contain guano, hides, horns, flour, &c.—all incombustible, under almost any circumstances, and yet by this arbitrary rule of the Insurance Companies, the Bonded Store has a preference in their rates.

The supposed spontaneous combustion of hemp was the cause of a fire in THORNE'S Bonded Warehouse in Brooklyn some years since, and at this moment there are large quantities stored in this City. Why then this difference of rates on Bonded Stores? Is there more care or vigilance? By whom? Does not the same Storekeeper have the same supervision of both? Is he not equally interested in both? It is true, a Custom-House officer is to affix his lock to the door, at the close of business—not as a fire committee—and he rarely or never enters a storehouse.

Again: Suppose the bales of straw had been ordered out of RAXTER'S Bonded Store by the Custom-House officer, they would have been placed in a free store, and, it may be, with equally or more valuable goods, would the Insurance Companies have suffered less? Straw and hay in bales are recognized articles of insurance, and are contained in the same list with sugar, hemp, &c.

And now let me ask, who has the greatest interest in the preservation of property, either in bonded or free warehouses? The Insurance Companies, who, by the loss of a few hundred thousand dollars, may very their profits one per cent. in six or twelve months, and which is divided among a large number of stockholders, or the unfortunate warehouseman, who, in one hour, may see the anticipated and unisured profits of many months swept away before his anxious eyes?

The periodical visits of the Insurance Inspector can do no harm; but will it be pretended for a moment that his vigilance can be compared to the deep interest of the warehouse proprietor and storekeeper? One word as to the insurance certificate required by the Secretary of the Treasury for bonded stores: It is not correct that he requires that all of them should be first class; he recognises several classes, according to the nature of the goods to be stored. A glance at the printed "Regulations" shows this. It is also suggested that no ingress or egress be allowed, except through the office of the stores. Is it meant that horses and carts are to be driven through the counting-house? The warehouse burned a few days since, was a first-class store, and had no public passage through it, and yet it took fire.

AN OLD MERCHANT.

The English Railway System—Its Cost and Profits.

From the London Times, June 5.

Three hundred millions of money, (1,500,000,000,) at the very least, have been invested in the Railways of this country. There are thousands of men still living who can recollect when the whole National Debt of the kingdom, though then considered incredible, was but 240 millions, and even now the figures symbolizing railway property represent an amount equivalent to one third of our proceeds State obligations. Now, when it is asserted—no doubt with substantial accuracy—that the average profit upon these investments in this tranquil, prosperous, and well governed country is only £3 12s. 4d. per cent., and that of all the Railways established and at work three only have their shares quoted at a premium, nobody will deny that the proprietors, if not an ill-used, are certainly an unfortunate body: nor are we in the least degree disposed to wonder or complain at the agitation which they seem to be preparing, and which they inaugurated at the metropolitan meeting reported in our columns of yesterday. There is no need for expatiating on the "widow's annuity," or the "orphan's patrimony," or any other particular investment appealing with special force to public sympathy. All this is comprised in the bare mention of the aggregate at stake. Hundreds of millions could not possibly be subscribed without the destinies of thousands of families being involved in the success of the venture. It is equally manifest that in the security and productiveness of such a mass of property the interests of every individual in the community must be more or less concerned. Nobody can doubt the reality or magnitude of the evil: the only question is as to its cause, and as to the remedy which can be most hopefully applied.

We can readily excuse the splenetic force of expression in which the sufferers depict what they consider their grievances, and in some respects their protests are undoubtedly well founded. It was certainly hard upon railway shareholders that they should be visited at once both with legislative control and unrestricted competition. From one, at least, of these conditions they might have expected to be spared. When the State grants a monopoly it should, of course, see to some equity of dealing between the monopolist and the public; but, when it leaves those dealings to find their level by the natural operations of trade, direct intervention assumes a gratuitous and oppressive aspect. Railway shareholders complain that legislation which controls their proceedings, regulates their prices, and limits their profits, should also expose them to the risk of being undersold by competing lines, and their expostulations are so far reasonable enough. It cannot be denied, in fact that our whole policy in these railway transactions would have admitted of incalculable improvement if we could have brought the experience of 1857 to the deliberations of 1845. Money might have been saved in all quarters alike, proprietors might have had heavier profits, passengers better accommodations at lower rates, and the country at large a greater amount of benefit. In justice, however, to the statesmen and legislators of those days, it must be remembered that the question was entirely new, while the fault charged to their account amounts, after all, to little more than an omission of control over those very bodies who now complain of the results of freedom. It is not fair to say that the extravagance of enterprise and competition was the immediate work of our rulers; these elements of mischief were supplied by the speculators themselves, and all that the Government neglected was the restriction of this exuberance within what, as is now discovered, would have been more salutary bounds. Yet it is by no means improbable that if a policy of repression had been actually adopted it would have been held accountable for all the mishaps and deficiencies afterwards experienced, and the late Sir ROBERT PEEL might be denounced, perhaps at this very moment, as the arch obstructor of railway development in England.

As regards the minor grievances alleged on behalf of railways, there is not quite so much to be said. If they are heavily rated for the relief of the poor, it must at any rate be plain, after recent discussions, that there is plenty of other property in the same case. If they are undersold by the Post-Office in the parcel-carrying department, the fact is only an unavoidable incident in the progress of public accommodation. The Post-Office has machinery pervading every quarter of the kingdom with its ramifications, and to expect that this machinery should be withheld from the service of the public, in order that railways might have more parcels to deliver at such stations as they touch, is utterly preposterous. Still more injudicious was the complaint that companies should be charged so heavily for their dealings with the lives and limbs of Her Majesty's subjects, while, as regards the limitation of profits so feelingly put forth, if the course is clear up to 10 per cent., and the average performances at present lie under 3½, there is surely scope for about as much expansion as can be anticipated just yet.

However, we are not concerned to gainsay the assertion that Railways have here and there been harshly treated, and certainly we should rejoice to see this immense aggregate of property producing better returns, and bearing a more becoming value in the market. But, after saying this much, we are bound to add, that a very considerable portion of the hardships alleged is traceable to the conduct of the companies themselves. In what respects, indeed—to go at once to the very marrow of the question—have Railways disappointed their proprietors? Certainly not in the amount of receipts, for, as regards the returns per mile from goods and passenger traffic, we doubt if there is a single line in the kingdom which has not exceeded the most sanguine estimates of produce originally formed. The public, then, have done all and more than all their part in the way of encouragement; they have been most liberally forthcoming with their patronage and their money, and the only reason why profits are small is, that these returns are intercepted in their way to the pockets of the shareholders by the enormous claims which must be satisfied before any dividend can be declared. The simple truth is not that fares, as a general rule, have been pushed too low by competition—not that traffic has been obstructed by a carrying department of the Administration itself—not that mailbags are conveyed at a loss—not, in short, that anything keeps money out of the railway tills—but that too many mouths have to be filled from the produce before the actual proprietors can come in for their turn. The receipts, in short, of Railway Companies are abundant, and would be remunerative enough in most cases, even after working expenses had been defrayed;—what impairs the dividend is not the smallness of the division total, but the number of the divisors. And what created this hungry multitude? Why, the greed, the ambition, the conflicts, and the limitation of the companies themselves, which so swelled the capital on which interest was to be paid that even an unexpected fertility in returns has proved insufficient for the objects desired.

There is another point, too, which cannot be passed over without destruction to the soundness of the whole argument. Why is it that property which, if not so productive as it ought to be, is at any rate producing upon an average between 3 and 4 per cent., should be quoted at such disproportionate prices in the share-market? Very likely £3 12s. 4d. is too small a rate of interest, but it is higher than Consols, and the security is only inferior in its character to terra firma itself. Nothing advanced at the meeting explained the ugly fact that of all these numerous cessions three only were quoted at a premium. This fact can be interpreted only by the indefinite distrust to which uncertainty gives rise, and this uncertainty in the public mind is due to the obscurity of railway accounts. Nobody knows the exact truth, and the want of knowledge has a worse effect than the truth could have, if it were ever so bad. Let the worst be known, and men will soon come forward to make it better, for this is proverbially the point at which things mend. Provided there was nothing behind the scenes—no mischief to come out by and by when all was thought to be over—the natural and unvarying elasticity of such property in a country like this would soon be reckoned upon to bring things round. The road to a rise in shares lies through a real and incontestable audit.

In the main, the improvement of railway property must rest with the shareholders themselves. If there are any points on which legislation presses them unfairly, they will have the good wishes of the public in agitating for redress, and, independently of such points, if the authority of Parliament can enable them in any way to act more effectively for their own relief, we trust that they may obtain the facilities desired. The aggregate and taxable wealth of the nation, as was observed at the meeting, is affected by the depreciation of funds enormous, and the question assumes an importance truly imperial. But even Parliament itself cannot recall what is past, and the counterpoise is only to be found in good management and resolution. Let the companies first deal as liberally with the public as the public does with them: not stint their accommodation, not cut down their working staff, not curtail the very indulgences to which they are driven. If they are forced to carry a passenger 60 miles for 5s., they need not expose their ill will and their caprice by charging 7s. 6d. for one-half of the identical distance. Let them abstain of their own accord from slashing at each other's throats, and not pray the Legislature to make them well-behaved by compulsion. Above all, let them look boldly into their own affairs, and give the public the benefit of their discoveries; and, if they do this for themselves, they will do more than "a strong Government, and a willing Parliament," and even "Lord PALMERSTON" himself can ever do for them.

The Bunker Hill Celebration—Letters Received.

From President Buchanan.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 13, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I have had the honor to receive your kind invitation, on behalf of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, to be present on their approaching anniversary at the inauguration of "a statue of Gen. JOSEPH WARREN near the spot where he fell." I regret that public duties of grave and pressing importance will prevent me from enjoying this privilege.

The erection of a statue to Gen. WARREN is a tribute of gratitude eminently due to the memory of the first great martyr in the cause of American independence. At the present moment it cannot fail to have a happy effect in recalling the memory of the present generation from topics of dangerous political excitement to the heroic age of the Republic,—"to the times which tried men's souls." Gen. WARREN no more belongs to Massachusetts than the Father of his Country belongs to Virginia. The name and the fame of the heroes and statesmen of the Revolution belong to the United States of America as a common property,—as a glorious bond of union between the several States. May the day never arrive when this bond shall be severed, and when the people, with sacreligious hands, shall tear down the temple erected and dedicated by their great forefathers to the Constitution, to the Union, and to civil and religious liberty!

Repeating my regrets that I cannot be with you on this interesting occasion, I remain,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) JAMES BUCHANAN.

From Vice-President Breckinridge.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Thursday, May 7, 1857.

DEAR SIR: Upon my return home a few days ago, after a temporary absence, I found your letter of the 7th ult., inclosing an invitation to me from the Bunker Hill Monument Association, to be present at the Eighty-second Anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, on the 17th of June, when it is proposed to put a statue of Gen. WARREN on the battle grounds.

I have delayed an answer in the hope of being able to accept the invitation, but I regret now to say that professional and other engagements will make it impossible for me to leave Kentucky. It would give me very great pleasure to visit New England, for the first time, on the grateful errand of honoring the memory of one of the most striking and heroic characters in our history, and of contributing in some small degree to revive the feelings that marked the era of WARREN and his compatriots.

It increases my regret that I am unable to attend, since Mr. CHOATE has been kind enough to express through you a desire for my presence. Please to present him my cordial regard, and accept for yourself the wishes of your friend and obedient servant,

JOHN BRECKINRIDGE.

G. WASHINGTON WARREN, Esq., President Bunker Hill Monument Association.

From Ex-President Pierce.

HILLSBOROUGH, N. H., Monday, June 15, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: Engagements which cannot well be deferred, forbid my acceptance of your invitation to be present at the inauguration of the Statue of General WARREN on the 17th inst.

It gratifies me to know that the eighty-second anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill is to be signalized by ceremonies so appropriate and interesting, and you will have my sympathies on the occasion, and my best wishes for all that can make the day pleasant and memorable.

The regret which I feel in not being able to participate with you, is enhanced by recollections which are revived with peculiar freshness in this locality, when, during the earlier years of my life, I enjoyed, to so large an extent, intercourse with officers and soldiers of the Revolution, who settled in this region after the close of the war.

It occurs to me as an agreeable reminiscence, that 49 years after Gen. WARREN fell, it was my privilege to be present, when 14 of the survivors of the battle, the anniversary of which you are to commemorate—all at that time residents of this town—were assembled under the hospitable roof of one of the number. They have passed away with the generation of the Revolutionary epoch. There is no survivor now.

Rejecting all sentiments and opinions calculated to lower our estimate of what the valor and wisdom of the fathers of the Republic achieved, let us manifest our reverence for their memory, not only by the erection of suitable monuments, but by taking the more earnest heed to their example and precepts.

Accept, gentlemen, my thanks for your kind consideration, and believe me very truly,

Your friend and serv't, FRANKLIN PIERCE.

G. WASHINGTON WARREN, Esq., WM. W. WHEILDON, Esq., TIMOTHY T. SAWYER, Esq., Committee, &c., Charlestown, Mass.

From Gov. Wise of Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Monday, May 25, 1857.

SIR: I beg you to thank the Committee for their invitation to me to attend their celebration of the eighty-second anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, on the 17th of June next, and to express my regret at my inability to attend. Public duties, at that time especially to be discharged, will prevent my leaving Virginia. Coming through you, sir,—a WARREN—this invitation is very acceptable to me; for though this Union shall be torn, if it must be, by some madness or other, and though the sun of our destiny as a nation shall set in gloom and a night of darkness, and though fratricidal blood shall flow by the hand of folly and stain the hearths of our homes hereafter, I can never forget Old Massachusetts,—her Bunker Hill, her WARRENS, her ADAMSES, her HANCOCK, her hall—her sister hall—once to Virginia—in "times which tried men's souls." No, never, never, never! May God revive our Revolutionary feelings!

Very gratefully, yours,

HENRY A. WISE.

Military Movements at the West.

Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, K. T., Thursday, May 21, 1857.

SIR: I send you an outline of the movement of troops from this post during the past week, believing that it may prove of interest to some of your many readers.

Lieut. Colonel J. E. JOHNSTON, 1st Cavalry, with two squadrons 1st Cavalry and two companies 6th Infantry, left on the 16th. Col. J. will run the southern boundary of Kansas, and act against any hostile tribes he may meet.

De Saussure, commanding—Company F, Capt. De Saussure, 1st Lieut. E. Otis, 2d Lieut. J. A. Thompson; Company K, 1st Lieut. D. Bell, commanding, 2d Lieut. J. H. Taylor: Company K, 6th Infantry, Capt. R. B. Garnette, 2d Lieut. O. K. McLemore; Company E, 6th Infantry, 2d Lieut. J. A. Smith, commanding. Lieut. J. R. Church, 1st Cavalry, Quartermaster; Surgeon J. J. B. Wright, Medical Officer.

Major J. SEDGWICK, with two squadrons 1st Cavalry left on the 18th. Major SEDGWICK goes against the Cheyenne Indians.

First Squadron—Companies E and H, commanded by Capt. S. D. Sturgis; Company E, Capt. Sturgis, 2d Lt. E. A. Crittenden; Company H, Capt. E. W. B. Newby, 1st Lt. Jas. McIntyre; 2d Lt. E. Long. Second Squadron—Companies G and D, Capt. Jas. McIntosh commanding; Company G, 2d Lieut. G. D. Bayard commanding; Company D, Capt. McIntosh, 1st Lieut. D. S. Stanley; 2d Lieut. L. L. Lomax, Adjutant 1st; F. Wheaton, Quartermaster; Assistant Surgeon E. N. Coney, Medical Officer.

Col. E. V. Sumner, with one squadron 1st Cavalry, left on the 20th.

Squadron, companies B and A, Capt. W. N. R. Beall commanding; company B, 1st Lieut. P. Stockton commanding; company A, Capt. Beall, 1st Lieut. J. N. Perkins, 2d Lieut. R. H. Riddick; 2d Lieut. A. C. Colburn, Adjt.; 1st Lieut. J. E. B. Stuart, Reg. Quartermaster: Assistant Surgeon C. Brewer, Medical Officer.

One squadron 2d Dragoons will join Colonel Sumner at Fort Kearney, and three companies 6th Infantry at Fort Laramie. Col. S. will go against the Cheyennes, Kiowas, and other hostile tribes, and will unite with Major Sedgwick in the Cheyenne country, near Bent's Fort.

The Charge Against the Mayor of Chicago—John Wentworth's Official Account of His Arrest.

From the Chicago Democrat, June 12.

A grand conspiracy was formed between the Know-Nothings, under the lead of Judge MORRIS, and the Border Ruffians, under the lead of Judge DOUGLAS, on Monday last, to arrest the Mayor while presiding over the meeting of the Common Council that evening. The conspirators used Mr. STARKWEATHER'S post-master (PRICE) and Judge DOUGLAS' mail agent (PAUL DENNIE)—the latter a discharged policeman—to trump up the charge against the Mayor of robbing the mails, because men at work on his farm had carried thereto at sundry times a few old mail bags, which had been sent to the Mayor many years ago while he was member of Congress, containing garden seeds and public documents. These old bags laid about the Democrat office for years, as of no account, save for the boys in the office to do errands with, and the men in the country to carry out (according to the testimony of DENNIS) salt fish, bacon, bran, meal, &c., &c., in. DENNIS testified that one of the bags smelt very strongly of fish, and it was proven that it was really a fish bag, and had been repeatedly brought into the city for the purpose of taking back fish to the suburbans.

Judges DOUGLAS and MORRIS sent this DENNIS to the farm to get some of these bags and make profert of them in open court. Having found them, he hurried back and got out a warrant, called all the conspirators together and agreed to arrest the Mayor in his chair, try him before a United States Commissioner and incarcerate him that night. They anticipated a glorious gratification of revenge on the occasion. The blacklegs, and thieves, and shysters around the Police Court and the disappointed and dissatisfied generally, with many who have had the misfortune to get into the watchhouse, were let into the secret. The appearance of so many suspicious persons around the Court House made the police a little on the alert, but all at once the courage of the conspirators oozed out. Besides, the United States Marshal was quite refractory. He declined to be made the instrument of any such base design. He would neither serve the papers himself, while the Council was in session, nor give them up for any one else to serve until the Council adjourned. Thus the Council was not broken up, for the reason that DOUGLAS, MORRIS & Co. could not find a man to do what they wished to do themselves, but dared not.

On Tuesday morning the Mayor, with his attorneys, Messrs. STUART & HOYNE, called upon Judge DRUMMOND and insisted that he try the matter, instead of the United States Commissioner, who was a stranger to Mr. WENTWORTH, but whom the conspirators had led the public to believe was in their interest.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Judge DRUMMOND appeared on the bench. We never saw a man more chop-fallen than was the late Know-Nothing candidate for Governor at his appearance. He could hardly go through with the usual speech of his, about his not being prepared, not having investigated the case, &c., &c. He, however, went through with the speech that he made on the Shirley fizzle, his face continually blanching, all but his nose, which kept continually reddening.

Judge DOUGLAS would not come into the hall at all.

Postmaster PRICE was running round among the Nebraska men, complaining that there was some misunderstanding. He said he wanted the United States Commissioner, and not DRUMMOND, to sit.

But the case went on, and it was proved by DENNIE that the mail bags were scattered about in every printing office in the city, and by others that they were scattered about in several of the neighboring counties for the purpose of buying wheat, potatoes, &c.

It was proved by KELSEY, late United States Mail Agent, that DOUGLAS and WENTWORTH had a great many bags with seeds and public documents, and that neither of them had either been requested or expected to return their bags, or that either of them had ever done so.

Judge DRUMMOND here stated the case, and said that he had received a great many books from the General Government, and that they came in valuable boxes. He had never felt obligated to return these boxes, nor should he bags under the same circumstances. But if the Government should make a demand, he should think that the boxes and bags both ought to be returned.

The audience here broke out in a deafening round of applause, and for a time interrupted the Judge, who, at length, explained the difference between bags in the mail service and bags directed and labelled to members of Congress, containing documents for them to distribute to their constituents.

At the close the audience broke out into another round of applause, whereat Judge MORRIS' face grew paler and his nose redder, and he apologized to the Court for the part he and his brother Nebraska men had taken. He hoped neither the Judge shrink from my duty to maintain the law, in consequence of any popular excitement, no matter what the results might be. I should be recreant to every principle of duty if I should fail to enforce a law to its very extent, against those who are attempting to violate and set aside the laws, because they do not themselves happen to approve of them. I should be recreant to the public as a Magistrate, if I did not protect the public peace by enforcing the law to its full extent. The time has come when that must be done by those entrusted with judicial power, or we shall cease to be protected by law, and the safety of the public will be destroyed.

But your case does not present these features. There is some color of a license for your visits to the Quarantine, and although I am compelled to pronounce in this case what may be considered, under the circumstances, a severe sentence, yet at the same time, I shall exercise my discretion to the utmost limit in your behalf, because I believe the object of punishment is answered when it is understood that the law is to be enforced. And there is something in the suggestion of your counsel, that this is the first attempt to enforce the law. This is a new statute, and it is sufficient for the ends of justice that it is understood it shall be enforced. If there are other invasions—if other cases of violation of the law are brought before me, after this example, I shall most assuredly punish them to the utmost extent of the law. In your case I shall impose the most lenient sentence I can.

The sentence of the Court is, that you be fined $100, and stand committed until it is paid.

After some remarks to the Court by Ragans' counsel, Ragans went to the Clerk's desk and paid the fine.

ALDERMAN WILSON HELD TO BAIL.

Alderman Wilson appeared in Court and surrendered himself. He was held to bail in $5,000. Devlin the Mayor's Street Commissioner, went bail for him. We have elsewhere related more fully what occurred.

Eliza Flynn, an old, well-dressed woman, who was brought into Court in a fainting condition, pleaded guilty to passing counterfeit bank bills, and was sentenced to two years in the State Prison.

George Smith and Abraham Lawkins pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree, and were sentenced to two years in the State Prison.

In the case of Henrietta Churchill, a resident in a house of prostitution, charged with stealing a diamond ring from the keeper of said house, the District Attorney declined to prosecute, on account of the doubtful nature of the evidence in all such cases. She was discharged.

Catharine Miller was tried for stealing silk, valued at $75, from the store of Converse, Todd & Co., Canal-street, on June 3. The evidence was very clear. The jury found her guilty, and the Recorder sentenced her to two years in the State Prison.

The Grand Jury came into Court with a batch of indictments. They made no presentment, as it was expected they would. As they had finished their business the Court discharged them.

MANSLAUGHTER.

Daniel H. Pierce was tried for manslaughter in the fourth degree, in causing the death of Joshua Weekes, by a blow with his fist. The parties met in a grocery store, corner of Stanton and Lewis streets, and had some angry words. Weekes was very drunk. Pierce struck him and he fell down helpless. He was taken home, and died three days afterwards.

Dr. Chapin testified that he attended the deceased, who died of erysipelas of the head, and of delirium tremens. The erysipelas was produced by the blow, but if deceased had not been laboring under delirium tremens, the blow would not have been fatal.

The Jury found Pierce guilty. Sentence was deferred till to-day.

James Burke and John Murphy were charged with stealing a boat, the property of Patrick Gallagher. The testimony was insufficient, and the District-Attorney withdrew the charge.

The Court will pass sentences to-day, when the June term will close.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS—June 18.

Before Justices Osborne and Brownell.

The majority of those who were brought before the bar were, as usual, discharged, in the absence of the prosecuting witnesses. Fighting and stealing were the charges against most of the prisoners.

William Jones stole a silver watch, worth $15, from Henry Morsoge, of No. 192 Madison-street. He snatched it from the complainant in the street. There were two other young men with him at the time, (June 15.) Found guilty, penitentiary for 4 months.

Eliza Cox was accused by Matilda Nelson of stealing a ten-dollar gold-piece, a dollar bill, and some change, from Matilda Nelson. It was alleged that Eliza was at the complainant's room, June 14, and after she left, a pocket book containing the money was missing. The same amount was found on her person.

Judge Osborne—Where did you get the money?

Prisoner—It belongs to my brother's boss, who is in Ticonderoga. She produced a letter from her brother, mentioning her possession of such money; but the Judge said "gammon" to this. She went to Ludlow-st., and the complaint was dismissed for want of sufficient evidence.

Adam Groke was charged with assaulting Philomela Groke, his wife, with his fist, at No. 196 Stanton-street, June 14. The woman appeared against him and procured his conviction, and then, at her request, sentence was suspended. He had been held in $300 to answer.

Angelo Damico was brought up at the instance of Alice Sweeny, of No. 89 Park-street, who complained of him for assaulting her and throwing a stone at her, which struck her in the side of the head, June 15. The prosecuting witness failed to appear, and he was discharged.

Eliza Derwin stole a bank bill. After hearing witnesses, the Judge asked her what she had to say. She commenced to tell a long yarn about matters which were foreign to the charge, and Judge Osborne cut her short—"I guess you're a slick one," said he. "Penitentiary for 3 months."

A boy, named Charles Keefe, was complained of for petit larceny. He had stolen some knives and forks worth $2. He was discharged on a complaint of theft only last Saturday. Sent to House of Refuge. Edwin Kerswell, No. 356 Broadway, the owner of the property, caught him in the act.

James Morrissey caught John Wilhelm in the act of stealing a box of starch, worth $2, belonging to him, June 16, at No. 32 Centre-street, Morrissey's place of business. The prisoner was found guilty, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for three months.

Thomas Hunter was accused by Mary O'Donoell, No. 95 Cherry street, of stealing her shawl. He was discharged, the witness failing to appear.

Mary Johnson was charged with an assault and battery of John Zahn, at No. 189 East Twenty-eighth-street, June 14. It was alleged that she struck him with her fist, but Zahn did not appear, and the Judge told her to go.

Cornelius Sullivan, on the 15th of June, stole a piece of timber from the site of the old Brick Church, Cyrus Goodman entered the complaint. The stick was found in the possession of the accused. He was found guilty, and sentence suspended.

Ann Daner, charged with petit larceny in stealing a shawl worth $7 from Mary Boylan, in the City Prison, was found with the property in her possession by Officer Davis, of the Twenty-first Ward. No one appeared against her, and she was discharged.

Jeffrey Hoskins struck Thomas Lyons in the face with his fist, threw him down and pounded him while down. He was found guilty and remanded until Saturday.

Jasper F. Cropsey, of No. 335 Canal-street, dry-goods merchant, had a piece of lawn containing 20 yards, value $4 stolen from him by Mary McDarby, on Monday. She came into the store for the purpose of purchasing some lawns, and secreted the goods under her cloak. The parcel accidentally fell to the floor, and she was immediately apprehended and taken before Justice Davison, who committed her. She was found guilty and sentence suspended.

Joseph Eagan threw pieces of wood, brickbats, and potatoes at Eliza Taylor, on Saturday, about 5 o'clock, and she brought a charge of assault and battery against him. The complainant testified that she kept a store at No. 255 Tenth-avenue, where the occurrence took place, and related the circumstances of the quarrel and assault. Counsel asked her what kind of a store she kept.

Witness—I keep dry goods and other things—a little liquor.

It seemed Eagan had previously complained of her to see as the result of disorderly characters, and his counsel tried to convince the Judge that this was the reason of her entering the complaint against him.

Judge Osborne—Oh, I think this complaint very frivolous; the prisoner will be compelled to pay his lawyer, and that will be punishment enough in all conscience. It would have been cheaper to pay $5 fine in the first place, than to pay $10 fees to counsel. We find him guilty and suspend sentence.

Thomas Flynn and Daniel Curtain were brought to the bar for assaulting William Flynn, whom, it was alleged, they knocked down and beat cruelly on June 6, at No. 31½ Whitehall-street. The complainant did not appear, and they were discharged.

A fancy-looking man, named Daniel Matthews, flashily dressed and mustachioed, had a quarrel with Mary A Eason, at No. 23 Thompson-street. The complainant—a pretty woman, Judge Brownell said, (aside)—testified that Matthews beat and kicked her in a shameful manner, on the 7th of this month. She had had a previous quarrel with him, when he struck her and she threw a glass of beer at him. The prisoner said she threw a glass camphene lamp at him at the time of the assault.

Judge Osborne—Was that before or after you struck her?

Prisoner (facetiously)—Well, it was at the same time.

Judge—She testifies, and so do other witnesses, that you struck her first, and she had a right to strike you back. That's a pretty thing for a man like you to strike a woman, isn't it? We find you guilty and fine you $20.

The prisoner looked at the Judge as if it would afford him infinite satisfaction to commit $20 worth of assault on him, and then slowly left the bar.

Christiana Kaib, a German woman, denied that she stole an Ambrotype, worth $4, from Wm. Tomlinson, No. 441 Broadway, on the 9th of May. She was discharged for want of sufficient evidence.

Catharine Scanlon and Ann Murphy, two Irish women, had a sort of knock-down and drag-out, rough-and-tumble and no-quarter fight on Saturday. Ann considered herself the aggrieved party; she seems to have got the worst of it and perhaps thought matters might be squared and a balance struck between them by procuring Catharine's immurement in the Tombs. She testified that the prisoner struck her with a shovel and a saucer. The prisoner at the bar (with a child in her arms) claimed that she was the attacked party. The complainant wanted the case postponed. "The other woman has got all me witnesses drunk," said she. The Judge would not consent to this, and at once went on examining witnesses.

The Court—(To Counsel)—Don't make too much out of it. It was a fair field-fight, it seems to me. A drawn battle. Let her go.

The feminine pugilists looked fistic uffs at each other and departed.

Henry Steiffer who, on Tuesday, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery and was remanded, was brought up to be sentenced. Judge Osborne asked the Clerk if he had been in prison since Tuesday. The Clerk said he had. "Well," said the Judge, "that's punishment enough. Let him go."

Two interesting young women with heavy veils over their faces were next brought to the bar to be sentenced. Emma A. Field and Julia Montague, the prisoners, on the 11th of June entered the store of Lane & Porter, No. 72 Canal street, with the purpose ostensibly of making purchases. After examining some of their goods, they were about to leave, when a clerk perceived a piece of jaconet which Emma had under her arm, which was the property of the firm, and which she was apparently about to purloin. An officer was called, and they were taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court, and detained on a charge of petit larceny. Emma had been but six months in the City, and had come from the country. Respectable persons gave her a very good general character. She, however, was adjudged guilty, and was directed to pay a fine of $15. She asked that an officer might go with her to the Jefferson Market Police Court, where she had given up $15, all the money she possessed, on her arrest. Justice Osborne said he could not send an officer with her; if any one of them saw fit to volunteer to go with her, he might do so. An officer immediately volunteered, and went after the money. The other prisoner was discharged.

A pause now ensued in the proceedings of the Court. "Mr. Johnson," said Judge Osborne, "what impedes the wheels of Justice?" "We're waiting for the prisoner Kauffman," said the clerk, "his trial was to be resumed this morning before your Honor and Justice Connolly." The crier adjourned the Court for a few moments. Judge Connolly soon after took his seat beside Judge Osborne, and Frederick Kauffman, charged with keeping a disorderly house at No. 283 Water-street, was brought before the bar. After some conversation with counsel he was discharged. "This is the third time you have been discharged on complaint of keeping a bad house," said Judge Connolly to the prisoner; "orders will be given to Captain Ditchett to keep his eye on you. Take care that you are not caught here again."

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets.... Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

FRIDAY, June 19, 1857—6 P. M.

The rainy weather impedes business.

ASHES—Unchanged. Pearls, $7 75; Pots, $8 12½@$8 25 ₱ 100 lbs.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A Great Book for the Car, Cabin and Coach.
PUBLISHED THIS MORNING:
CHIT-CHAT
OF HUMOR, WIT AND ANECDOTE.
With 50 Original Illustrations, from Designs by that Eminent Humorist, JOHN MCLENNAN.
EDITED BY PIERCE PUNGENT.

Here is a cyclopædia of wit, humor, anecdote, droll yarns, Western sermons, fun, fancy and fiction. A Chit-Chat for the million—of the choice gems of genius—fresh, racy and genial, whether coined by the sentimentalist or the humorist, a rattling, random miscellany of proverbs, jests, sharp sayings, stories, curious epitaphs, and comic epigrams. Every line tells either jocosely, pathetically, sathically or wittily; side splitting laughter, alternating with sympathetic grief, as the Humorist or Moralist presides at the overflowing banquet. In this Brochure of Humor, Wit and Anecdote will be found the most recherché sparks that have flashed out from the mind of genius in every department of literature. Every page will be read with intense avidity by all classes who peruse its pages.

From the Syracuse Standard.

Here is an array of wit, humor, anecdote, fun, facts, and fancies, such as was never gathered together before within the two lids of a volume. It is a perfect avalanche of good things. The author must be "some pumpkins," if not more. If the reader is going a journey, or about spending a few days "out of town," let him call and get a copy.

From the Baltimore Clipper.

"CHIT CHAT OF HUMOR, WIT AND ANECDOTE."—This is simply a collection of bon mots, spicy paragraphs, anecdotes, &c., which, nevertheless, are, like "Orient pearls at random strung," none the less valuable on that account. Lovers of fun will buy this book, and so should sedentary persons of every class, as a preventive of the "blues" or hypochondria.

From the Springfield Republican.

The compilation is very comprehensive, and, so far as we have examined it, is drawn from the best sources. We propose to show our appreciation of its contents by placing selections from them among our "pleasant paragraphs."

Published and for sale by STRINGER & TOWNSEND, No. 222 Broadway, New-York, and for sale by all booksellers and newspaper agents everywhere.

NOTHING TO WEAR,
AN EPISODE OF CITY LIFE.

Miss Flora M'Flimsey, of Madison square,
Has made three separate journeys to Paris,
And her father assures me, each time she was there,
That she and her friend Mrs. Harris,
(Not the lady whose name is so famous in history,
But plain Mrs. H., without romance or mystery,)
Spent six consecutive weeks without stopping,
In one continuous round of shopping;
Shopping alone, and shopping together,
At all hours of the day, and in all sorts of weather;
For all manner of things that a woman can put
On the crown of her head or the sole of her foot,
Or wrap round her shoulders, or fit round her waist,
Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on, or laced,
Or tied on with a string, or stitched on with a bow,
In front or behind, above or below;
For bonnets, mantillas, capes, collars and shawls;
Dresses for breakfasts, and dinners, and balls;
Dresses to sit in, and stand in, and walk in;
Dresses to dance in, and flirt in, and talk in;
Dresses in which to do nothing at all;
Dresses for Winter, Spring, Summer and Fall:
All of them different in color and pattern,
Silk, muslin, and lace, crape, velvet, and satin,
Brocade, and broadcloth, and other material,
Quite as expensive, and much more ethereal;
In short, for all things that could ever be thought of,
Or milliner, modiste, or tradesman be bought of,
From ten thousand franc robes to twenty-sou trifles:
In all quarters of Paris, and to every store,
While M'Flimsey in vain stormed, scolded and swore,
They footed the streets, and he footed the bills.
The last trip, their goods shipped by the steamer Arago,
Formed, M'Flimsey declares, the bulk of her cargo,
And yet, tho' scarce three months have passed since the day
This merchandise went, on twelve carts, up Broadway,
This same Miss M'Flimsey, of Madison square,
The last time we met was in utter despair,
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!
NOTHING TO WEAR! Now, as this is a true ditty,
I do not assert—this, you know, is between us—
That she's in a state of absolute nudity,
Like Powers' Greek Slave or the Medici Venus;
But I do mean to say, I have heard her declare,
When, at the same moment, she had on a dress
Which cost five hundred dollars and not a cent less,
And jewelry worth ten times more, I should guess,
That she had not a thing in the wide world to wear!
I should mention just here, that out of Miss Flora's
Two hundred and fifty or sixty adorers,
I had just been selected as he who should throw all
The rest in the shade, by the gracious bestowal
On myself, after twenty or thirty rejections,
Of those fossil remains, which she called "her affections,"
And that rather decayed, but well-known work of art,
Which Miss Flora persisted in styling "her heart."
So we were engaged. Our troth had been plighted,
Not by moonbeam or starbeam, by fountain or grove,
But in a front parlor, most brilliantly lighted.
Beneath the gas fixtures we whispered our love.
Without any romance, or raptures, or sighs,
Without any tears in Miss Flora's blue eyes,
Or blushes, or transports, or such silly actions,
It was one of the quietest business transactions.
With a very small sprinkling of sentiment, if any,
And a very large diamond, imported by Tiffany,
On her virginal lips which I pressed a la mode
She exclaimed, in a sort of parenthesis,
"NOTHING TO WEAR!"

We give the above beginning of that wonderfully clever satire upon the fashions and extravagance of New-York female aristocracy, which appeared lately in Harper's Weekly, entitled, and which proved to be so complete a hit, that over one hundred thousand copies were sold, and the demand is still unabated. A superb edition of this capital poem has just been published, profusely and elegantly embellished, and printed upon tinted paper, with exquisite wood engravings, from original designs by HOPPIN (the first humorous artist in America.) The book has been produced in the very highest style of art, as regards paper, printing, illustrating, and binding; and the publishers are confident that no taste, however cultivated, but will be satisfied and delighted with this charming little work.

"NOTHING TO WEAR,"

12mo, elegantly bound in cloth, pp. 68. Price 50 cents.

For sale by all booksellers. Copies of this book will be sent by mail, postage paid, to any part of the United States, on receipt of the price, in stamps, 50 cents.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

There is a great calm in town—while, quietly, everybody discusses the causes and consequences of the late riot in the Park. Mr. DEVELIN is acting as Street Commissioner, retaining all of Mr. TAYLOR's clerks except the two that Mr. Deputy TURNER so suddenly ejected while he was contesting Mr. CONOVER's physical endeavors to take possession. Mr. CONOVER is about to seek by a quo warranto to obtain the place out of which the Mayor and Aldermen have crowded him. Other legal proceedings instituted yesterday may be found in our columns this morning. Ex-Alderman STURTEVANT's version of the famous interview between Governor KING and Mayor WOOD, which differs essentially from the Mayor's,—President DRAPER's and General NYE's flat contradiction of the "stormy conference" between the Governor and those gentlemen as manufactured for the Herald, and the methods by which Mr. CONOVER was prevented from complying strictly with the law that makes it necessary for him to submit his sureties to the Mayor,—all which and much more of the sort we publish this morning, will charm the interested reader, we do not doubt.

The Judges of the Court of Appeals were in consultation all yesterday afternoon and evening on the Metropolitan Police case. Rumors were current in Albany that a decision would be rendered today, but there was probably no foundation for them. It is thought at the capital that the constitutionality of the law will be upheld.

Our Havana correspondence is to the 14th inst. The Spanish squadron destined to act against Mexico had not yet arrived, but was hourly expected, and great preparations were made for its reception. The most important item of intelligence, however, is the recall of Captain General CONCHA, and the appointment of Señor SORSUNDI in his place. The cause of this unexpected movement is a demand for his recall by the English Ambassador at Madrid, on account of CONCHA's alleged open connivance at the slave-trade. The evidence against him is said to be so conclusive that the Spanish Government could not hesitate for a moment to accede to the demand. The yellow fever has decreased somewhat since previous advices.

The Spanish Government has extended until the 31st of December the exemption from duty to all vessels arriving in Spain from foreign ports with flour, grain, beans, and other mealy substances. The whole cargo, however, must consist of these substances, or full duties will have to be paid.

The steamship Kangaroo arrived last evening, from Liverpool on the 3d inst. Her advices have been superseded by previous arrivals—the Europa having brought news to the 6th.

Further news from Kansas states that the Legislature adjourned on the 13th. Various acts were passed—among them one appointing an election for State officers and Representatives to Congress on the first Monday in August, and another locating the seat of Government at Topeka.

Hon. N. P. BANKS has written a letter to GEORGE W. MESSENGER, Esq., President of the American State Convention, accepting of the nomination for the Governorship of Massachusetts. The leading points of the epistle will be found under the telegraphic head.—ELIPHALET TRASK, Esq., the nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, has also written a letter of acceptance.

We learn from Washington that one of the vacant United States Judgeships of Utah has been accepted by EMERY D. POTTER, ex-member of Congress from Ohio. The other Judgeship has been offered to Mr. ECKLES, of Indiana, who, it is thought, will accept.

JACKSON, who murdered RONAL MORRIS in Lake County, Ill., last Fall, was executed yesterday morning near Chicago. He confessed to the murder previous to the execution of the sentence.

The people of Providence, R. I., after five attempts, have at last succeeded in electing a Mayor. WM. M. RODMAN, the American candidate, was yesterday elected by 983 majority over all.

The establishment of A. C. VAN BLARCUM, carpenter and builder, at Paterson, N. J., was blown up yesterday morning, by the explosion of a steam-boiler. The building was entirely demolished. No lives were lost.

The Old Dominion Steam Flour Mills, at Petersburg, Va., were destroyed by an incendiary fire on Thursday night. Loss $50,000.

AUGUSTE PAROT, the prisoner in the French Extradition case, who escaped from the Eldridge-street Jail on Wednesday last, has not been found yet. The Jailer and one of his Deputies have been searching the City through for him. It is rumored that he has pushed for Corado. Meantime the Sheriff, in whose custody he was at the time of his escape, has taken no measures to secure the prisoner's rearrest. He says there are some legal points in the matter to be decided by counsel, but refuses to shed any light on these points.

It is stated that a motion will soon be made to strike the names of Messrs. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH from the roll of Attorneys, for the course they pursued in effecting the escape of PAROT. The Sheriff will endeavor to compel them to indemnify him on his bond, in the sum of $500,000, and a criminal suit will be instituted against them for resisting an officer in the discharge of his duties.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, Alderman WILSON, against whom a warrant had been issued, appeared, and surrendered himself. The Recorder held him to bail in $5,000. Street-Commissioner DEVLIN became his surety. DOMINICK-RAGANS was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 for violating Quarantine laws. He paid it, after a brief delay. Some cases of no special importance were tried. The Grand Jury were discharged without making a presentment.

General WALKER enjoyed a respite yesterday from the numerous calls of the previous days, the rain and the General's evident anxiety to be quiet keeping the sympathizers at home. Col. LOCKRIDGE left by the evening train for the South, and General WALKER went to Staten Island to spend Sunday with C. C. NORVELL, Esq., his uncle.

The late heavy rains have caused the most destructive freshets in various parts of the State. In addition to the overflow of the village of Corning, which we noticed yesterday morning, we now publish dispatches announcing serious damage to various portions of the canals. The interruptions to business in consequence must of necessity be very considerable.

The Aldermen met twice yesterday and—adjourned.

HEAVY BURGLARY AT KINGSTON.—At an early hour on Wednesday morning it was discovered that the store of TOWNSEND, MERWITH & Co., at Kingston, Ulster County, had been burglariously entered during the night and a large quantity of goods taken therefrom. Ten pieces of black silk, twenty-five pieces of colored silk, and some twenty five pieces of satin, amounting to over $1,500 were taken. It is thought that the burglars came from this City.

Mayor Wood's Apologists.

The Daily News of yesterday, in commenting upon the attack which the Municipal Police made, on Tuesday last, upon the posse comitatus assembled by Coroner PERRY to enforce the law, remarks:

"Their entrance was resisted, of course, BY ORDER OF THE MAYOR OF THE CITY, and these fool-hardy men, or men of a fool-hardy and unrecognized official, were disconfited, and they retired, many of them, with sore heads, some with half broken ones."

The "fool hardy official" referred to by the News, was not the individual that paper appears to suppose; but a Coroner of the City, who had already been at the Mayor's Office for the purpose of arresting him, and who had been refused admittance. The Coroner, most unexpectedly to himself, had been called upon to act, because the original order, of the Superior Court, to arrest, had included the Sheriff as well as the Mayor, in which case the statutes expressly provide that the Coroner shall be summoned to fulfill the Sheriff's duty. Coroner PERRY can be supposed to have had no personal feeling in the matter, nor do we believe that he had any. It was only after having exhausted every effort to obtain admission to the presence of Mr. WOOD, that he reluctantly returned to the Recorder's Office, and there did his duty by making an affidavit of the facts of the case, the principal one of which were as follows:

"That he went with the said warrant to the City Hall in the said City for the purpose of arresting the defendant FERNANDO WOOD thereon, under and by virtue of the said warrant; that he went to the outer door of the said office of the Mayor, the said FERNANDO WOOD, in the said City Hall, and was at first denied admittance; but on being informed that he was such Coroner, and had business with the Mayor, was admitted within the said office up to the railing within the same, where he was met by some twenty or more of the Municipal Policemen, who denied him admission to the inner room, where, it was said, and where deponent believes, and has no doubt, the said WOOD then was; that this deponent declared to them his business, and told them that he was such Coroner, and had such process or warrant of arrest; that there upon a messenger went into the inner office and informed said Wood of deponent's business, that deponent does not know his name, but that he also was a Municipal Policeman; that he returned almost instantly, and then a Mr. ACKERMAN, formerly, and now claiming to be Captain of Police, who was then present, and who, as I believe, came out of the said private office of the said WOOD, came to deponent and TOLD HIM THAT IT WAS THE MAYOR'S ORDERS THAT HE SHOULD BE TURNED OUT OF THE ROOM; that he then immediately seized this deponent, and after a little resistance on his part, led and forced this deponent out of the room, and he was, therefore, wholly unable then to execute the said warrant of arrest, by reason of the resistance then and there given by the said WOOD and the said ACKERMAN to such service by this deponent."

Under the circumstances, Coroner PERRY might have at once called out the military. The law authorizes him to do so. Art. VII., p. 537, sec. 101, part 3 of the Revised Statutes reads as follows:

"When a Sheriff, or other public officer authorized to execute any process delivered to him, shall find or have reason to apprehend that resistance will be made to the execution of such process, he shall be authorized to command every male inhabitant of the County or as many as he shall think proper, and with such arms as he shall direct any military Company or Companies in said County, armed and equipped, to assist him in overcoming such resistance, and, if necessary, in seizing, arresting and confining the resisters, their aiders and abettors, to be dealt with according to law."

The Recorder counselled, with a proper spirit of moderation, that the smallest possible force should be employed, and his advice was followed. The Coroner returned to the City Hall with fifty men, and it was against this body of "male inhabitants of the county" that the City Hall was barricaded, and whose "entrance," according to the News, "was resisted by order of the Mayor of the City." It is idle to say that the men called upon to assist the Coroner were members of the new Police. Resistance would even then have been illegal; but admitting that they had no right to arrest the Mayor, what has that to do with the admitted authority, resisted from the outset, of Coroner PERRY? What excuse is afforded by the idle prattle of the News, and the changes it rings upon the words "Albany Police," "Metropolitan Police," "Bogus Commissioners," &c., for the original order of the Mayor to Mr. ACKERMAN that he should turn the Coroner out of his office? Granting, for an instant, that the Metropolitan Police deserved resistance while acting in their official capacity, is, therefore, a posse comitatus, assembled under the law which authorizes public officers to "COMMAND every male inhabitant to assist him in overcoming resistance, in arresting the resisters," to be "of course" (!) resisted, and those who compose it to come off, "by order of the Mayor," with "sore" or "half-broken" heads? We hope that the News will pause before it allows factional feeling to sweep it away into reckless defence of such wretched civil ethics. We prefer hoping that the author of the article from which we have quoted, and of another, in the same paper, entitled "the revolution is at an end," wrote in utter ignorance of all of the facts of the case, to reciprocating the charge of falsehood, which, "to relieve itself from odium and disgrace," it brings against no less than four of the City journals. The enormous guilt of Mr. WOOD is as clear as noon-day. He so well knows it himself that he has used every effort since Wednesday, to retreat from the consequences of his errors by substituting the language of peace and submission to the law, for the bloody threats and determined rebellion of Tuesday and Wednesday last. It is too late. The punishment for his misdeeds has yet to come. It is equally necessary as a warning for the future, and as a just retribution for acts which never would be pardoned in a private citizen, but of which the atrocity, in a Municipal Chief Magistrate, can scarcely be exaggerated.

The Journal of Commerce, in attempting to palliate the misdeeds of the Mayor, founds its editorial comments upon the deliberate misstatements of its reporter. In its columns of Wednesday, after treating upon the fight in front of the City Hall, in which the presence of the Coroner, as well as his previous attempt to arrest the Mayor, and his affidavit, are wholly ignored, it says:

"After the difficulty was over Coroner PERRY called upon the Mayor for the purpose of serving the civil process upon him, (a Coroner being the only officer who can arrest the Mayor and the Sheriff) The Coroner was politely received, fulfilled his mission, and accepted recognizance in the sum of $10,000 for the appearance of the Mayor before Judge HOFFMAN as required by the writ."

The words in italics would, of course, leave the impression that the only interview between the Coroner and the Mayor related to the civil process, and that their meeting took place subsequently to the riot which the latter incited. The truth, as stated above, is widely different. "After the difficulty was over," the Coroner, as we believe, did not see the Mayor at all; but his arrest finally took place by the hands of Mr. WILLET, on a warrant in which the Sheriff's name was not included. On Thursday morning the Journal reiterated its misstatement, as follows:

"The Mayor, correcting his mistake of the previous day, submitted to be arrested by an Albany-made Policeman, Capt. SPEIGHT. However trying this may have been to the Chief Magistrate of the Empire City, it was an homage due to law—even to a bad law, and in some of its provisions probably an unconstitutional one. But until so decided by the courts, there is no other way but to conform to its precepts.

We have no doubt in our own minds, that the affair was deliberately planned by the State Police interest on purpose to tempt the Mayor into a false position. They doubtless knew that if the warrant were sent by an officer whom he acknowledged as entitled to make the arrest, he would yield without hesitation. Such officers were at hand, and might as easily have been employed for the purpose, as his own discharged policemen. Whenever they were employed, he respected their authority and submitted to arrest."

If the writer of the above was unaware of its inaccuracies when it was written, he ought, at least, to have apologized to the public, yesterday, when, for the first time, the affidavit of Coroner PERRY was published in the Journal's columns. Instead of performing this act of simple justice, the leader of that paper is once more devoted to plastering up the Mayor's criminality, which it no longer wholly dares to deny. It cannot do this, however, without again, in direct contradiction to its editorial report in another column, denying that a properly qualified officer attempted to make the arrest, and attributing the whole difficulty to the Metropolitan Police, who, in the eye of the law, had nothing to do with the matter. It says:

"But it was determined by the eminently-pacific State Police Commissioners, and Recorder SMITH, to compel him to receive it from one of his discharged Policemen.—discharged for insubordination, and now a member of the State Police force. Hence the trouble which followed. And here, as we stated yesterday, was, in our view, the Mayor's chief mistake. However imprudent and rash it was on the part of these gentlemen, especially in the then highly excited state of the public mind, to insist on this point, it would have been wise in the Mayor to comply. By refusing, he put himself on the wrong side of the law, and gave his opponents an advantage which they did not fail to use."

Be it remembered that the same page of the Journal which contains this last quotation—nearly every line of which is tantamount to an untruth—gives in full the sworn testimony of Coroner PERRY, that he was "turned out of the Mayor's office" while there to perform the duty which the writer insists was exclusively intrusted to Metropolitan Policemen! When so staid a paper as the Journal of Commerce can thus be carried out of its latitude by prejudice and passion, what can be expected from more mercurial dispositions? If the confessions of the News are added to the Journal's blind dogmatism, and the ravings of the Mayor's organ, the Herald, and all three are compared with the simple, historical facts of the case, an accurate view may be obtained, not only of the depth of the atrocities into which Mayor WOOD has fallen, but also of the means by which he vainly seeks to justify himself to the public.

Logic of the Fist.

We took occasion recently to draw attention to the fact that physical strength was gradually taking the place of everything else, as a qualification for public officers. Reports, decisions, cases, commentaries, text books, year books, quibbles, quiddets, quirks, are all becoming so much useless lumber. Society is simplifying. The public service is, henceforward, to be carried on by dint of hard knocks.

We must observe that we intended our remarks more especially to apply to rival candidates for public offices. We wished to establish the great fact, a fact as noteworthy as any to which this age has given birth, that with a freedom from stupid forms, and a superiority to the arts of chicane and intrigue, which reflects the highest credit upon our social as well as political organization, the work of Government promised ere long to be carried on by men who had fought their way to eminence, not by tricks of the tongue, or wiles of the brain, but by the use of those weapons with which nature has gifted them—their fists. What nobler spectacle has been witnessed in any country or at any period, than a host of functionaries administering the affairs of a great people, not in virtue of the warrant of tyrant rulers, or the votes of a fickle populace, but in virtue of the profession of sinewy arms and hard knuckles. What prouder device was ever borne upon a municipal escutcheon than that which promises, ere long, to be the only one worthy of ours—than a brawny hand, a black eye, and a bloody nose. When some Albany junto of some future day shall ask our sons for the commissions by which they claim their places, they may adopt with greater applicability, and a more touching simplicity, the language of the old Scotch baron, when one of the JAMES' asked for his title deeds. "This is my title deed," said he, pointing to his sword. "By this I acquired my lands and with this I shall defend them." If the Mayor of New-York, in a century to come, is ever served with a quo warranto, the world will ring with applause when he, the chief of bruisers, presents himself before a bench of other bruisers, and makes the proud return, "By this club I acquired my office, and with this club I will retain it."

Our object, in recurring to this subject today, is to draw attention to the fact that the principle which is working so complete a change in the personnel of our Government is making itself felt, also, in the learned professions. The lawyers have been always remarkable for their ready adaptability to the wants and changes of the times. They, too, are evidently recognizing the great truth by which society at large will soon be leavened, that the battle should be to the strong alone—that the prize-ring is, after all, the true Court of last resort, and a well-delivered punch in the head is worth volumes of fusty precedents and yards of special pleadings. The first symptom of this change in legal sentiment was afforded by that eminent jurist, whose reputation has now reached the very confines of civilization—Mr. BUSTEED. That "learned person," as the text-books say, vindicated, at great personal risk, and at the cost of much obloquy and misrepresentation, the great doctrine that any book, paper, map, or document, of which conneel can obtain possession in Court, he may lawfully retain, vie et armis, as long as he is able.

To a broad insinuation from the other side against BUSTEED, that gentleman replied—and we call the attention of all young lawyers to the form—by advancing in a menacing manner, intimating, we presume, a readiness to box. We would recommend practitioners, however, who purpose resorting to this proceeding, to perform this last movement with turned up coat-cuffs. The principle once established, its application is naturally spreading. As soon as clients know that their lawyers' duties are not simply confined to writing and speaking, but may also extend to assault, battery, forcible seizure, ouster and rescue, the large men will naturally creep soonest into practice. BUSTEED's precedent has been carefully followed, as may be seen by what occurred in PAROT's case on Wednesday. The prisoner, while still in the hands of an officer—whether rightly or wrongly so held in custody, was, under the old system, a matter for the decision of one of the Courts, passing upon the sufficiency of a return to a writ of habeas corpus. Since the recent change, it appears that the proper course for a man's legal adviser to pursue, when he conceives his client to be unlawfully detained in custody, is to rescue him by main force. This was precisely the course pursued by Messrs. GALBRAITH and TOWNSHEND at noonday and in full thoroughfare. We congratulate the legal profession upon the spirit and ingenuity displayed by these able members of their body. A few more such exploits and the New-York Bar will be able to boast men, before whose robust and vigorous frames, and dexterous pugilism, the graceful eloquence of MANSFIELD and the well ordered lore of KENT will pale their ineffectual fires. We sincerely hope the great lights of the Bar in past times sleep soundly in their graves. If they ever hover round the haunts which their genius once hallowed, and drink in the "forensis strepitus" by which their ears were once refreshed, they must be strangely surprised by some of the men who have succeeded them. Who cannot fancy SOMERS, in the rich autumn of his glorious life, advising a rising junior that he owed it to himself, as a barrister and a gentleman, when all other expedients failed, to rescue his client by force from the hands of the officers of justice?

Flighty Advice from Lawyers.

"What have you done with your client?" asked an old justice of a distinguished lawyer, as he returned alone from the consultation room, adjoining the judicial chambers, but which he had entered in company with a citizen charged with horse-stealing. "If your Honor pleases," was the answer, "when I was assigned as his counsel, you told me to take him into yonder room, and give him the best advice I could. I have heard his case, and the best advice I could give him was to run."

The Court took no steps to punish the facetious advocate, but, if rumor be true, the District-Attorney is preparing the proper affidavits on which to move for the dis-barring from the Court rolls of the two legal gentlemen who, a few days ago, advised Monsieur PAROT, after the fashion of Jo. MILLER'S counselor. Messrs. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH, his attorneys, have been fighting for his liberty, in connection with counsel BUSTEED, with a zeal worthy of a less lame and impotent conclusion. The "PAROT" in question has been a jail-bird for some time, and his "how-dye-does," parrot-like, have been given to the passers-by of the Eldridge-street cage in rather broken English. No one finds fault with him for putting in leg bail, or, according to his native custom, taking French leave of the Sheriff; but his advisers to flight will have an account to settle hereafter with their professional brethren, the Court, and the public.

Some years ago Counselor BUSTEED not only advised an extradition client to flight, but actually ran with him a certain distance; and, unfortunately, ran before and not behind, or the charitable would have said he was attempting a recapture. No notice was taken of this highly unprofessional act.

Messrs. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH, perhaps, taking courage from this former inattention from justice, each held the Deputy Sheriff by an arm, whilst the client fled, leaving to the officer a slight souvenir du voyage in the shape of liability to the snug sum of half a million of dollars. Meantime, whilst the Courts and Grand Jury are to consider what shall be done with these lawyers, who are evidently believers in the Lord Brougham obligation of fidelity to clients in all extremities, every good citizen who may encounter the stray PAROT are requested to return him to the debtors' cage, where the Sheriff has in readiness a large-sized "cracker."

Exhibition of the National Academy.

THIRD NOTICE.

We closed our last notice of the Academy Exhibition with a word upon Mr. PEELE'S agreeable little picture of the "Sound of the Shell." A harmonious instinct leads us to the same artist's "Music of the Reeds," (No. 529,) which has fewer faults and fewer merits, too, than its companion work. The two paintings seen in contrasted combination make up, however, a very pleasant duet. The coloring of the No. 529 is impaired by the same thickness and murkiness of tone upon which we found occasion to remark in speaking of the "Sound of the Shell." This is particularly true of the draperies of the figure and of the trees—the carnations being on the whole more pure and pleasing than those of the No. 399, and the distance full of feeling and of fidelity to Nature. The characterization of this little brown-haired rustic maiden, like that of her flaxen-tressed sister of the shore, leaves very little to be desired. If we wished to ornament our palatial residence with a series of characteristic pictures of children, we should count upon such an artist as Mr. PEELE with confidence.

Hardly so upon such an artist as Mr. GIGNOUX, whose otherwise fine landscapes are singularly defective in regard to this special quality of typical truth. Mr. GIGNOUX paints what he sees very well, but he does not see so well what he should paint.

Take, for instance, the "View on the Saguenay," No. 427, painted for the late Lord ELLESMERE, and destined to revive upon the walls of Bridgewater House the splendid souvenirs which all travelers must bring away from the wildest and most magnificent of Canadian, and, for the matter of that, of American rivers. Who that remembers that wonderful stream, with its grand sweeps and breadths of duskily gleaming waters—with its stupendous barriers of rock, and its stately fringes of "forest primeval," will recognize the "Saguenay" in this picture of purple cliffs and naked pines, wherein the river is hinted at as an accident, and a bit of the shore scenery made the prominent subject of the artist's skill? The cliffs and the pines are treated, certainly, with a great deal of power, though their effect would have been improved by a slight suggestion of atmosphere—but the picture is not in the least a satisfactorily characteristic picture. The same criticism must be made, with very little less vivacity, upon Mr. GIGNOUX's picture, No. 476, of the "Seven Falls" of Canada—in which, moreover, we have to question the water. In an allegorical representation of Goethen, for instance, or of any other land which "flows with milk and honey," this cataract of cream might be legitimate enough. We don't believe it is to be seen at the "Seven Falls."

Here, after all, is one of Mr. KENSETT's leading merits. His scenes are always recognizable, and even if you do not know their prototypes, you are struck at once by their unquestionable reality. You feel that if you saw the places which Mr. KENSATT paints, you should never forget them. How true this is of such a picture as his No. 453. The waves of the sea are "put in" a little dramatically, perhaps; but how excellently composed, how complete a unity the picture is! Mr. HART, again, has something of this same priceless power. His "October Afternoon in the Tropics" (No. 185) is one of the most individual landscapes in the collection—pervaded with a true and tender autumnal sentiment—a well-conceived, harmonized, thoroughly agreeable picture—very much such a picture as we can fancy that DURAND would paint were he to lose a little knowledge and to gain a little inspiration. There is vitality, too, in another landscape, not far from this of Mr. HART's. "Nightfall in the Wilderness," by Mr. STILLMAN (No. 172)—with something of affected mannerism unites a singular sincerity of feeling and close fidelity to natural effects. It reminds us of all we like and all we dislike in WORDSWORTH's sonnets upon scenery. Mr. STILLMAN'S picture has a neighbor, too, in Mr. DANA's "Waiting for the Fishing-Boat," (No. 179) which must not be passed over without notice. This is a scene on the Norman coast, and shows a true feeling for sea-shore effects which is as delightful as it is rare, among our artists. The treatment is rather conventional, but the picture is a picture of promise.

For our other landscapists, from whom we had hoped much on looking over the catalogue, we have not received all that we hoped for. SHATTUCK, COLMAN, HOTCHKISS, all clever and advancing artists, have disappointed us this year by their evident cliqueism. "That way destruction lies," and we can't afford to lose such pencils as these. Mr. GIFFORD, whose pictures of former years we remember with interest, sends from England one lovely little cabinet picture of Stratford-on-Avon, (No. 477,) which is a temptation to Shakespearian eyes and a peril to poetic pockets. It is, indeed, worthy of a much abused epithet, now grown almost ridiculous, though nothing can be prettier or more appropriate than the feeling it portrays when applied to such a picture—"it is really a gem." For a gem is something which you wish to associate with yourself and your daily life, and one would like to hang such pictures as this in the cosiest nook of his library. Not so most of this year's portraits!

Perhaps there exists no intrinsic reason for the dreariness of exhibited portraits. In fact, we are sure that no such reason exists. For, after all, what is more worthy of the painter's art than a human face, with all the wonderful history of a human soul written out upon its balanced proportions! Nevertheless, exhibited portraits are dreary, and those of this year do form no exception to the sad rule.

There are foolish portraits—portraits so simpering, so conscious, so imbecile of expression, that you blush for your kind in looking on them, and feel as one feels when he hears a speaker trip in his discourse and stammer for half an hour, blundering onward through a maze of verbless nominatives, and of unlimbered antecedents. There are insolent portraits, portraits that provoke you to put up your lorgnette and prepare for an exchange of cards. There are insignificant portraits; portraits of the people who always lose their seats in the theatre, and never get up to the ticket office of a railway when there is a full train starting; there are ridiculous portraits—portraits of people who bought new suits of clothes to be painted in, or put on their Winter garments at Midsummer—of people who strike attitudes impossible in ordinary life, or affect a nonchalant ease, odious upon the canvas. But of quiet, yet effective, earnestly studied and powerfully painted portraits, reproducing the true characteristics of a certain man or woman, there is, alas! a plentiful lack on most occasions, as there is upon the present occasion, no overflowing supply thereof furnished to us. On the whole, the best picture of this class, (though not a pleasing one by any means,) is Mr. PAGE's "Roman Mother and Child," (No. 543.) The tone of this picture is vexatious enough, but it is wonderfully colored, and drawn with infinite feeling and force. There is no mistaking this type. It is the proud Trasteverine face, the grand strong Trasteverine figure—in many ways a wonderful little picture—which renews our regret that PAGE's fine portrait of BROWNING should not have had a fair chance of being seen at the London Exhibition of last year. HICKS has a single portrait—in fact, a single picture, (No. 459,)—which might have been called an apotheosis of HENRY WARD BEECHER. That emphatic and thorough-going divine appears on Mr. HICK's canvas in the aureole of a silver-gray glory, "sitting clothed and in his right mind," as it would appear, for his face has evidently been washed with unusual severity, and the whole man is redolent of soap and water, brushes and the toilet. It is an inanimate "feast of purification." Also, it is a very clever, though a whimsical picture, and is modeled with very great power. Not so Mr. ELLIOTT's pictures, which are singularly feeble and uneven; in tone and in treatment unworthy of his great and proved ability; nor do we much delight in Mr. HEALY's most ambitious work, the "Portrait of a Lady," (No. 480.) The details of this picture are remarkably good, but the likeness is unsatisfactory, and the coloring crude and cold—altogether not a picture to be coveted by any admirer of the fair original, nor by an amateur of portraits in the mass. Mr. HUNTINGTON has done better. His portraits of Mr. GULIAN C. VERPLANCK, (No. 86,) and Mr. MORTIMER LIVINGSTON, (No. 110,) are not only capital portraits in the matter of resemblance, but very agreeable and life-like pictures. His "Earl of Carlisle," (No. 19,) is more common-place and conventional, though clever. Mr. BAKER, as usual, paints like a successful limner, and young Mr. E. D. E. GREENE has made real progress towards a very high position in his art. His pictures (Nos. 55 and 274) are among the most earnestly studied in the Exhibition, and show a genuine feeling both for character and for color. He wants technical and anatomical knowledge, and a larger æsthetic philosophy alone to put himself among the peers. Mr. FAGIANI, whose eye is singularly faithful, and who rarely fails to seize a face, has this year given us some notable physiognomies, the most remarkable of which are those of Dr. KANE, (No. 269,) painted, as the catalogue tells us, for Sir HENRY L. BULWER, and of Governor KING (No. 124.) The large group by this artist, of a mother and three children is so badly hung that we cannot judge of its merits. Of crayon portraits, which we do not much affect, and of miniatures, which we almost alone among extant mortals do affect, the show is this year just respectable. Mr. LAWRENCE has a number of indifferent portraits, and one capital one (No. 344.) Mr. ROWSE has several, and Mr. STUGG has two charming drawings, one of a lady (No. 349) and one of a boy, (No. 351,) finished with refined grace and firm truth of design. The same artist, whose name ought to be at least as much honored in his own city as it is by an Athenian Censuis, gives us one or two delicious miniatures. His miniature of Mr. MIGNOT (No. 295) is worthy of the closest study.

Mr. GEORGE FREEMAN, well known on our Academy walls in former days, reappears with two characteristic miniatures (Nos. 299 and 300) which recalls the good old ante-photographic days. Of the aristocratic pastel we have some indescribable specimens, and one truly artistic and admirable example (No. 342) which is from the pencil of M. SARIBTINE, to whom we owe also certain crayon portraits, while some water-colors of great merit, by Mr. PHILP, (particularly Nos. 320 and 323,) and some clever pencil-drawings by the Messrs. HILL, make up the circle of the pictorial art.

After all, as we began to do, we end. The Exhibition is the best the Academy has ever given us. For which reason we regret that the Committee have resolved to close it so soon—this day being the last. We should have been glad of another opportunity to dwell upon the merits and demerits of many pictures which we have noticed, but have had no time to mention. And we should have been still more glad to see again and again the pictures that we like. But all things must have an end, and come to confusion; and the wise man will content himself with speeding the parting as he welcomes the coming guests of the year. A healthy, happy Summer, then, to all our artist friends—a profitable Winter, and a pleasant meeting for us all when the Spring comes back once more!

Musical.

After an absence which has been badly felt, Madame LA GRANGE made her reappearance last night, at Niblo's Saloon, before an enthusiastic and overflowing audience. It was the first of her two farewell concerts; the second and last coming off on Monday next, at the same room.

Programmes are so much alike now-a-days, that it is mere tedious repetition to refer to the items of which they are composed. It will be sufficient to say that Madame LA GRANGE displayed all those wonderful vocal characteristics for which she is famous, and appeared to be well in health and voice. She was warmly applauded. Her assistants were Miss SIMPS, a young lady with a fresh and pleasing soprano voice, but not much executive ability; by Mr. MOLLENHAUER, of whom it is unnecessary to speak; and by Mr. GUYON, a pianist of "distinction," who played a couple of solos and the accompaniments to the vocal pieces in an artistic and agreeable manner.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Among the artists engaged by Mr. CORBYN for this popular place of amusement and soon to arrive in this country, is Mlle. ROLLA, première danseuse of about a dozen respectable theatres in Europe. Her engagement at Mr. NIBLO'S is for a brief period, and was effected through the kindness of B. LUMLEY, Esq., Director of the Italian Opera, London, to whom Miss ROLLA belongs by right of prior engagement. Miss ROLLA is described as a talented and beautiful young girl of nineteen, and unusual exertions are being made at Niblo's Garden to give éclat to her appearance here.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.
S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck, so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you? We feel under so much obligations to you for the protection your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.
Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.
The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior

SOUTH AMERICA NEW PEOPLED, AND NOT BY FILIBUSTERISM.

A REVOLUTION THAT WILL BE HAILED WITH JOY BY ALL PARTIES.—Every climate has its peculiar inconvenience, and every race of men some disease to which they are more peculiarly liable. Here in North America, tens of thousands are yearly hurried to their graves by consumption, while in South and Central America the vast majority of the population carry in their veins or on their bodies, the festering and disgusting evidence of their own or their fathers' follies. Hereditary syphilis, with all its horrid train of diagnostics and results—the punishment of unbridled appetites and the mark set by nature against promiscuous intercourse—this foul and hideous disorder has run riot through generation after generation in the sultry climate of the tropics; and heretofore all attempts to eradicate the constitutional virus from the system have been attended with not the slightest success.

The poison was in the blood, in the bones, in the marrow, said the "regular doctors;" and with that sententious opinion they consigned their patients to despair. But it has just been found that RADWAY'S RENOVATING RESOLVENT, aided, when necessary, by the READY RELIEF and REGULATORS, has absolute control over the malady, and can not only check all outward indications of it, in a space of time most incredibly short, but can eliminate every taint of the subtle and pervading poison from the body, and give back to the deteriorated blood that vitality and purity which it lost in descending through the veins of a corrupt and unfortunate parentage. The importance of this discovery it would be impossible to overrate, and we feel justified in predicting from it, that before twenty years a new race of healthy and vigorous men, women and children will be found in the place of the present emaciated and ulcerated sufferers who excite the pity of European and American travelers as they pass through the smiling landscapes of that country.

Where all, save the spirit of man, is divine.

All who have ever visited South America must admit that we do not exaggerate when we state that at present it would be difficult to find any single native without more or less of the effects of the syphilitic disease observable in both his mental and physical constitution. Some owe their wretchedness to their own uncurbed and riotous passions; but by far the greater number have inherited the phagidenic poison from their parents, either immediate or remote, and we have known cases in which the hereditary taint has been transmitted for as many as five generations, and with every transmission the succeeding race became more emaciated and powerless in their bodies, (though without any external ulcer,) and more dwarfed and imbecile in intellect.

It is not, therefore, too much to say that the discovery of a sufficient cure for this constitutional virus assumes the importance of a great national regeneration; and the prediction that the R. R. R. will, in less than a quarter of a century, have given a new race of healthy, active and industrious people to the whole of this long distracted country, becomes rather a deduction of logic than the anticipation of any over sanguine hope. We know the facts on which we speak and cannot be mistaken in their bearing; the Renovating Resolvent utterly extirpates the inherited poison, and the Ready Relief and Regulators bring back the organs of secretion to that condition of normal activity and health in which pure blood is generated to take the place of the corrupt and noxious particles expelled.

It would greatly tend to facilitate and develope the physical revolution we have in view if the Governments of South and Central America would combine together and take specific action for the further and faster introduction of the remedies by which (and by which only) these desirable objects can be accomplished; but with or without such assistance, the discovery once made cannot fail of assurance of its own inherent importance, and every victim rescued will be a call to hundreds of his companions to come and be healed by the same potential influence. Some of our agents are already on the ground, and its first fruits of their experience we have written; and others are on their way there, or are now preparing to start, in that within a year we shall have depôts for the sale of R. R. R. at every chief town and river mouth from Cape St. Roque to Cape Blanco, and from the mouths of the Orinoco to those of the Rio de la Plata.

CHAPTER I.

THE RIDGT.

"Father!"

The word, uttered in a pleading, tremulous tone, came from the white, quivering lips of a young man, who stood in the portals of the Castle of Marstonwold, England. The sun was setting in the western wave, and the lawn and the archway of the Castle, fronting the east, were veiled in shadow. The youth had scarcely completed his twentieth year, and the dark, curling locks that wreathed his fine open brow, wore a soft and raven gloss. His features were of a fine Grecian mould, his figure slight and undeveloped, and his large brown eyes, now uplifted in supplication, burned with the sanguine fires of an impetuous soul.

Before the youth stood an old man of messy form, with gray hair and severe features, whose cold gray eyes gleamed with scintillations of anger and wounded pride. He waved his arm, as with a stern decree of banishment, while he frowned fiercely upon the youth.

"Father!" repeated the young man, in a tone of heart-searching entreaty. "Father, recall those terrible words of banishment! I cannot go from you! I would rather ask his pardon!"

"Go!" shouted the old man, with increased anger and rage. "You have always been accursed in my sight, and I do not wish to look upon your face again. Henceforth, you are no longer a son of the Earl of Marston. Go!"

A moment's hesitation—a furtive, pleading glance—one quiver of the lip—and then that young man rose in an upright position, his breast throbbing, and his eyes flashing with noble pride. He tossed the black locks from his flushed brow, and, in a voice deep, but firm, he said:

"Earl of Marston!—since I may no longer call you father—I obey the edict of your anger—the decree of my late! At your bidding, I go out into the world a homeless wanderer, disinherited, disgraced, a wretched outcast! You have cursed me with bastardy and shame, and, because, when one of your sons, to-day, taunted me with this curse, I struck him down, you now drive me forth. But, Earl of Marston, one word before I go: Be I legitimately born or not, one thing is certain, I have your blood in my veins, and so sure as this is the case, I swear to you that you shall again look upon my face before I die, and perhaps in an hour when you little wish it. Farewell!"

The sun set, and the old Earl stood in the doorway, watching the retreating form of Paul Marston, as he strolled down the road, and was soon lost in the shadows of the park.

"How much like his mother!" muttered the old man, as he closed the door, and turned away.

At the same hour of the evening, as the twilight shadows were settling over St Giles, London, in a small, low room, in an humble street leading to that wretched locality, an other scene was being chronicled by the Recording Angel of Time. It was a small apartment, scarcely eight feet square, almost devoid of furniture, and with but one centre of attraction. Stretched upon a dirty chaff bed, in the corner, covered by a torn and ragged quilt, were discovered the outlines of a human form. A woman's face, marked and haggard with human suffering and human woe, was just visible above the coverlet, while by the side knelt a woman of youthful appearance, gazing compassionately upon the sufferer beneath. The shadows were too dim to trace the definite beauty of the watcher's face. It could only be seen that its outline was regular, her hair full and luxuriant, and her form graceful and bold in its contour.

"Closer, my dear Annabel! lift me in your arms—I am dying!" moaned the sufferer.

The girl crept closer to the bed, took the woman in her arms and crouchiug down beneath her, rested her head in her lap.

"No, mother! not dying! Do not say so!" said the watcher, in a youthful voice, which trembled with emotion. "Do not so despair, mother dear! To-morrow I will go out again, and endeavor to get means to procure you some medicine. Cheer up, mother!"

The last gleams of the evening twilight fell upon the lifted face of the poor sufferer. It revealed her dark hair, slightly sprinkled with gray, features strongly marked, and her arms, lifted and clasped round her daughter's neck, thin and heathless.

"No, Annabel, do not deceive yourself; my voice sounds stronger in your ear; therefore, you think I am better. But it is the strength gathered from the fever which precedes death. Annabel, in an hour I will be dead—do not grieve! Let me talk while I may—I have something particular to tell you."

"But cheer up, mother," said the girl, solicitously, while the tears coursed down her cheeks. "You weary yourself talking, mother; try and sleep!"

"Annebel!" said the woman, in a deep voice, "the soul, purified as mine has been by the ordeal of sorrow and penitence, feels and knows when the angels welcome, and Death, the messenger, begins to unmoor their life-boat from the shores of Time. My hour has come—I feel—I know it—do not again interrupt me! Feel under my pillow, and get the packet."

There was no pillow on the bed. But Annabel felt on the floor under the head of the humble chaff bed, and, after a moment's search, drew forth a paper closely wrapped and carefully sealed.

"What is this?" she asked, "I have never seen it before!"

"Listen, Annabel," said the woman, her voice more husky and her words more broken, "this package contains the history and origin of your life. I never had the courage to tell you during my existence, and feared that I would not have the fortitude when I came to die. Therefore, I prepared that paper, with such proofs as were necessary to prove origin. But, Annabel, while I charge you to preserve that package as you do your virtue and your life, do not open it until it becomes necessary to prove your worthiness in some great worldly realization of pure happiness. Here, take this ring; it has upon it a peculiar signet, that may sometimes avail and protect you. But the packet—daughter—Annabel, keep it holy—remember—farewell!—we will meet in Heaven!"

A few short breaths, slower and slower—a slight tremor, subsiding into silence—tear-drops upon the face of the dead—a groan of conscious loneliness in the world, and silence reigned in the lonely death chamber!

In the chronicles of Fate, the events of this chapter were written within the hour, by invisible hands, and the horoscope of two souls were cast on the dial plate of the future. Let us read the hieroglyphics wrought by the shadows on the surface!

CHAPTER II.

CHANGE AND MARVELS.

There had been a storm at sea. A dismantled ship rode into the pier at the foot of Cortlandt street, just as the sun went down, on a bleak October evening, 18—. There were shattered masts, rent sails, entangled ropes, and a equal sea crew visible upon the deck and about the rigging, as they moored her to the pier. The last rays of the sun witnessed the hustle and confusion of the landing, and fell upon some prominent characters as they stepped upon the shore.

A young girl of perhaps nineteen years, with the brilliant glory of meek but radiant beauty, believing her humble garb, approached the captain, as he stood near the wheel, just as the boat touched, and said:

"Captain Mason, permit me, before leaving the boat, to return you my sincere thanks for the kindness you have shown me during the passage; and assure you that, though I may never live to repay you for your generous favor to a friendless girl, yet I shall ever remember you in my prayers!"

The captain—a young, handsome man, of twenty-five—gazed admiringly into the lovely face of the beautiful girl, whose head was slightly bowed with meekness, and then, in a tone of secret gratification, replied:

"Why, my dear Miss Mayhew, what do you owe me such gratitude for? You came to me on the quay of the Thames, stating that you were friendless, with only half passage money, yet wishing to come to America, where, you thought, you could do better than in the thronged metropolis of England. I thought so, too, and so I brought you. I have only done what every true American should and would do for every helpless female, and I ask no thanks. But what do you propose to do, now that you are here?"

The girl paused for a moment, with a show of timid fear, and then said:

"I have heard that the needle-women are paid better here than in England, and I am very ready with my needle, with some knowledge of the millinery business. As you have so generously refused to accept any portion of my scanty funds, I suppose I shall be able to subsist until I can procure a situation in that capacity."

"I have just been thinking," said the young Captain, musingly. "I have a married sister living in Waverley-place, whose husband follows the sea, as I do, and is much from home. Kate, I know, will be glad to have your society—at least, you can remain there until you can secure another home."

"O, Captain, this kindness over—"

"No word of thanks. Lieutenant Wilson," said the Captain, addressing a young officer near, "accompany Miss Mayhew to our shipping-office, until I have completed the orders of the day. I will be there, Miss, in half an hour, and convey you to my sister's residence."

There were two other persons near by, who overheard the above conversation, and watched the parties with equal interest, though with different motives. One was a young man dressed in sailor's garb, who stood by the railing near, apparently gazing off upon the city, but, in reality, listening to the conversation, and stealing an occasional glance at the speakers. He seemed about twenty years old, possessed a handsome face, and form rather slight; and, from the delicate texture of his skin, and the rich gloss of his hair, he had evidently just completed his first voyage.

The other watcher was a tall, dark-featured man, who stood lounging near the wheelhouse, seemingly desiring to get behind it, and evade observation, while his attitude was one of intense interest, as he listened to the conversation. He was rather handsome, so far as concerned the regularity of his features, or the curl and gloss of his hair; but his black, piercing eyes were apparently sheathed beneath bold, dark brows, giving a subtle, sinister expression to his countenance. There seemed to be a retiring, mysterious air about him, that was repulsive and offensive.

"Curses on your generosity!" he muttered between his teeth, as he heard the Captain utter his kind intention to Miss Mayhew. And, then the seething passions of a fiendish nature distorted his face, and scintillated in his basilisk eyes, as he continued: "But, by the eternal! you will not foil me, Captain Mason. Let but Oscar Darlington get back to his old haunts again, and he will foil the devil for such a prize as that! Egad! but she is a rare beauty! How fortunate that we came in the same ship!"

The Lieutenant had stepped ashore with the young girl, and the dark stranger followed to where the Captain stood.

"I will send for my baggage in the morning, Captain," he said, blandly, "and permit me to say, that you deserve the hearty thanks of the crew for piloting us safe into harbor through such a storm as we have endured."

"Permit me to say, Sir, that I deserve nothing of the kind; my own life was quite as valuable as any one else's, and I struggled for that as well as yours," said the Captain, with cold politeness, as he bowed and turned away.

"Insolent puppy!" muttered the stranger to himself, as he leapt upon the pier and walked away.

"There goes as great a villain as ever nature made, and the devil saved!" said Captain Mason, turning to the young sailor. "I feared the man at through the voyage, and, when in the storm he betrayed such alarm and fear, it only confirmed me in my suspicions of his villainy. None but the guilty could ever be so frightened."

"Please yer honor, cap'n," said an old tar, leaving near, having overheard the remarks, "I can't exactly make out his figer head, but it strikes me I've seen him in these parts afore."

"That is evident, Jack; for he steers out into the city, you see, without chart or compass, and seems to be familiar with his quarters."

"Dammee! if I aint got a suspicion! I—I'll visit old Duncan's crib to-night, just for tha satisfaction of it. But, cap'n, how soon can we go ashore?"

"In ten minutes, Jack. The ship is too badly shattered to put her in any plight to night—clear away the larboard a little and pipe the boys to quarters."

A few moments after, the Captain reirmed from the cabin, and finding his orders obeyed, gave the crew a formal discharge, and started himself for the office of the company in whose employ he was.

"I say, messmate," said the old tar, as they stepped ashore, addressing the young sailor we have before described, "which way lies your course now? You said you had never been in these waters afore, en' I rather guess you're lost, aint you?"

"Well, comrade," said the other, with a sad, peculiar smile, "it is true. I am in strange quarters; but I have funds enough to keep me for a while at some respectable hotel."

"O, yes, shipmate! that's all well enough. I heard you had a little funds when you left England, and the Cap'n 'll pay you well for your valuable services; but, dam me me! aint there anything else! You aint agoin' to desert the crew the first night in strange shore, are you?"

"O, we can both go together, Jack, for that matter," said the young man, who, though in dress and appearance was a model young sailor, yet spoke none of the tars. "I believe you told me you had a family."

"Devil a kid or frigate, messmate; Jack Watson's a free ship to sail through life with a privateer's flag at the mast-head. But I'll tell you now what to do. I know you're not goin' to sea again, and 'll be likely to flounder in New-York waters for a long spell. Before you go out of salt water, though, come with us to-night, and spend your first night ashore in a regular sailor's crib!"

"Well, it shall be so," said the youth, with a careless air. "The fact is, messmate, I've been rather a dull, melancholy companion in the forecastle, and I will try and be merry with you to-night, by way of redeeming my reputation as a sailor."

The twain had now been joined by quite a number of the crew, who manifested their gratification at the youth's decision by cries of "Good!" "Bravo!" &c., proving to an observer that he was a favorite in the entire company.

The shadows of the evening were beginning to gather over the city, as they reached Broadway, and turned into Chatham-street, where the crew began to separate, each turning to his respective quarter of residence. There were quite a number of strangers in the crew, however, who still followed in the wake of Jack Watson and his young protégé like sheep after a leader.

They had reached the corner of Chatham and Roosevelt streets, when Jack paused.

"I'm just reck'nin'," said he, "whether to hunt up Moll Davis' board'n crib, or go straight to Duncan's. I believe I'll go to Moll's first though, and put up, and then steer round to Bill's, and see about that pirate craft we towed along. Veer away there!"

Jack was about to start down Roosevelt street at a gait which would have soon brought him to his destination, when the withered hand of an old man was extended, asking for alms. His form was bent, his gait halt, and his features repulsively wrinkled and bleared.

"Please, good sailors, help the necessities of a poor old man!" he uttered in a trembling, pleading voice.

"Well, old top, I confess you look a little the worse for the weather; you must have sailed in rough seas. Well, there's a stivar for you—take it, and take your last happiness in a drink!" And Jack thrust a shilling into the old man's hand, as though he meant exactly what he said.

The young sailor now advanced and placed a sovereign in the decrepit hand. The amount caused the old man to lift his eyes to the donor's face. One hasty look and he dropped to the sidewalk upon the pavement, and staggered back against the house, trembling and quivering from head to foot, like one stricken with paralysis.

"What ails the land lubber?" asked Jack, in astonishment.

"Speak! young man!" grasped the decrepit beggar; "what—I mean—are you of this land?"

"No," said the youth, greatly astonished at his demeanor, "I am not."

"Of England?" continued the beggar.

"Yes!"

"Your name?"

"Paul."

"Paul!" echoed the old man, thoughtfully. "Yes—yes—that was it! What else? Pray, pardon me!"

"Marston!"

"Marston! What, did he?—did he?—did he? But no—no—it's all a mistake! I am stopping you young man; proceed upon your journey. Thanks for your sovereign!" And the mendicant stopped to pick up the coin.

It was a surprising sight to see the strong storm of feeling which swept over the old man's soul, and was as quickly calmed. Yet our could see that a terrible reaction—the recoil of doubt upon awakened hopes—had been the cause of the sudden check upon the vagrant's feelings.

"This all seems very remarkable," said the young sailor. "Old man, what does it mean? Have you heard my name before, or is it in any way connected with your own history, that you are so affected by it?"

"Marston—perhaps!" uttered the old man, evasively. "Where do you stay to-night?"

"At Moll Davis' boardin' house, p'raps. You know where that is?" interrupted Jack.

"Perhaps," to Jack. Then turning to Paul, he continued, "Perhaps I may see you there, to-night, young man, if not, we will probably meet soon again. Good night!" And the old beggar passed the party, and proceeded toward Chatham-st.

"Well, that's what I calls harpoonin' a whale in fresh water!" exclaimed Jack, as they proceeded down the street. "I tell you what, comrades, it runs in my fig'rehead we're agoin' to have rum times and a few edventures this be-tay spell!"

"Well, that is a most singular one to begin with," said Paul Marston, thoughtfully. "It puzzles me!"

"O, don't mind it, messmate; life's only a sea voyage at best; and you may have all sorts of weather afore you run. There's old Moll's handkerchief still hanging out at the same place! Steer away, boys, and moor fast!"

Meanwhile, the old beggar still stood upon the corner of the street, gazing after the retreating crew.

"It is—it is her son!" he muttered with evident agitation. "But could he have done it! Could he have meded her—no—no! He was too proud—too base a villain!"

It was painful to see the growing agitation of the old man. He turned into the side street again, and reclined against the house, while hot scalding tears ran down his cheeks.

"And I wonder if she is dead!" he continued, as memories of the past swept like winds over the sea of his soul. "I wonder what became of the other little one! Poor Mabel! I treated you harshly—but I have suffered greatly! But what am I to do now! Let me think—let me think!"

And thus muttering to himself, the old man went tottering down the street, and was soon lost in the darkness.

CHAPTER III.

TAYLOR'S SALOON—THE ASSIGNATION.

We turn away from the gloom and the gloomy thoughts suggested by Roosevelt-street. We leave the honest tar, Jack Watson, to seek out his old haunts, and initiate Paul Marston, the lordly-born, into the mysteries of a sailor's boarding-house. We say "Good bye" to the old beggar, in his grief, leaving him to seek out his wretched home, wherever it may be, and enter upon the more respectable and aristocratic thoroughfare—Broadway. In this night of gloom and darkness let us have as much light and security as possible.

There is a tide of eternal souls, borne on by human impetus, along Broadway. It is a great stream of being, flowing up and down, bearing its burden of thought and emotion. Dense and dark, it moves along swaying to and fro, now small as a rivulet, then swelling like a flood. But the thickest and densest portion, as though sheltering themselves from the gloom, are hovering near, and standing in front of that grand palatial rendezvous—TAYLOR'S SALOON.

Let us enter this magnificent place and take a survey—not of the establishment and its adornings—everybody have seen this—but of the company forming its host of patrons.

One glance serves to afford us a miniature portrait of the better classes of New-York. Here are old and young, merchant, minister, judge, lawyer, prosperous mechanics of all trades—their wives, sisters, daughters, and—we will not write what else. It is a fine array of respectability and beauty, engaged in the enjoyment of the ragouts, and most delicate viands. Let them revel!

But, on the evening upon which our story commences, three young men were sitting at one of the marble tables near the centre of the saloon, indulging in that night de-lectable season of the year, the final luxury of a dish of ice cream, and the convivial element of a half bottle, stamped "Florence." Each of them were dressed in the height of fashion, though their facial appearance plainly indicated a difference in calling.

Mr. Augustus Lattimer, who sat nearest the right hand aisle, was a gentleman of handsome exterior, fair and florid, with a most exquisitely-trimmed moustache, black, glistening eyes, and a smooth, curling head of hair. To look in his face, glance at his white, unglove'd hand, and mark his "free and easy" manners, was sufficient to tell you that Mr. Augustus Lattimer was a young gentleman of fortune and leisure.

Frank Wharton, who sat by his side, had scarcely attained his majority, and still bore quite a boyish appearance. His upper lip, however, bore faint evidence of efforts to cultivate a moustache, and the flushed condition of his yet mobile face gave a more powerful testimony of his proximity in dissipation. Frank was the nominal partner in his father's extensive mercantile establishment, and as such, was admitted into senior society. He had better been kept among the boys—it would have afforded him less chance for dissipation.

The third gentleman of the set was of the mature age of thirty-five, wore side-whiskers that had not felt the brush for two days, and his head of bushy, coarse hair was certainly a protracted allow to the comb. His features were strongly marked, with prominent nose and cheek-bones, and a cold gray eye, that looked out from his rough brows like crystals in a wall. When he smiled, it was like sunbeams on Lofodden, cold, cheerless, yet not repulsive. Mr. Attorney Livingston, of the ——— Court, was not an objectionable man in his appearance, or inapproachable in his address. He was simply cold, passive, and thoughtful. Famed for this in a profound attorney. They live amid the hard actual of fact, and could not be otherwise. "Twere as fit for flowers on ice-fields.

"And is that story really true, Gus?" asked the attorney, looking at the fashionable gentleman, with his cold eyes and smile.

"Wait, and you will see. Look, she comes this way."

At that moment, a beautiful woman, of more than medium height, and voluptuous form, and arrayed in the very extreme of fashion, rose from one of the tables in the hall, and, in company with an elderly gentleman, came down. Her glance rest that of the handsome roué, and a smile overspread her face; but, as she passed the table, a small piece of paper dropped upon it, in front of Lattimer's hand. He covered it quickly, until the couple had passed from the establishment, and then bursting into a laugh, cried uxuilingly:

"There! what think you of that. I told you I would get it."

"It was most adroitly managed," said the lawyer, "but tell us what is in it."

Lattimer opened the small bit of note paper dropped by the beautiful woman, and read as follows:

"DEAR GUS: I must see you to-night. Be at the Rookery in an hour. AMELIA."

"My dear legal friend," continued Lattimer, in a triumphant tone, "I guess you will pay for this wine."

"With all my heart," said the lawyer. "I give in; I would not have believed it of her. But Gus, my boy, let me give you a little advice and warning. In the first place, although your legal counselor, yet I have nothing to do with your private adventures, and don't want to meddle with them. But be careful how you act in this case. Winterton is a man of stern nature, high integrity, and great wealth, and would resent an injury if discovered."

"What do you call high integrity?" said Lattimer, with a cold sneer. "He is, by profession, a Wall-street swindler—a bear of the broker shop. His wife died a year ago, and left him childless. He goes on an exploring expedition into the States, finds a lovely girl, proud of her beauty, and ambitious above her poverty; he intoxicates her mind with the splendor of wealth, and marries her—not for love, but that he may sate his sickliest pas-

AMUSEMENTS.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.
On THIS EVENING, (Saturday,) June 20,
Miss ELIZA LOGAN will repeat the performance of EVADNE,
a part in which she has elicited the most enthusiastic approbation on the last two evenings, from brilliant and crowded houses, and the following flattering eulogiums from the leading press:

From the New-York Herald.

It is rarely so distinguished an assemblage comes together in this city as convened last night in this theatre. The house was filled with authors, actors, critics, literary savans, well known merchants, and last, but not least, by filibusters distinguished and otherwise. Miss Logan's style of acting is impulsive, electric and at times singularly impressive, from the power she throws into a few brief words. It is this peculiarity that has doubtless given her much of her popularity in the West, where, to be successful, artists must lay their colors on with a lavish brush. Miss Logan is an exquisite elocutionist, and in this particular will rival any actress on the American stage.

From the New-York Tribune.

Miss Logan did what we have never seen done before—she redeemed the play from its customary monotonous dullness, and put an earnest life into the character which made it positively interesting. Miss Logan is thus surpassed as an elocutionist—her voice is unusually sweet, as well as powerful naturally, and it has been cultivated to an extraordinary degree of perfection. She is most graceful and pleasing in all her movements, and she seemed to thoroughly appreciate the few good points there are in the character of Evadne. She called down enthusiastic applause, was greeted with the stereotyped floral honors, and was called twice before the curtain. We welcome this lady heartily to the New-York stage.

After the play a favorite afterpiece will be performed.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.
AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000.
Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.
Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.
Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.
For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.
Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.
It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.
It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association.
GEORGE L SENEY, Cashier.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONwealth of Massachusetts.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 30th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 29th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

INTERESTING FROM HAVANA.

ARRIVAL OF THE BLACK WARRIOR.

The United States steamer Black Warrior, J. W. SMITH Commander, sailed from New-Orleans 12th inst., and Havana at noon the 15th, arrived at this port early yesterday evening.

SANTA ANA had not arrived at Havana.

The Spanish fleet intended for the Mexican difficulty was said to be near the Island, and soldiers are arriving by every vessel from Spain.

The Island is quiet and healthy. No fever as yet reported.

Sugar market same as last advices; holders are firm in their determination to keep it up. Stock at Havana and Matanzas as previously reported.

Freights very dull, though many vessels have left in ballast; the tonnage exceeds the wants of shippers.

The Spanish Fleet Not Yet Arrived—Santa Ana's Proclamation to the Mexicans—Recall of Captain-General Concha, and Appointment of his Successor, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Sunday, June 14, 1857.

As yet there are no signs of the squadron, though it is now due here. The flag-ship will be towed here by the war-steamer Francisco de Asis, and two other steamers have been sent from here to meet the other vessels and tow them to Havana. Buoys have been placed in the harbor for the expected vessels, which will serve to block up the harbor more effectually than ever, so that the whole merchant marine is to be put to a great inconvenience, simply because the Spanish Admiral likes to display his force to the strangers that throng our port. This little national pride may be readily pardoned in men who are about to repeat the heroical achievements of CORTEZ and his followers.

The last English steamer from St. Thomas brought out General SANTA ANA's proclamation to the Mexican people. It is a lengthy affair, but interesting in the present state of European intrigues. Large numbers have been sent to Vera Cruz for distribution. The Spanish officials have been very active in the business, and no obstacle has been placed in the way of landing the barrels containing the papers in this city. It is currently reported that he will arrive here in the latter part of this month. The destruction of his partisans, who have prematurely raised the standard of revolution in Mexico and other cities may retard his coming.

General CONCHA has been recalled, and LERSUNDI appointed in his place. CONCHA will leave here in the French mail packet on the 12th of August, if his successor does not come before that time. A large party is being made up by his intimate friends to accompany him to Paris. The cause of this sudden change of fortune against him is that the English Ambassador at Madrid has demanded his recall for openly conniving at the Slave trade, and accompanied the accusation with such powerful evidence that NARVAEZ has had no other choice than to consent to the necessity. This fact has affected CONCHA deeply, as he has always been ambitious to merit the good reputation ascribed to him by the English Press.

He has no one to blame but himself, for $50,000 per annum ought to place a man beyond the influence of gold. That he has participated in the bribes lavishly expended by the slave dealers no one here pretends to deny, and he has been so negligent in this respect that even his friends have been obliged to confess that the slave-trade has been more active since the year 1856 than was ever known before. At least twenty expeditions have been fitted out at this port to my own knowledge, and there is no way of finding out the exact number of the cargoes successfully landed.

The English Government also complained of the abuse committed by the under-officers of this Island in granting "cedulas" to men whose sole occupation was the Slave trade, and who were supplied with the facilities for carrying it on, apparently with the sanction of the laws. When he was recalled before, he had a bosom friend who wrote the book published under his name in defence of the several acts of his administration, but that bosom friend was garoted for his attachment. We will see who he procures to save his reputation now.

The French steamers now employed in carrying the mails between the island and Spain, are about to change their flag, provided the Cortes approves their contract, which has been given for ten years. The Alma had a full list of passengers and cargo on her return trip.

The yellow fever has diminished a little in virulence since my last, and but few new cases are reported. The weather has improved considerably since the frequent showers.

INTERESTING FROM ALBANY.

The Court of Appeals—Metropolitan Police Bill—Prospect of an Early Decision—The Broadway Railroad Case—The State Bankrupt—Defalcation of County Treasurers—The Averill Ore Bed.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ALBANY, Thursday, June 18, 1857.

The arguments, pro and con, on the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police bill, before the big wigs of the Court of Appeals, were closed this morning by Judge EMMONDS, on the part of FERNANDO. Those who have listened to the entire argument, while representing it as extremely able on both sides, give especial commendation to Mr. EVARTS for the ability and clearness with which he presented his side of the question.

It is said that the necessities of the case will impel a somewhat more rapid revolution of the judicial wheels than is general, that the "Circumlocution Office" will be closed for a time, and that we may anticipate from their Honors "a decision as is a decision" some time in all of the coming week. It is of course going into deep-sea soundings to attempt a conjecture as to what that decision will be. I think, previous to the opening of the Court the sympathies of the Judges were against the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police Act. In nine cases out of ten that you may present to the Court of last resort, if the question has a political bearing, or is even argued by counsel of strong partisan antecedents, the sympathies of the Judges will have quite as much influence in determining their judgments as law or equity. My observation daily tends to strengthen this estimate of the character of the Judiciary, and I think it would be fully sustained by a careful analysis of the parties and causes that have passed through the Appeals since its organization.

Stripped of all its surroundings, and presented to the Judges in a quiet, regular way, I think they would have pronounced the Metropolitan Police bill unconstitutional. There seems to be ambiguity and etasticity enough in the fundamental law to justify a wide difference of opinion—a multiplicity of views, doubts and contradictions—and such a decision might have been made without incurring any general charge of a special elongation of the judicial conscience.

But the rashness of the Mayor—his unwarrantable assumptions of power—his iniquitous attempts to control or to override the constituted tribunals—the infamous character of those by whom he is surrounded—his bold and determined violation of the public peace, and his wicked and wanton disregard of the public good—have, unfortunately for him, come up to the Court, side by side with his appeal against the Constitutionality of the new Police bill. These confront the Court, in any aspect in which his case could be presented, and must with their crimson hues obliterate the coloring of right and justice, in which his counsel presented his position—though it were painted in hues a myriad times more brilliant. The Court must regard and uphold the Legislative authority, when it comes in conflict with individual opinion—it must, in such a crisis, give the benefit of every doubt to that side which best promises by precept and example to promote the public good, and to maintain the public peace. If it does not, its own existence must be imperilled—for it were idle to suppose that law may be successfully opposed by one individual, and still hold in awe and subjection the masses—it were more than folly to believe that the multitude would not rather follow in the path marked out by Mayor WOOD, than to await the tedious and uncertain process of an appeal to the Courts.

In connection with this prospective decision of the Court of Appeals, I want to correct a blunder made by the Herald, which has caused much misapprehension. With its characteristic enterprise, five months after the Court had rendered a decision in the Broadway Railroad case, and the decision had been published at length in the TIMES, the Herald obtains a copy of a dissenting opinion given by a single Judge (WRIGHT,) and paradee it at length as an evidence that the Court had in that case decided substantially the same points raised by Mayor WOOD, and all in his favor. Now exactly the reverse is the truth. Six of the Judges decided, in the case of the Broadway Railroad, substantially against the Mayor, Judge WRIGHT dissenting.

Did you know that the Empire State was bankrupt? I suppose not, and yet such is substantially the case. The last Legislature made appropriations amounting in the aggregate to over $3,100,000, and yet all told, there are in the State Treasury, past and prospective, applicable to the payment of these appropriations less than $1,800,000. The Comptroller says "cent of funds," and the claimants on the State Treasury have to stand aside—for the State cannot be sued nor protested—but if it were an individual, she—(I believe States are feminine)—would have been in bankruptcy three months ago, and probably in the hands of the Sheriff within thirty days. The want of funds wherewith to retrieve the necessities of those having claims, cause no little annoyance to the Comptroller. He finds it no easy thing to turn off the Charities that were voted aid by the Legislature, and still less easy to make them realize that he is absolutely reduced to that extremity. One of your City institutions (the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb) has been able to realise only $5,000 out of more than $50,000 appropriated. Some of the others have been still less fortunate.

To add to the difficulties and embarrassments which surround the Comptroller, the County Treasurers do not feel inclined to pay in what should go to make up the $1,800,000 estimated as assets by the Comptroller. Our own County of New-York is $500,000 behind, and many of the other counties are proportionately so.

The time having expired within which the law makes it obligatory upon the County Treasurers to pay up, the Comptroller has determined to resort to etones, which he has directed the Attorney-General to fire away at the delinquents with all his "might and main." He has already brought suit against the Treasurer of the County of Oneida, and will continue the process until he has gathered in all that is available. So to save trouble, and especially to relieve the necessities of the myriads who are anxious applicants at the office of the State Treasurer, I would advise that the several County Treasurers who are still in arrears shall make speedy payment.

Two years ago the Legislature, impelled by a powerful lobby, passed an act authorizing the Commissioners of the Land Office—if in their judgment it was necessary—to purchase for the use of the Clinton Prison, a piece of property known as the Arevill Ore Bed. The ostensible reason for the purchase, was the alleged fact that the Ore Bed was necessary to the profitable employment of the convicts.

The then Commissioners of the Land Office, after an examination, declined to purchase the property, and it was supposed that the speculation was at an end. But shortly after the present Commissioners entered office, on the application of a member of the Senate, who had "fugled" the bill through the Legislature, the question was revived, and after due negotiation, a bargain was made whereby the State agreed to pay $100,000 for the ore bed, and it passed into the possession of the officers of the prison. Last Winter, application was made for an appropriation to pay the fine stipulated. The application was pressed with considerable pertinacity, but without meeting with any success. The reason assigned for declining to pay, was that there was no ore on the Averill property, that the State, in the brief time it held possession, had worked across the line, and was then actually following up the lead on another man's land. Under these circumstances, it seemed the proprietors of the Averill were not in the way of speedily "realising," but they appear determined not to give up trying. On Wednesday they made a motion before Judge GOULD, for a mandamus, directing the Comptroller to issue his warrant in their favor for $100,000, and it is said that they are likely to succeed. Nothing like perseverance and soap.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The National Guard's Excursion to Boston.

The National Guards, (Seventh Regiment N. Y. S. M.) Col. DURYEA, returned yesterday morning from their excursion to Boston to take part in the Bunker Hill Celebration, and the inauguration of the Warren Statue.

After being dismissed from duty in the Park on Tuesday afternoon, they embarked on the steamer Plymouth Rock, chartered specially for the occasion, en route for Boston, by the way of Stonington. The boat, in consequence of the delay at the City Hall, did not reach Stonington until 2 o'clock, but the little town was alive with the firing of cannon, illuminations, and blazing of tar barrels, to welcome the arrival of the Corps, whose name and fame had gone before them. Rockets and other fireworks were set off on board in return, as the steamer approached the wharf. Twelve cars soon received the Company on board, and at 3 o'clock A. M., the train moved off amidst great cheering.

At Providence the Marine Corps of Artillery was on the ground to greet the Regiment, and fired a rapid salute while the change of locomotives was made. At 7 o'clock the Guard arrived in Boston, and were received and escorted to their quarters, at the Revere House, by the National Lancers, Capt. DEARBORN. Most of the privates were assigned quarters in a new building at the rear of the hotel, but all hands were fed at the Revere.

The Guard joined in the procession on the 17th, and of course attracted very general attention. The marches and countermarches they were subjected to by the contradictory dispatches from New-York, would have been extremely trying to persons of much nervous susceptibility. As it was, they took it rather stoically, and agreed to console themselves by the thought of the review and parade next day on the Common.

On Thursday, the 18th inst., the weather was unpropitious, and it was not till 1 o'clock that the Guard formed in front of their hotel and set out for the Common, under the escort of the First Regiment Volunteer Militia, Captain BURBANK, and the Lancers, Captain DEARBORN. A large assemblage soon gathered about the parade ground in the Common, numbering not less than eight or ten thousand.

On the ground, Governor GARDNER and Staff, and the Mayor of Boston, made their appearance and were saluted by a fire of artillery. The Guard then marched in review before the Governor and Mayor in turn, eliciting lively applause. Just as the review was finished, the rain came pouring down, and the parade proper was necessarily dispensed with. At 6½ o'clock the same evening, the Guard took the cars for Stonington, and thence the steamer C. Vanderbilt for New-York. On their arrival here yesterday morning, the Garde Lafayette, and State Guard, both of the Fifty-fifth Regiment, were in waiting, and escorted them up Broadway to their armory, where they were dismissed.

The excursion has been eminently satisfactory to the corps, and there is reason to think, entirely acceptable to the military and citizens of Boston. Never before has the regiment left the City with so many muskets, and on no former occasion of a similar character has it gained more credit. The total force, including officers, non-commissioned officers, hand and drummers, numbered 542.

Mariners' Family Asylum for Aged Women on Staten Island.

A large and highly respectable company of ladies, gentlemen and children took the steamer Josephine at the foot of Whitehall-street on Tuesday afternoon, for the purpose of attending the Fourth Anniversary of the opening of the Asylum for the destitute wives of mariners, their mothers and sisters, over sixty years of age. The trip down the bay was delightful, the day being cool and the weather apparently halting between rain and shine. The steamer brought up about 3 o'clock, P. M., at Vanderbilt's, near the Sailor's Retreat and the Asylum. Here the merry company took to the land and proceeded through the United States grounds, passed the Retreat to the Asylum near by, on the same property, six acres of which is inclosed for the use of the asylum. The Asylum is a square, box-like building of brick, exceedingly plain, capable of accommodating at least seventy-five persons, and is designed to be enlarged by wings, when the means of the society shall warrant it. The founding of this admirable charity is due to the devoted labors of Mrs. C. W. HAWKINS and Mrs. S. C. LOVELAND, who is now in San Francisco, endeavoring to establish a similar institution there, aided by a generous band of earnest men and women. It required over seven years of unwearied labor before the means were secured to enable them to lay the corner stone, which was done the 19th of June, 1853, the institution being opened on the following year. There were a large number of aged and destitute women, wives, mothers and sisters of sailors, requiring entire support among the sea-faring population of the City, with whom the ladies of the Mariners' Industrial Society, became acquainted. Effectually to relieve this class of persons, the Asylum was projected and carried into its present successful operation. There are now thirty-five respectable women occupying pleasant rooms and enjoying the comforts of a home in the Asylum. The scenery on every side, as seen from the windows of the Asylum, is unexcelled for varied and picturesque beauty.

Rev. Mr. JONES, Capt. BRIGGS, Capt. HART, Rev. Dr. LORD, Mr. PERRY, Mr. HAWKINS, and other active friends of the sailors were present, and joined the lady managers in organizing and conducting the anniversary exercises, which were held in the chapel. After singing and prayer, Capt. BRIGGS made a brief statement in behalf of the lady managers, setting forth the present condition and prospects of the Institution. The receipts for the support of the Asylum amount to about $2,500 annually, or 10 per cent. on the entire sum raised for the seamen' fund.

At the close of the exercises, refreshments were served to the company under the direction of the matron, after which most present called on the ladies at their rooms—a proceeding giving infinite delight apparently to them all. It was surprising to see how lively a curiosity many showed to know what was going on about the City Hall. If the newspapers would only print the story in large type, they would enjoy reading them very much. Visitors can scarcely take them more highly appreciated favors than newspapers and books that have a consideration for aged eyes.

MEETING OF THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS, June 19.—The Board met at 10 A. M., in the usual place. Present, Commissioners HOLMES and HASKETT.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

JOHN B. LAFORGE, Esq., presented the application of ROBERT EARL, No. 44 Avenue C, for an innkeeper's license.

THEODORE BURGOYNE, No. 65 Liberty-street, applied for a storekeeper's license, and the Board adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning, when licenses will be granted to those applicants who have complied with the requirements of the law.

One of the Commissioners informed us yesterday that the New-York Temperance Alliance were preparing to prosecute a large number of the storekeepers who are selling liquor without licenses. It is the intention of the Temperance Alliance to prosecute the larger dealers in liquors first, and not to take legal proceedings against the members of the Liquor Dealers' Association—who are generally retailers—so immediately. The Commissioner above referred to gave us the following list of large dealers whose names are in the hands of the Temperance Alliance, and, if report be true, will soon be in the mouths of the criers of some of the New-York Courts: Burnett & Coddner, R. E. Messenger & Co., E. C. Charles, Udolpho Wolfe, Neilson & Anthony, Dusenberry, John Duncan & Son, M. Gaulon, in Canal street; Morrill & Co., J. & W. Geary, H. D. Felter, C. Driggs, Van Benschoten, C. Bellows & Co., T. McMullen, Samuel Smith, Sterling & Shailer, A. B. Mills, Whitlock & Co.

RUN OVER—ARREST.—WILLIAM MORAN, a native of China, was knocked down and run over near the Park yesterday afternoon by a horse and wagon, driven by a man named JOHN ACKER. MORAN was badly injured. ACKER was immediately arrested and brought before Justice CONNOLLY, who held him for examination.

☞ HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT have been counterfeited! There is a sure test, however, whereby to tell the genuine, viz.; the water-mark—"Holloway, New-York and London," that exists in every leaf of the book of directions. The words are semi-transparent in the paper, and visible by looking through the leaf to the light. Sold at the manufactory, 80 Maiden-lane, New-York, and by all druggists, at 25c., 63c., and $1 per box or pot.

LONG ISLAND.

LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.—A collision occurred on Friday morning on the Long Island Railroad, at Bedford Station, between a freight train passing into a siding, and the early passenger train from Jamaica. The freight train attempted to back into a siding but was not able to do so, by reason of the length of the train, and then attempted to reach another siding some 300 feet distant, but got only a part way upon that siding when the passenger engine approached upon another track, which though signalled could not be stopped in time, and the corners of the two engines just touching, a portion of the gearing upon one of the engines was broken and one of the tenders considerably damaged. Two freight cars also were damaged slightly.

No injury was done and the cost of repairs to the engines will not be heavy.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—At the usual hour for the meeting of this Board, yesterday morning, Alderman WALEN was the only member present, and as he could not transact business alone, he of course adjourned.

It is said that no business will be transacted until the charges preferred by Alderman KALBFLEISCH, against the Board, have been disposed of.

CONFIRMATION.—Two hundred boys were confirmed in St. James' Cathedral, Brooklyn, on Tuesday last, by Bishop MCLAUGHLIN.

The same Bishop, on the same day, confirmed four hundred more in the Church of the Assumption.

NEW-JERSEY.

ERIE RAILROAD OBSTRUCTION.—Up to last night there had been no arrival for two days of a through western train at Jersey City, on the New-York and Erie Railroad, in consequence of the freshet at Corning, by which the track of that road is submerged. The trains start regularly for the West.

☞ WM. C. MORRIS, of Jersey City, has been appointed a Judge of the Hudson County Court of Common Pleas, in place of SAMUEL BROWNING, deceased.

☞ WM. B. DUNNING has been chosen President of the Fire Department Fund Association, by the Board of Trustees, in the place of C. C. MARSHALL, who resigned, having been elected a Fire Commissioner.

☞ The will of the late JOHN C. STEVENS was filed with the Surrogate of Hudson County yesterday, and will be proved on Monday.

FRIDAY, June 19—P. M.

There was a decline to-day of ⅛@¼ ₱ cent. in Sterling Bills. A leading drawer put down his rate to 109⅝. Francs are dull, but no change in rates; 5.18¾@5.17½ is the quotation. The shipments of Gold and Silver by both steamers tomorrow now count up $1,475,000, a little short of the estimate of yesterday, though there may be some small engagements of which we are not at present advised. Among the Stock and Domestic Exchange Brokers there is a fair inquiry for Money. Demand loans come pretty easy, however, at 7 ₱ cent. With the Discount Brokers strictly prime paper is in demand at 8@9 ₱ cent. The transactions at the Sub-Treasury are again light; Receipts, $40,298; Payments, $62,032; Balance, $11,618,758.

Stocks are down at the close of business, and showed considerable weakness throughout the dealings of the day. The Bears used the light receipts officially reported on the Erie road for May, and the continued export movement of Gold, against the market; while the few prominent Bulls at the Board evinced less spirit than yesterday. The Herald rumor of only 3 ₱ cent. dividend in July on the Reading Stock, was not generally credited, but a large amount of Stock was put out on contract and for cash, and the price fell off to 71⅜@½. Erie sold at Second Board 30¾@⅞, and left off about 30⅝. The Western Road list was weaker by ½@1 ₱ cent.; except Illinois Central, which, for cash, was wanted at 133½ ₱ cent. The general market left off dull.

The Pennsylvania and Reading half-yearly dividend to be declared in July, we hear from several well-advised sources, will be 4 ₱ cent. The Mechanics and Farmers' Bank of Albany (OLCOTT'S) has declared a half-yearly dividend of 5 ₱ cent.

The annual election of the Directors of the Cleveland and Toledo Road was held yesterday. The old Board was reëlected with the exception of Mr. ELISHA C. LITCHFIELD, who declined, and whose place was filled by Mr. CALVIN BURR of this City.

The Philadelphia Ledger of this morning says of the money market of that City:

The money market is rather quiet, though there is a considerable amount of inferior paper all the time offering. Best bills can be placed at 10@11 ₱ cent. discount, though there is comparatively little of this description offering. The great bulk of the paper on the market goes begging at from 1¼@2 ₱ cent. a month.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Peoria and Oquawka Railroad Company, held in the city of Peoria, on the 10th day of June, 1857, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected Directors for the ensuing year: Nathaniel B. Curtiss, William S. Moss, William Kellogg, Norman H. Purple, Peoria; A. C. Harding, Monmouth; James F. Secor, Samuel Gilman, Thos. C. Fields, City of New-York; Wm. H. Cruger, Peoria. Upon the organization of the new Board, NATHANIEL B. CURTISS was unanimously reëlected President. The Company will have completed their Eastern division to the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central by the 1st of September. The Illinois Central Company have secured, by perpetual contract, the use of this division between their own main line and the Chicago Branch. The arrangement is a most important one to their own traffic, and will be remunerative to the Peoria Company—the guarantee of compensation being fully $50,000, but to exceed $75,000 per annum. Upon this guarantee the Peoria Company issue $750,000 in 8 ₱ cents., putting the contract, in trust, to Mr. OSBORN and Mr. PERKINS, of the Illinois Central, to secure,

1. To the interest on those Bonds which bear the numbers one to five hundred, inclusive.

2. To a Sinking Fund of 2 ₱ cent. per annum, for the benefit of the said last described five hundred Bonds.

3. The remainder to the accruing interest, and a similar Sinking Fund upon and for the remaining parcel of two hundred and fifty Bonds, numbered from 501 to 750, inclusive.

VOL. VI.....NO. 1796 NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 22 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

GENERAL WILLIAM WALKER.

Personalities of his Men.

On Saturday, Gen. WALKER was called upon by Gen. WALBRIDGE, HYRAM M. FULLER, Am. M. C. from Philadelphia, ex-Gov. PRIOR, of N. J., J. S. MARMADUKE, U. S. N., Judge ENOS, M. A. SHERMAN and others.

As frequent calls are made by persons seeking information of their missing friends, the General directs all such inquirers to address themselves to the Adjutant-General, Major JOHN V. HOOFF, at New-Orleans, who has the registry of all the men in his possession. Pressing invitations are made upon the General to attend soirées, theatres, and all kinds of public and private entertainments. Autograph hunters and daguerreotypists have him at every turn. This evening he is announced to attend Laura Keene's Varieties, and to-morrow evening at Bryant's Minstrels, some of the brothers having enjoyed a personal intimacy with him in California.

Prominent among the friends who accompany Gen. WALKER on this present trip is:

Major General HENNINGSEN, was a prominent officer under Gen. WALKER, during a considerable period in Nicaragua. Gen. HENNINGSEN was born in England, in 1818, of Swedish parents; and although still a comparitively young man, he has occupied many important positions. When seventeen years of age he volunteered to serve under ZUMALACARREGUI in the Basque Provinces. The Spanish war was then at its height, and HENNINGSEN rose to be Captain of ZUMALACARREGUI's body-guard, Knight of St. Ferdinand, &c. The "Elliot Convention" sent HENNINGSEN to England. There his history of the war in Spain served as an introduction to WELLINGTON SOUIT and others.

Returning to Spain, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, before he was twenty, he was indebted to accident for his first important command. General DE LACY EVANS met the Spanish forces near San Sebastian, and offered battle. The Spanish General pretended to be sick; his chief of the staff, a man without military knowledge, was glad to avail himself of Colonel HENNINGSEN's instructions in the management of his force. The Foreign Legion was beaten back on San Sebastian, and their leader wounded. He was subsequently of the expedition which marched on Madrid from Aragon and Castile. After the battle of Villar-de-los-Navarros, he took the command of the cavalry, and obtained, as a reward for his gallantry, the rank of full Colonel, and the title of Knight of Isabella. When within three miles of Madrid, he was attacked by the Queen's cavalry in great force. Seventeen times that day HENNINGSEN led his men to the charge; only on the last occasion did he succeed in breaking their ranks. Once broken, they were routed. This was the last of his successful exploits in Spain. A few days afterward he was taken prisoner, and released on parole not to serve again during the war. His next service was in Circassia, where he spent a campaign in the Russian service, and from the knowledge thus obtained he compiled a report on the Caucasian countries, which was published as a public document by the Russian Government.

He next appeared in Hungary, and exchanged the pen for the sword when the crisis in that unhappy country was approaching. There were but 30,000 men, with 1,300 pieces of cannon, in Comorn; the question was, how to use these men. HENNINGSEN proposed a plan of campaign. Gen. GUYON so highly approved it that he obtained the chief command in Comoro, and was invested with all the despotic powers which the Diet had conferred on two former representatives—the Minister-of-War and Count BATTHYANI. When this struggle was over Gen. HENNINGSEN turned his attention to the subject of improvements in firearms. He made various experiments with the Prussian needle gun and HALE'S Rockets in England, and superintended the construction of the first Minié ever made in the United States. He likewise devoted a part of his leisure to literature, wrote for the magazines, and published one or two works—the "White Slave" among others—which have been successful. When the war in Nicaragua became important, Gen. HENNINGSEN was called upon to join Gen. WALKER, which he did. His career there, like that of his chief, is still fresh in the public mind. After the evacuation and burning of Granada, he was made Major-General, and continued in command until the end. He is now in the City with Gen. WALKER. Of the others:

Gen. ROBERDO CHATHAM WHEAT is probably the most prominent. He was born in 1826, in Alexandria, Va., and was educated in Nashville, Tennessee. When war was declared with Mexico, he enlisted in the United States Army, as a Captain of dragoons, and served throughout the campaign. When his regiment was disbanded, Gen. WHEAT, then a captain, volunteered again with his command, and went on with Gen. SCOTT to the City of Mexico. At the close of the war, he was mentioned by Gen. SCOTT in his report to Congress, in terms of high favor. He was subsequently admitted to the bar at New Orleans but immediately afterwards joined the Cuban expedition under LOPEZ, with the Louisiana regiment. When that failed, he returned. In 1852, he was wounded at Cardenas, while with CARAVAJAL, in the revolution in Northern Mexico; and was also wounded at Matamoras, at Caralvo and at Camargo. In 1854, he was again invited to Mexico, by President COMONFORT, to command his artillery. Accepting the invitation, he was made Brigadier-General in the Mexican Army. During the time he remained, he was Military Governor of Vera Cruz, and had command of the army and fleet. He was in command when the castle of San Juan del Ulloa was taken from the insurgents. In August, 1856, he resigned the Mexican service to join Gen. WALKER, in Nicaragua. Leaving this City in December of that year he arrived in the harbor of San Juan del Norte a few days after the river San Juan had been taken by the Costa Ricans. Finding that he could not reach Gen. WALKER, and that there was a party under Col. LOCKRIDGE, on Punta Arenas, preparing to force the river, he immediately offered himself as a volunteer to do anything for the advancement of the cause. A soldier of his experience was a great acquisition to the little force; and he was immediately offered the command of the Artillery, which he accepted. He superintended the mounting of the guns, and after the little army had been reinforced by the party under Col. TITUS and Capt. FARNUM, commanded the Artillery at the taking of Cody's Point and Serapiqui. In both fights his experience and courage commanded the admiration of all. When the delays of Col. LOCKRIDGE, and the peculiar retreat of Col. TITUS from before Castillo, had dispirited the men, they were not backward in expressing the opinion that, with Gen. WHEAT as Commander-in-Chief, and Col. ANDERSON to lead them on, the plan of operations would have been different, and the fall of San Carlos sure. This opinion was not, by any means, confined to the ranks. When success became impossible on the river, Gen. WHEAT returned with the others to Greytown. He was on the N. J. Scott when the boiler exploded and was blown into the river. As soon as he rose to the surface, he, as is his custom, did not wait to ask himself whether he was seriously injured, but, grasping the first of his comrades that came within his reach, swam with him to the shore. It proved to be young COGHLIN, of Philadelphia, who was a Lieutenant, and as brave as any man in the army. But, poor fellow, he was dead. After aiding to the utmost of his power he went down with the others to Greytown, and, after making every effort to join Gen. WALKER on the other side, without succeeding, finally returned to this City, where he is at present. When in the U. S. Army, Gen. WHEAT was considered the finest-looking man in it, and also a man of undoubted courage. He is now a man of noble presence, and his subsequent experience has enlarged his military knowledge, and fixed the fact, that the original idea of his bravery was not exaggerated. In case another expedition to Nicaragua should not be organized for some time, we have been informed that he will remain in the City and commence the practice of law.

Col. ANDERSON, another of Gen. WALKER'S officers, has had an adventurous life. He was born in the City of Brooklyn, of Scotch parents, and is still a young man. When the "California fever" made its appearance here, he left for that region and remained there, with varied fortune, until the invitation to Gen. WALKER to join the Liberals in Nicaragua. He joined him immediately, and became one of the "Original Fifty six." To mention minutely all his acts, while under WALKER there, would require more space than we can spare. From the time he arrived in Nicaragua until his return a short time since he was ever active and foremost where there was danger. He has more wounds than any other man who served there. While suffering from a wound in his arm, in 1856, he received a furlough, and returned to the United States for a brief period. While here his admirers presented him with a sword at the St. Nicholas Hotel, with appropriate ceremonies. He went back to Nicaragua, the last time, in December, 1856, and on arriving in the Harbor of San Juan del Norte, found that the River San Juan had been taken by the Costa Ricans. Like Gen. WHEAT, he immediately joined the party under Col. LOCKRIDGE, and commanded again with honor, at Cody's Point, and at the taking of Serapiqui. He is as brave a man and as steadfast a friend of Gen. WALKER, as ever served under him.

Lieutenant-Colonel DOUBLEDAY is not in this City at present. His was in Nicaragua before General WALKER arrived there, and had greater knowledge of the country and the people, than any other man in Gen. WALKER's army. He joined Gen. WALKER soon after his arrival, and did him valuable service as interpreter and Commissary General. He was known to all the principal men of the country and a great favorite of the people. Being universally respected he was enabled to do much towards the advancement of his General, until the latter made the mistakes which resulted in the execution of CORAL and the estrangement of RIVAS. Col. DOUBLEDAY visited the United States in 1856, and returned with Gen. WHEAT and Col. ANDERSON, in January of 1857. Finding the river closed, he volunteered under LOCKRIDGE, and was immediately appointed to the command of a company. For gallant services at the taking of Cody's Point, he was raised first to the rank of Major and then to that of Lieutenant-Colonel. He returned with the remains of the river party, and is now in Ohio, awaiting the organization of another expedition to Nicaragua. There was no man in the army more highly esteemed than Lieutenant-Colonel DOUBLEDAY.

Col. GEORGE B. HALL, a son of EX Mayor HALL, of Brooklyn, was born in that city, and educated in Erasthmus Hall, Flatbush. He entered the United States Army soon after war was declared as existing with Mexico. He was mustered into the service with the regiment of New-York Volunteers, at Fort Hamilton, as First Lieutenant of Company I. The Colonel, W. B. BURNETT, honored him with the positions of Commissary of Ordnance, of Quartermaster, and of Adjutant. He was afterwards selected as Captain of Company C, and went with Gen. SCOTT to the City of Mexico. He came home at the close of the war, and was breveted Major by the special act of the Legislature "for gallant and distinguished services in the Mexican War." He was identified with the first organization under LOPEZ, and when it was feared that war would come out of the Black Warrior affair, he organized the "Worth Legion," and became its Colonel. That organization was continued until Gen. WALKER arrived in Nicaragua. Being a friend of his cause, he decided to help him. A meeting of the officers was called, and they decided to go. The result was the embarking of 480 men on board the Northern Light, and their subsequent arrest. Col. HALL was put under $3,000 bail on a charge of having violated the neutrality laws, but he was not tried, and when his bail had been cancelled he left for General WALKER. While with him, served as Commissary-General with the rank of Colonel. He remained in the service until attacked by the fever, when he was urged to go home. He was in the first battle of Massaya and at Grenada. He received a ninety days' furlough, and left for home on the 5th of November, 1856. He returned in the first steamer after his parole had expired, and found the San Juan River closed. He did not report to Col. LOCKRIDGE, but nevertheless acted as Commissary-General until he became satisfied of the incompetency of LOCKRIDGE, and left. He could not reach Gen. WALKER, and consequently he returned home. He is now in the City.

Capt. J. EGBERT FARNUM is a Pennsylvanian, born in 1825. He entered the American army in 1846, on the staff of Col. WYNKOOP, and served until 1850. At the close of the Mexican war he surveyed the river Mescala, or what is known as the Ramsey route to California. He was subsequently connected with the Lopez Cuban Expedition as Captain, and as aid to LOPEZ. He went to Nicaragua in June, 1856, and received a Captain's commission from Gen. WALKER. While in the country he was stationed principally at Granada. After the expedition to Sapoa, he was taken with the fever, and received a furlough. On his way home he suffered from the yellow fever at Greytown so much that he was not able to return until the January following. He arrived at Serapiqui with a company just in time to take active part in the capture of that fort. After raising the J. N. Scott with his command, he became dissatisfied, in consequence of his failure to reach Gen. WALKER. He proceeded to Aspinwall, when finding he could not reach him from that point, he returned home.

Col. LOCKRIDGE, who commanded upon the San Juan River. He stands six feet three inches in stockings, is slightly round shouldered; he wears a black beard and moustache, and has nothing fierce or warlike in his features. He is a native of Louisville, Ky.; and is only 26 years of age. He spent some six years in Costa Rica previous to the advent of General WALKER, and still considers himself a citizen of that country. The cause, in his opinion, was never more hopeful, and there was never so abundant means at their disposal for carrying on the war; although the discipline of the camp prevails about the head-quarters respecting the particular movements intended. Col. L. is quite averse to being publicly mentioned in connection with the war, but this diffidence evidently is not put on from any want of confidence in his future success, as he was among the first to embark with WALKER, and says he means to devote himself still to the "freedom of Nicaragua." His manner is mild and affable, but he expresses himself with much force, and seems well informed upon the affairs of Nicaragua. He left on Friday afternoon for the South. As General HENNINGSEN shook hands and parted with him, he remarked: "I shall not see you again until we meet at Philippi." LOCKRIDGE said: "Yes, we will meet again at Philippi."

Capt. FAVSOUX, who commanded the little schooner Granada, and with his two six-pounders engaged the Costa Rican man-of-war brig Onze de Abril, blowing her up, and sinking her after a fight of only twenty minutes, is the Paul Jones of the fillibusters. He is a little man, physically, but seems to have achieved a greatness by this single act of daring gallantry, which many an aspirant for fame will not attain in a lifetime. Capt. FAVSOUX is very taciturn, and it is with much difficulty that he can be drawn into conversation. A person who was present at his encounter with the Costa Rican brig, gives the following incident illustrating his coolness and tact in that engagement. The brig had discharged several broadsides, and the two small pieces on board the Granada had been fired in such quick succession the guns had become hot. FAVSOUX ordered his men to cease firing to allow them to cool, and let the smoke clear away: but as his men were disposed to keep on firing, he threw himself astride one of the guns, and repeated his orders peremptorily. In a moment more the smoke cleared away and revealed the precise position of his enemy; waiting for another discharge from the brig, which only cut away some of his rigging and tore the sails, the gun on which he sat was shotted, and by a well-directed aim it struck the enemy's magazine; in an instant she was blown into fragments, and the contest was over. Captain F. lowered away his boats and made every exertion to save the lives of the Costa Ricans who had been thrown into the sea by the explosion. At the time that he ran his schooner out to sea, wing-and-wing, to engage this well armed brig, it is said that he had not provisions enough on board to make a breakfast for his crew. Capt. F. complains of the report made by telegraph to the New-York press, that while in Washington he had applied to the Secretary of the Navy to obtain his back pay as a member of the Texan Navy. He says he merely made an inquiry as to the construction of the late act of Congress indemnifying the officers of the Texas Navy, of which he was a midshipman, and ascertained that it only included the commissioned officers; having obtained this information he asked no other questions and left.

Col. WATES, who with Capt. FAVSOUX are the only officers properly constituting the staff of General WALKER, is a native of South Carolina, and was one of the 56 who joined WALKER in September, 1855. He has been in all the principal engagements in Nicaragua.

Don PEDRO SELVA is a young man belonging to an old family of the first respectability in Nicaragua. In 1854, when the Democratic party rose against the aristocratic party, of which President CHAMORRO was the leader, he joined the revolution and cast in his lot with the liberals, attaching himself to the army as a Lieutenant. Don FRANCISCO CASTELLON having been named Provisional President, SELVA was attached to his staff, and acted occasionally as his private Secretary. He was thus familiar with all the important movements of the war. He came to the United States accredited from General WALKER as Secretary of Legation, having also letters from JOHN H. WHEELER, then the U. S. Minister at Leon. SELVA, like most of his associates, expresses much reluctance to making any public mention of himself, one reason for which is his unwillingness to direct attention to, or in any wise compromise, his friends who are still living in Granada, but who, he affirms, took no part whatever in the war. He speaks of his mother with great affection, and affirms that for three years past he has not tasted ardent spirits of any kind, having given her his pledge that he would wholly abstain. SELVA speaks the French language with the same fluency that he does his own, and converses readily too in English. He is very much esteemed among his associates for his quiet, unobtrusive manner.

"Don AMILLE," as he is called by his Nicaraguan associates, is a tall, well formed, and polite young man, who has become an exile from Central America for the part he took in favor of the Democratic Party. He was born in Jamaica, and is a very light mulatto, graceful in his person, and precise and smooth in speech. He went to Granada, Nicaragua, when a lad, and accumulated a fine property. According to Mrs. General CAZNEAU, who was at his house in Granada, he owned a kind of palatial residence, which was burned when General HENNINGSEN destroyed the town. Don AMILLE is strongly in favor of the movement, and believes fully in General WALKER. He has no desire to become a resident of Nicaragua again, until the cause in which he has embarked is successful. He was with General HENNINGSEN through the memorable siege of Granada. There he distinguished himself for the grace with which he came down from the elegant diet of his Hacienda, to mule steaks and roast dog. Whilst executing an order for General HENNINGSEN, he received a shot through the top of his panama and his scalp. Neither proved fatal. He fully indorses as just and right, that in the conduct of WALKER, toward his soldiers, which has been so often set down as cruelty. He thinks if the General had been more severe, he would have succeeded better in the management of the natives.

During an interview of a leading shipping merchant with Gen. WALKER, on Thursday last, he imparted to the General the important information that $150,000 had been contributed and paid, of his own knowledge, by the California Mail Steamship, and the Panama Railroad Companies, for the purpose of breaking him up in Nicaragua, in order to get control of that route. Upon inquiry at the quarters named this statement is declared wholly untrue; that not a cent has ever been contributed for that purpose by these Companies, and that, on the contrary, they would much rather have paid something to keep Gen. WALKER fighting than to stop his operations, as the Panama steamers were actually doing a better business while the war went on in Nicaragua than they have done since.

GEORGE LAW speaks eloquently of Gen. WALKER. He defies any one to point to an instance in history where a man has accomplished so much with such small means. The exploits of CORTEZ were nothing to WALKER's, says he; CORTEZ met a primitive people who had no knowledge of firearms, and could only oppose the march of the Spaniards by the spear, the bow and arrow. WALKER with his 56 men had to fight against Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras, the British men-of-war, VANDERBILT, the Panama Railroad Company, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and everybody else. Finally, Mr. LAW thinks his friend marvelously resembles General TAYLOR.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 18.

You will have had a general account of the proceedings here this week, but may yet find a few notes by a New-Yorker, looking on, acceptable.

A New-Yorker in Boston is struck at all times by the simple country-like manner of most people he comes by chance in contact with. The patronizing and host-like manner of the hackmen, as well as their direct way of doing their business, is very interesting. I have two or three times used a public carriage without any previous bargaining, and been asked at the end of the route to pay the exact sum of thirty-seven and a half cents. Any man who should be known to have acted so carelessly in New-York, even to a reporter, would hardly escape being presented with a service of plate for his greenness. The faculties of self-preservation and combativeness are at once excited when one hears the voice, or lets his eye rest for an instant upon a New-York hackman. A Boston driver inspires me with a delicious sense of respect, confidence and repose. I ask what I have to pay, as I would ask for cream in an Orange County farm-house.

On a holiday in New-York, however attractive, the largest part of our crowd is composed of New Yorkers, and our country guests are to be distinguished by a glance; they are another sort of mankind. Here, it was perceptible, chiefly by the ear, that eight-tenths of the crowd of the streets were from out of town, yet were familiar with the town—a whining, but sensible, wide-awake people, able to make themselves at home, and not a bit afraid of pick-pockets, nor awed by swells.

The truth is, that out a smell part of Boston is to be found on this little peninsula, and half the remaining people of Massachusetts share the metropolitan character of Bostonians. Town and country are married; the town people seem country-bred, and the country people not a little town-bred.

In the military parade Boston did not compare favorably with New-York. There were some tolerably drilled bodies, though none which would compare with the 7th, but the average was much below ours. In general the men looked gawky and the officers nervous and ill at ease. Nearly all were dressed shockingly; not that their uniforms were the worst which could have been contrived for a soldier's purposes, though generally bad enough, but they were put on awkwardly and slovenly, and were frequently vilely dirty and dilapidated. Since the Burns trial, I understand, the military amusement has fallen into disrepute here, and such was the appearance of things. The Bostonians have been proud of "the Lancers," and they are the best body of militia horsemen I have seen; still, one would think a bounty had been offered for all the round-shouldered fellows in town to join them. They are worse-dressed than most of the infantry, and the narrow white sword-belt over the right shoulder draws across the flabby breast of their loose scarlet coat in a manner which awakens a suffocating sympathy in the observer; not more than one in twenty wore a coat sitting snugly on the chest. A body of horse artillery looked well, for militia horse-artillery.

The decorations of the buildings on the route of the procession and of the grounds in Charleston were of the confectionary style, with nothing original or commendable. We have had much better in all respects in New-York, bad as is our general taste in such matters.

The Pavilion was very simple, entirely inelegant and unadorned. I judge it to be the same canvass formerly used at the Hippodrome in New-York.

Considering Mr. EVERETT as beyond commendation or criticism, Gov. GARDNER was the only speaker I heard with any satisfaction. He has a good address and speaks fluently, confidently and cheerfully. The Masonic "exercises," addresses, declamations, and recitations, were unspeakably stupid and tiresome; yet only one or two of them so had as to be droll. Throughout, the audience was very unresponsive. Mr. EVERETT's reference to "the colored man, SALEM," drew the loudest and longest cheers; the Union saving business was remarkably poor, applause coming chiefly from the dignitaries and office-holders on the stage. Mr. PEABODY, who had a prominent seat among the Governors and veterans, leading off. Mr. MASON's remarks were received with quiet dignity by the Massachusetts audience, and the Free Soil speakers who followed him were not tempted to any pertinent response. The announcement of the President that the Seventh had received orders from New-York to return immediately produced a "profound sensation," and the invitation to them to march through the tent, (not accepted,) was loudly applauded.

The Marshals were very inefficient; the arrangements very badly contrived and worse executed. Those having tickets to the Pavillion were invited to attend at 11 o'clock, and the procession was to have left the Common an hour earlier. Many ladies took the Committee at the word and were obliged to wait, sitting on narrow, low, hard benches, crowded together, from four to five hours before the exercises commenced. After the procession arrived it was at least an hour before the selected audience found their places. Three hours longer had the wearied women to remain before the "addresses by several gentlemen" could be heard. Maddened by hunger, some were constantly engaged in trying to force a passage out through the compact body of humanity, and turmoil and confusion were necessarily constant.

The rabble and the police seemed to be quite as bad and as little opposed to each other as those of New-York. During the exercises in the tent, the wooden fence which surrounded it was broken down, and the rabble surged in at the entrances and under the canvas walls, bursting these in some instances from the bolt ropes. The police were unable to protect the audience, not merely from the uproarious interruption, but even from the danger of being crushed, and orders were once actually given by the Governor, through his aids, to bring in a detachment of military to restore order at the point of the bayonet.

On the whole I do not think the Boston people show a whit more talent for holiday-keeping than the New-Yorkers—hardly as much.

But they have one advantage for holidays, as well as for all other days, which New-York will have to wait full fifty years for. The Common is wonderfully fine now. The grass, the trees, this fountain, are perfect of their kind, and there is nothing in the world finer, in its way, than the terrace promenade at the Court-house side. The Central Park will be, if Mayor WOOD shall ever get his deserts and do no more mischief, some twenty times as large, as it should be, to meet the proportionate requirements of our population. It may be very much better laid out and planted, still it probably will never be better than the Common in the essential elements of a City play-ground. As a play-ground, I am glad to see a "caravan" of wild beasts, with the cantonnement of the Belgian Giant encamped upon the parade ground of the Common; a base-ball club, suited with an admirable open field; children swimming dogs and racing yachts on the pond, and babies playing boo peep with squirrels in the trees. I would like to see cafés, acrobats and Punch and Judy—anything and everything amusing, and not positively and certainly vicious—introduced; but the Common is not large enough. If it were, and were so made use of, the Boston folks would be better than they are. I am glad to see how completely these hard, decorous Yankees refute the supposition that we should not make use of a park. I was in the London Parks every day for two months, last year, and I did not see them better used, or by a completer representation of all classes of the people, than is the Common in Boston. I have taken an observation once or twice each day for the last week, and have found it, morning and evening, giving of its health, beauty and cheerfulness, always to many hundreds of men and women, and thousands of girls and boys. Near sunset its avenues are mostly thronged; and on the holidays all parts—for it is large enough to admit the people everywhere upon the grass—were full of animated ramblers.

From Emerson's English Traits, Chapter XV.

The tendency in England towards social and political institutions like those of America is inevitable, and the ability of its journals is the driving force. * * * *

The most conspicuous result of this talent is the Times newspaper. No power in England is more felt, more feared, or more obeyed. What you read in the morning in that journal, you shall hear in the evening in all society. It has ears everywhere, and its information is earliest, completest and surest. It has risen year by year, and victory by victory, to its present authority.

I asked one of its old contributors whether it had once been abler than it is now, "Never," he said; "these are its palmiest days." It has shown those qualities which are dear to Englishmen—unflinching adherence to its objects, prodigal intellectual ability, and a towering assurance, backed by a perfect organization in its printing-house, and its world-wide net-work of correspondence and reports.

It has its own history and famous trophies. In 1820 it adopted the cause of Queen CAROLINE, and carried it against the King. It adopted a poor-law system, and almost alone lifted it through. When Lord BROUGHAM was in power it decided against him, and pulled him down. It declared war against Ireland and conquered it. It dopted the League against the Corn Laws, and when COBDEN had begun to despair, it announced his triumph. * * * *

The influence of this journal is a recognized power in Europe, and of course none are more conscious of it than its conductors. The tone of its articles has often been the occasion of comment from the official organs of the Continental Courts, and sometimes the ground of diplomatic complaint. What would the Times say? is a terror in Paris, in Berlin, in Vienna, in Copenhagen, and in Nepaul. * * * It draws from any number of skilful contributors. No writer is suffered to claim the authorship of any paper; everything good, from whatever quarter, comes out editorially. * * * It thinks for all; it is their understanding and day's ideal daguerreotyped. It has the national courage, not rash and petulant, but considerate and determined. It attacks a Duke as readily as a policeman. * * * It addresses occasionally a hint to Majesty itself, and sometimes a hint which is taken.

Correspondence of the New-York Herald.

LONDON, June 5, 1857.

It seems to be admitted that there is in England an inevitable tendency towards social and political institutions similar to those of America, and the newspaper press is the great propelling power.

* * * * *

At this time the power most felt, most feared, and most obeyed in England is the press, at the head of which stands the London Times—an "institution" which wields more influence over all Europe than any of their crowned heads. The columns of the morning Times furnish topics of conversation for all society during the day; while all admit its information is the earliest, completest and surest, gathered as it is from an army of correspondents scattered and stationed throughout the globe. * * * *

The Times is now in the zenith of its power and prosperity, the necessary result of those qualities which always secure newspaper success in this as well as in other countries—unflinching adherence to its object, prodigal intellectual ability, and a towering assurance, backed by a perfect organization of its printing establishment, and its world-wide network of correspondence and reports.

* * * * *

I lately had an opportunity of taking a peep into the Times office. One feels here as if he should tread lightly. He is about entering the temple whence issued the mighty power which carried the cause of Queen CAROLINE AMELIA AUGUSTA, of Brunswick, against GEORGE IV.; which caused to be adopted the poor law system; which leveled Lord BROUGHAM; waged successful war on Ireland; adopted the League against the Corn Laws, and "when COBDEN had begun to despair, announced his triumph."

The conductors of the Times are well aware of the influence of their journal, the tone of which has been the occasion of comment from the official organs of the Continental Courts, and even the ground of diplomatic complaint. What would the Times say? is a terror in every capital in Europe. The editorial staff has always been made up of able men, and now it commands the best pens in England; but no writer is suffered to claim the authorship of any paper; everything good, from whatever quarter, comes out editorially. The paper thinks for the whole nation; its columns daguerreotype British ideas and British understanding. Bold but considerate, it speaks alike the peasant and the prince, and not unfrequently drops a hint to Majesty itself.

SPEECH OF GOV. WALKER AT TOPEKA.

THE ADMINISTRATION POLICY.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOPEKA, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

Topeka has now become doubly distinguished—first, as the place wherein was enacted the Constitution, so called, and second, as the place where the political disturbances which called that Constitution into existence have at length been settled and subdued. By far the most important meetings which have taken place since I entered the Territory, and, probably, by far the most important meetings that have occurred in Kansas et any time, were held here on Saturday last, and are now in progress to-day. On Saturday, by invitation of some of the citizens, Gov. WALKER addressed an immense audience at this place in a speech (of which I send you a printed copy reported verbatim) which was invested with a peculiar interest by the frankness with which he was frequently interrupted by his hearers, and the readiness and efficiency with which he replied to their numerous interrogatories. You will perceive that all the great questions of the Territory were fully discussed between them, and that each furnished the other with a candid exposition of their respective views. Having thus got rid of any possible misapprehensions as to their sentiments and wishes, it is remarkable how easily and with what rapidity the frigidity of mere party ties began to thaw. The change thus produced in the political sentiments of the bulk of the people of Topeka appears to me to be immense. Politics seem to have been completely revolutionized, and by a process at once the most practical and natural in the whole world—to wit, free discussion and honest expression of honest views.

To-day, the State Legislature, elected under the Topeka Constitution, assembled here, pursuant to adjournment, for the purpose, as believed by some, of putting the State government into full operation. Various committees had compiled a complete code of State laws, and the Legislature designed to enact those laws and put them at once into force. This, of course, would have produced immediately a direct collision between the Government of the United States and the Topeka State laws, and necessarily have embroiled Kansas again in civil war.

Simultaneously with the call for the meeting of the Legislature, a requisition has been extensively circulated throughout the Territory for a Mass Free-State Convention also to be holden in Topeka to-day. The Convention met, pursuant to the requisition, and organised this morning by the appointment of General LANE as President. Save a few speeches of no great intrinsic importance, nothing was done during the morning session, which terminated at noon. At 3 o'clock the Convention reassembled and plunged at once in medias res, by proceeding to discuss a series of resolutions submitted by a committee appointed for the purpose.

Prodigious efforts were made by the ultraists to induce the Convention to pass the amendment to the fourth resolution, proposed by Judge CONWAY, of Lawrence, providing for the immediate organization of the State Government. A most excited debate sprung up, in which nearly every leading man of the Free-State Party—ROBINSON, DELAHAY, LANE DIETZLER, THATCHER, CONWAY, ARNY, &c., &c.—took part. CONWAY was completely floored, however. His amendment was voted down by a large majority and the original resolutions, with two or three additions, were adopted.

To save any misunderstanding, I forward you the official report of the Convention, for advanced slips of which I am indebted to the Topeka Tribune:

PROCEEDINGS OF THE FREE-STATE CONVENTION HELD AT TOPEKA, JUNE 9, 1857.

The Convention met at 10 o'clock, and was called to order by Judge CONWAY. Gen. J. H. LANE was unanimously appointed President.

On motion, W. F. M. ARNY, Judge CONWAY, M. W. DELAHAY, G. W. DIETZLER, and G. W. CUTLER were appointed a committee to recommend to the Convention the names of five persons as Vice-Presidents and two Secretaries.

The Committee reported as follows:

For Vice-Presidents: J. W. Morris, W. C. Laribee, Lyman Allen, Fielding Johnson, W. W. Ross. For Secretaries: W. F. M. Arny, T. D. Thatcher.

Which report was received and unanimously adopted.

On motion, the President appointed the following Committee to report business for the action of the Convention.

Judge Conway, M. W. Delahay, Walter Oakley, Gov. Robinson, Judge Hunt, G. W. Deitzler, Alex. A. Jamison, C. K. Holliday, J. P. Root, and Judge Smith.

The Committee asked leave to retire, which was granted, and by invitation Gen. LANE and Gov. ROBINSON addressed the Convention, after which the Convention adjourned to meet at 3 o'clock, P. M.

At 3 o'clock the Convention met, and the Committee on business made the following report:

Resolved, That the people of Kansas now, as ever, disown as valid, and of no force or effect the authority of the Territorial government as embodied in the enactments of the so-called Legislature of Kansas.

Resolved, That it is made incumbent on the people of Kansas, by the highest considerations of justice and expediency to look forward now, as ever, to their admission into the Union under the Constitution which they have already formed, as the only method of adjusting existing difficulties to which they will assent.

Resolved, That the people of Kansas will pursue with unfaltering steadiness of purpose, the application now pending before the Congress of the United States, for their admission into the Union under their own Constitution, and with their own government, resting their hopes for the success thereof upon the profound confidence they feel that a measure so eminently just, and so accordant to the principles of past legislation in our country will eventually be conceded and sanctioned to them by the representatives of the American people.

Resolved, That the Constitution framed and adopted at Topeka, had its origin in a public necessity, and the offspring of the popular will; and experience has proved the wisdom of those who framed it, and it is the duty of the Legislature and officers elected under it to complete the State organization, and keep its machinery in readiness for use so soon as we are admitted into the Union, or the necessities of the people shall require.

G. W. SMITH, G. K. HOLLIDAY,
G. W. DEITZLER, C. ROBINSON,
J. P. ROOT, MORRIS HUNT,
A. A. JAMISON, M. W. DELAHAY,
WALTER OAKLEY.

Judge CONWAY dissented from the report, and offered the following as a substitute for the fifth resolution:

Resolved, That while we disclaim any intention to employ force to maintain the authority of our Government, we do now recommend to the people of Kansas that they, voluntarily, peacefully and universally accept, as their only rightful Government; and act in all things with, and up to the Government established under the Topeka Constitution; that they should look to it exclusively to extend protection to individual rights and to regulate all the relations of society; and that they should refer all their personal controversies to its judicial tribunals for adjudication and settlement, and should scrupulously abide the decisions of the same; that they should to fine adopt it in all its details, and the business of every day life, and everywhere respect its legislation as binding upon them; and its official functionaries as entitled to their obedience; to the end that the aforesaid Government shall become the living Government of the community.

Resolved, That in order to enable the people to accomplish this object, the Legislature under the State Constitution now in session at this place, in the opinion of this Convention, should proceed to complete the organization of the State Government so far as that work constitutes part of its Legislative duty—first, by establishing counties throughout the State, and providing for the form of government for the same. Secondly, by providing for the incorporation of towns throughout the State, including forms of government for the same; and by the enactment of all laws whatsoever which may be necessary to the complete development of the forms of the government to that point at which they may be taken hold of by the people in all their local departments and made the fundamental rule of government.

The substitute, after considerable discussion by Judge CONWAY, WM. PHILLIPS, CHARLES F. W. LEONHARDT and W. F. M. ARNY, in favor of the substitute, and Col. DELAHAY, Governor C. ROBINSON, Judge SMITH, General LANE, T. D. THATCHER, J. M. WALDEN and J. W. MORRIS, against the substitute, was submitted to the vote of the Convention. The President could not decide by the sound, and a division of the Convention was had—the substitute lost. The original resolution was then amended on motion of Mr. ARNY, by striking out the words "the admission into the Union, or." After which the report of the majority was unanimously adopted.

The Committee reported the following which was also adopted:

Whereas, By unfair legislation by the Lecompton "Legislative Assembly," and the manner of registration under the act providing for a call of a Convention to form a Constitution, has excluded a large majority of the voters of Kansas from a participation in the election of delegates to said Convention; therefore,

Resolved, That this Convention respectfully and earnestly recommend to the Free-State party of Kansas that the election for delegates, in pursuance of the law enacted by the Lecompton bogus Legislature, be disregarded and permitted to pass without any participation therein by the Free State party of Kansas.

On motion, it was unanimously

Resolved, That since the issues of the past have been sufficient to develop the startling principles of every man in Kansas, therefore we regard any man who sympathizes with our oppressors to the extent that he consents to become a delegate to the Lecompton Convention, or a candidate to the same, is unworthy the fellowship or confidence of Free-State men, and should be regarded with suspicion every where.

After which the Convention adjourned sine die.

J. H. LANE, President.

W. F. M. ARNY, T. D. THATCHER, } Secretaries.

That the Legislature will pursue a course substantially the same is now a matter of certainty. To-morrow they will meet, and, under the influence of honest counsels and a sound policy, will adjourn without taking any action calculated to lead to collision with the Federal Government or authorities.

About 8 o'clock in the evening, when the Convention had broken up, the crowd proceeded en masse to Governor WALKER's lodgings at the Garvey House, and by repeated calls, succeeded in bringing him forward to address them. His remarks were delivered with deep feeling, and listened to with the utmost attention, and in a stillness unbroken save by an occasional murmur of assent or expression of approval. He dwelt with great force on the magnitude of the interests, national as well as local, involved in the settlement of the affairs of Kansas, and closed with a touching appeal to the people to uphold the laws and constitution and preserve the Union. The result was a complete victory over ultra-sentiment, which I consider entirely decisive of the fact that the days of bleeding Kansas are over, and the days of peaceful Kansas have begun, never again to be interrupted by the agitation of the Slavery question.

To-morrow, at 2 o'clock, the Governor addresses a meeting at Big Springs, of which I shall endeavor to give you some account. Thence he returns to Lecompton, from whence he again sets out, I believe, to visit every county in the Territory, and address the people wherever he goes on these grave and momentous questions. His path is now plain, and his progress, I do not doubt, will be easy. I now regard the peaceful settlement of the Kansas question as almost un fait accompli, and this without the shedding of a single drop of blood, or the ordering of a single soldier into the field.

It is universally admitted here that if the Governor had not boldly faced the danger by coming to Topeka, and clearly and distinctly reiterating his views, that the Constitution should be submitted to the whole people, and that they should decide the matter by their own vote, the flames of civil war would have burst forth afresh over this Territory, and deluged the land again with blood.

The visit of the Governor to Topeka, has been signalized by a series of social festivals of the most agreeable character. Last night he was entertained at a ball at the Garvey House, which was intended as an appropriate finale to the Governor's visit, and passed off with unpr

Constitution and introduce such social institutions as the majority prefer. But how is this to be done? The Congress of the United States has established for Kansas but one mode of action on this subject, and that action is through the Territorial Legislature.

Now, none of you can regret more than I do any of those deplorable and calamitous circumstances which have taken place in the past. For myself, I wish to overlook the past and look forward to a better and brighter future. That Territorial Legislature has, in respect to the authority over this question, been recognized by the acts of Congress of 1855 and 1857. That Legislature has called a Convention to assemble in September next. That Constitution they will or they will not submit to the vote of the majority of the then actual, resident settlers of Kansas. If they do not thus submit it, I will join you, fellow-citizens, in lawful opposition to their course. [Cries of "Good," and cheers.] And I cannot doubt, gentlemen, that you much higher than I, the Chief Magistrate of the Union, will join you in opposition. But, gentlemen, for myself, I cannot doubt that that Convention will submit such an instrument as they may frame, for the adoption or rejection of the whole people of Kansas, to all who now are or then may be actual, bona fide, resident settlers of the Territory of Kansas. Then, at that time, and in pursuance of the method designated by the laws of your country, by the instructions of the Chief Magistrate of the Union, who was placed there by the people and sworn by them to execute the laws; I do not entertain a doubt but that that Convention will submit to the whole of the then bona fide settlers of Kansas, the determination for themselves by an actual majority of the whole people whether they shall adopt or reject that Constitution. If they reject it, there is an end of that Convention. It has performed its office. It has adjourned never to meet again. [A Voice—What next?] What next, you ask, gentlemen? There are two other easy exits from the difficulty, and as the question is a practical one, I propose to answer it. In October next, not under the act of the late Territorial Legislature, but under the laws of Congress, you, the whole people of Kansas, have a right to elect a delegate to Congress, and to elect a Territorial Legislature; and through that Legislature you can speak your views and instruct them either to call a new Convention to submit a new Constitution for the consideration of the people, or they can instruct their delegate to Congress, chosen by a majority of their own votes, to ask Congress to pass a law, authorizing the people of Kansas to form a State Constitution for themselves.

It is quite certain, gentlemen, that in this mode there is in any event a peaceful, tranquil, quiet exit from all the embarrassments and difficulties by which you are surrounded, and that the time is rapidly coming, if it has not already arrived, when the rule of justice and the people shall prevail in Kansas. [Cheers.]

Then, gentlemen, what is the other mode which is presented? You are about to have assembled here at Topeka, next week, what is called the State Legislature, for they tell you that they are now about to convene a Legislature for the State of Kansas. Who elected that Legislature? [A voice—"The people."] The people! why the whole vote given for your so-called Constitution, as claimed by yourselves, was but 1,731, whereas there are now registered over 10,000 votes, residents here on the 15th of March last, exclusive of the thousands omitted or who have arrived here since that date. The people! Do you mean to tell me that 1,731 votes constitutes the whole number of votes in the Territory of Kansas? [A voice]—"Took was a year and a half ago."] But should those 1,731 votes a year and a half ago impose a Constitution for all time to come upon the present people of Kansas? [A voice—"Not against their will."] Should the constitution be submitted to their will for adoption, or not? [A voice,] "Yes." That, gentlemen, is the great question, so far as they are concered. But I understand you claim to be a State now, and that your so-called Legislature, chosen by a small number of votes, propose next week to enact laws to be enforced in Kansas. This miserable minority, constituting not one-tenth of the present people of Kansas, propose, in absolute defiance of the acts of Congress, and in open rebellion, mark you, gentlemen, not only against the Territorial laws, but against the laws and Government of the United States, to assemble here, and, representing 1,731 people, impose this constitution by force, upon the people of Kansas by the enactment of laws. [A voice]—"Where are those 10,000 voters that are now on the record?"] Some inadvertently omitted, many who would not register, and thousands who have arrived since the 15th of March last. As regards the register, however, I say to you that it is of comparatively little consequence if the Constitution be submitted to the whole people.

It may suit the purposes of faction to ask such questions by those who refused to register, but the substantive fact le that the Constitution can he of no force or effect unless it is submitted to the vote of the people, and if it le so submitted to is for them to declare whether they will adopt it or not. But here comes a body of men acting in defiance of the laws of Congress, and in open rebellion against the Government of the United States, representing, according to their own statement, less than one-tenth of the people of Kansas, who come forward and say that the people next Fall shall not decide this question! That neither you nor I, nor any of our fellow-citizens elsewhere throughout the Territory shall have the right to determine whether we shall accept the new Constitution, or reject it!

Gentlemen, I come here for purposes of peace and pacification. I come here to inaugurate the rule of law, of justice and of the whole people of Kansas by giving them all an opportunity of adopting their own Constitution instead of allowing a handful of 1,731 men to thrust a Constitution on them, by adopting a code of laws, for I am told that they have actually a code of laws prepared by their various Committees, cut and dry, to put in operation as soon as they meet, binding the whole people of the Territory and depriving them of the right to decide on their own form of Government and to adopt their own Constitution.

Now, then, I repeat that I come here for the purpose of restoring and perpetuating peace, but I tell you candidly that my instructions and my oath of office require me to put down the execution of such laws, and for the good of the people of Kansas, they must and will be put down. [Cries of "Never, never." A Voice—"Do not the people of the United States say that those laws are right?"] The people of the United States have just elected a President who declares that such laws would be unconstitutional, null and void. [A Voice—"Who cares?"] Nay more; the people of the United States have just elected a majority to Congress who entertain the same opinion with him. This is a matter involving the peace, happiness and prosperity of the whole people. Your towns will advance in importance and wealth, your claims will increase in value, harmony and good will reign throughout the Territory if the people who are now here and who will be here in November or December next will only decide for themselves what shall be their own form of government, and their own social institutions. But what is it this Legislature proposes to do? Without the slightest necessity, without the slightest pretext or apology under the mode of adjustment now proposed—I speak not now as regards the past; I wish to God that you, and I, and all of us could rub out the past. [A voice—"It cannot be done." Another voice—"Rub out the bogus laws."] Rub them out, gentlemen, if you please, by a vote of the people. [A voice—"We cannot get that."] Yon cannot get that! [A voice—"Give us a fair vote at the next election."] You will get that. At the next election in October, when you elect the Territorial Legislature, you can repeal those laws, and you can then also, by a majority of your own votes, adopt or reject the Constitution presented for your consideration next Fall. Now, what, I ask again, is proposed to be done by this Legislature? It is proposed to put in operation a body of laws. But you must remember the passage of laws is no farce; it is not a humbug. [A voice—"It has been here."] A law is a command; it exacts obedience from the whole people, and is to be actually put in force in the Territory. What is the consequence? Why you thus produce an absolute, clear, direct and positive collision between that Legislature and the Government of the United States. There are two sets of laws then to govern you. Every man's contract, every man's title, every man's possession will then be involved in difficulty, and, in the course of three or four months you will have a large importation of lawyers. [A voice—"We have plenty of them now,"—laughter.] It will involve you in endless litigation, from which there will be no possible extrication. Now, gentlemen, is there any necessity for this? [A voice—"None—not a bit—there never was."] Can you not peacefully decide this question in the mode pointed out by the act of Congress, if, as you can and will have, a full opportunity of recording your vote. [A voice—"Why have we not had it?"] Gentlemen, I was not Governor of Kansas and Mr. BUCHANAN was not President of the United States. [A voice—"How are we to get it?"] You will get it by the Convention submitting the Constitution to the vote of the whole people. [A voice—"Who is to elect the Convention? That is the grand question."] Gentlemen, this is a comparatively small point by whom the Constitution is to be submitted. Don't let us run away after shadows. Do not refuse to register and then say you can't vote. The great substantial point is this: Will the whole people of Kansas, next Fall, by a fair election, impartially and fairly conducted, by impartial judges, have an opportunity to decide for themselves what shall be their form of government and what shall be their social institutions? I say they will, but I go a step further. [A voice—"Have you the power?"] If I have not the power to bring it about; if the Convention will not do it, I will join you in lawful opposition to their proceedings. [Cries of "good, good." A voice—"We will hold you to your promise." Another voice—"How are we to vote for this here Convention?" Another voice—"Nothing can be asked fairer than what he says."] Well, gentlemen, I have no power to repeal the laws that have been passed in reference to the Convention, and if those laws have not been fairly executed it is simply no fault of mine. [A voice—"Has not JAMES BUCHANAN power to repeal those laws?" Another voice—"Hasn't he sanctioned them?"] He has had nothing to do with them, but the Congress of the United States has authorized the Territorial Legislature to pass laws. The President of the United States has taken an oath to carry the laws into effect, and it is for you, if you are opposed to those laws, through the people's vote, to repeal them. [A voice—"We cannot get at them."] There is not the least difficulty about your getting at them. [A voice—"Keep out Missouri and we will do well enough."] Well, gentlemen, I pledge myself to you that, so far as my power is concerned—and I do not doubt that you are not in any event to have reënacted here the scenes of the past—but so far as my power is concerned I pledge myself that the people of Kansas, and of Kansas alone, and not the people of Missouri or of Massachusetts, or of any other State, shall interfere even by one single vote to decide for the people of Kansas what shall be their institution. [A voice—"That is my doctrine." Cries of "Good, good."] But, gentlemen, they shall decide it for themselves. When these views of mine are not carried into effect—when you see that you will not have a full and fair opportunity to decide for yourselves what shall be your form of government and your social institutions, it will then be time enough to complain of me, but not till then. [Several voices—"That is truth." Another voice—"What about the bogus laws?"] And now I am asked what about the bogus laws? Why, your very Governor, Mr. ROBINSON, has acknowledged those bogus laws by putting into effect a charter passed by that bogus Legislature, and so have many of you and nearly all the people of Kansas. And if the bogus Legislature has power to pass charters, it has power to pass any other law not in conflict with the Constitution of the United States. [A voice—"How are those Inspectors to be appointed?"] They must be appointed fairly and impartially, of course. [A voice—"Who is to appoint them?"] I doubt not that the Convention will prescribe a fair, just and impartial method, as they do in other States. [A voice—"They did, in giving us two hundred and eighty voters in this county." Laughter.] Well, gentlemen, let us look at that question. What have these two hundred and eighty voters to do, if you have all a fair vote next Fall on the Constitution? [A voice—"There has been no census taken."] That has nothing on earth to do with the question. But whilst I must deeply regret and deplore the circumstance that there has been an insufficient census, what am I to think when told by those who profess to represent the Republican Party of this Territory, that tell you that you should neither register or vote? You were kept from registering, as you all know, by following the advice of these party leaders of yours, and then complain they cannot vote. You could have registered here if you pleased, and hundreds in this Territory, since hearing my plan, have expressed to me their deep regret that they had not registered, and many of your county since my arrival have changed their position and resolved to vote. Every man who responds that he will not acknowledge those laws has been deprived of no privilege in not being registered, because he declares that whether registered or not, he will not vote. If you dislike the Convention, do you best oppose it by standing aloof and allowing a majority of other persons to adopt their Constitution, or by voting down that instrument? If you do not vote next Fall for or against that instrument when you have a fair chance, Congress will act as though you had. No, you cannot defeat the Constitution by refusing to vote. [A voice—"The Governor is right, and we will vote then."] Now, gentlemen, I really believe I have detained you too long. There is nothing on earth that I love more than free opinion, a free press and popular discussion. [Cries of "right."] Instead of objecting to it I love to hear some few of you differ from me or ask questions. Come let us reason together. Discarding passion and prejudice, regretting as you and I do, all the difficulties that have occurred in the past, let us ask ourselves this great practical question: What is best for the great future of Kansas? [A voice—"The Topeka Constitution."] Well, gentlemen, I hope no one will say so, unless the man who believes that 1,731 voters should deprive some 20,000 or 30,000 voters now in the Territory or that soon will be here of deciding their own form of government for themselves.

[A Voice—"How was it when the people of Missouri came here?"] I have nothing to do with the people of either Missouri or Massachusetts. I am only looking to the future. And I say if you desire war—(loud cries of "No, no")—if you desire conflict; ("No, no;" if you desire to enter into a rebellion, not against the Territorial laws only, but against the Government of the United States, ("No, no,") all you have to do is to set up the State Government against the Government approved by the President and the acts of Congress by the present enactment of State laws. [A voice—"Not now."] There cannot be a State Government without a State Governor, without his superseding the Governor appointed by the President of the United States under the laws of Congress. There cannot be a State Government without State Judges, and there cannot be State Judges without their superseding the Judges appointed by the President of the United States, under the laws of Congress, or a State Legislature, without superseding the Territorial Legislature. It means that, or it means nothing. Surely this is open rebellion against the Government of the United States, to which you tell me you do not mean to resort.

Now then, gentlemen, I return you my most sincere thanks for the kind and indulgent attention with which you have listened to my remarks.

[A Voice—What as to the taxes?]

Long before I am called on for any official action, the reign of law, of justice and of the people will be so fully established here that, as good citizens, you will all cheerfully pay this small pittance to support your own Government.

[A Voice—We will have a great deal more confidence in the vote of the people to be given next Fall if you will tell us by what authority the Judges are to be appointed.]

I will answer that question, for I have no doubt it is fairly asked and in a fair spirit.

[The Voice—It certainly is.]

I will say then to you, gentlemen, that if they do not appoint a fair and impartial made by which the majority of the actual, bona fide, resident settlers of Kansas shall vote, through the instrumentality of impartial Judges, I will join you all in lawful opposition to their doings, and the President and Congress will reject their Constitution. [A Voice—"Will the Convention appoint impartial judges?"] It is their duty to do so. [A Voice—"Will they do so?"] Gentlemen, I am not the Convention, but I do not doubt they will give you impartial judges. [A Voice—I will ask the "Governor if there is any one who will be allowed to vote for this Convention except those registered?"] As regards the past, I have got no power to recall it. The past is irrevocable, even by Almighty power, and I profess to have very little power, much less such power as that. Over the past I have no control, but over the future I have; and I say to you, that unless a full and fair opportunity is given to the whole people of Kansas to decide for themselves what shall be their form of Government, including the great sectional question which has so long divided you—unless, I repeat, they grant you such an opportunity, I have one power of which no man or set of men can deprive me, and to which I shall unhesitatingly resort, and that is, to join you in lawful opposition to their acts. [Cries of "Good, good," and loud applause, during which the Governor withdrew.]

POSTSCRIPT.—WEDNESDAY, June 10.

To-day, the Governor; Mr. STANTON, the Territorial Secretary; Mr. PERRIN, of Tennessee, and Mr. DALAHAY, of the Wyandotte Register, addressed an audience of about 300 persons at Big Springs.

The speeches of these gentlemen were received, if not enthusiastically, at least favorably.

Gen. JIM LANE replied to the Governor and Mr. STANTON. He declared it to be the intention of the Free State party to submit the Topeka Constitution, as opposed to that which is to be formed by the Convention assembled under the provisions of the Territorial Legislature, or, as he called it, the Bogus Legislature—(though that is a matter on which the difference of opinion is immense)—he declared, I say, that it was the intention of his party to submit that Constitution to the people in August next. The gist of his speech may be gathered from the resolutions adopted at the Mass Convention. The General's remarks were received with frequent applause from a portion of his audience. The meeting did not disperse finally until 7 o'clock P. M. P. H. C.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

You are again convened together at the expiration of the recess taken by you in January last. You meet under circumstances scarcely less difficult, and no less embarrassing, than have characterized the previous meetings of the Legislature. But your duties under the Constitution are plain, and the necessity for action imperative.

As the representatives of the people, you are here to do the work for which they selected you. The bitter experience of the past has brought nothing with it that could relieve you of your responsibility. Every step in that experience has shown the necessity for you to do your work, and that you with calmness, wisdom and determination prepare those bulwarks on which the people may rest their constitutional rights, as American citizens, and keep the State Government in readiness for admission into the Union.

As it becomes my duty to recommend such measures as I may deem expedient for your action, and to communicate to you the condition of affairs in the State, I shall endeavor briefly to do so.

Since I sent my message to you, when first convened in March, 1855, many important and startling events have marked and disturbed the current of affairs. The horrors of actual warfare have existed in our midst. Towns and cities have been sacked and burned, and our citizens have been brutally murdered on the highways and in their homes. A hostile enemy on our Eastern border has ponred in predatory band after band, and army after army, with the design of harassing our citizens, and completing the subjugation they had begun.

The General Government, which still assumes the power of protection over us, has basely used that power as the screen under which it has rendered aid and comfort to our enemies, and strengthened the hands of those foreign invaders who still pretend to hold the political power of the people, which they usurped. Nor have your labors or your persons been exempt. Lawless arrests have been made of your members, and also of Executive Officers, by men who, although they possessed some power, and in many instances, held positions in connection with the Federal Courts, acted with irregularity and in defiance of even the rules which they professed to respect.

A large and necessary portion of the labors of your codifying committee was destroyed, with much other property at Lawrence, in May, 1856, when that place was pillaged and partly burned by a mob brought there by a United States Marshal. When your bodies met pursuant to adjournment, in July last, your Assembly was broken up by a large force of United States troops, in battle array, who drove you hence in gross violation of those constitutional rights which it was their duty to have protected. When you again convened in January last, at your regular session, your proceedings were interfered with by a Deputy Marshal, and many of your members arrested.

I do no not propose entering into a minute detail of all the unhappy occurrences that have marked the past year—occurrences which have stamped a page of infamy on the history of the country. Let me refer you to the comprehensive address prepared by a committee of the convention that assembled in this place on the 10th of March last, for those particulars, an enumeration of which would absorb too much of your time. Suffice it to say, that owing to these causes the State Government is not fully organized, and waits in urgent necessity for the completion of your work.

The period for which you were elected is drawing to a close. No provision for taking the census has been made, and no election law adopted. Without these, your function in the government will expire, and with it the power of reproducing it. I cannot think that you will, in any contingency incur the reproach of leaving helpless the people who trusted you, or compelling them to recur through original action to their primary power, for those needed steps which it is your duty to supply.

In my message sent to you in March, 1856, I enumerated the outlines of the legislation it would be incumbent on you to frame and adopt. Let me respectfully refer you to that document for these details.

There is one subject of great moment for our present and future prosperity. The public land in our midst still belongs to the General Government. To secure these lands, or all of them that can be obtained, is a matter to which we should devote no ordinary attention. The policy hitherto adopted towards other new States gives us just grounds to look to Congress for a grant of all the public lands in our midst. To your enterprise and endurance its value can be traced, and to you it rightly belongs. The sale of much of our most valuable lands for the behalf of the Indians, give an additional claim on the Government for the remainder. Surely the General Government will not seek to make a speculation on the bones and sinews of the struggling pioneers, who seek to add another State to confederacy. Let us respectfully urge upon the assembled wisdom of Congress our claim for donations of these lands, and let us press these claims before the Government has passed its title to all the valuable portions, into the hands of speculators. No donation should, by its terms, conflict with the claim of a squatter on the soil.

The inanimate frame-work of a Territorial Government still exists in Kansas. While the popular branch of Congress has accepted our application for admission into the Union, the Senate has still withheld its approval. In this isolated condition, our rights as American citizens, under the Constitution, and our inherent rights as men remain to us. The Territorial Governor, recently sent among us by the Federal Government, in his inaugural, has truly said:

"It is the people of Kansas, who, in forming their State Constitution, are to declare the terms on which they propose to enter the Union. Congress cannot compel the people of a Territory to enter the Union as a State or change without their consent, the Constitution framed by the people. Congress, it is true, may for constitutional reasons refuse admission, but the State alone, in forming her Constitution, can prescribe the terms on which she will enter the Union. This power of the people of a Territory in forming a State Constitution, is one of vital importance, especially in the States carved out of the public domain. Nearly all the lands of Kansas are public lands, and most of them are occupied by Indian tribes. These lands are the property of the Federal Government, but their right is exclusively that of a proprietor, carrying with it no political power."

The doctrine here enunciated is only what has been established by precedent, and reiterated time and again. In it we have a right to form a State Constitution, and of necessity the complete State organization, for which its specific terms must provide. As Congress has neither the right to frame a Constitution for us, nor to "change" the same, it must be apparent to all that they have no more power to destroy it when created. Governor WALKER goes even further than this, and further than we have ever proposed going, for he says that "the State alone, in forming a Constitution, can prescribe the terms on which she will enter the Union," clearly implying that she may enter the Union or not. Under these circumstances, it is clearly apparent that the Federal Government has only sent Gov. WALKER as a Territorial officer to Kansas, because we have hitherto failed or been unable to complete the organization we have begun. In the absence of the full and vital powers of government adopted by the people, this is merely an endeavor to carry out the implied protection.

What renders this more unhappy, is the fact that the Federal authorities have never yet been able to afford us such protection, and as there is no Territorial law here, recognized by the people as such, the executive function is a mockery.

Your first consideration is the necessities of the people, but beyond that it is your duty to act with promptness, so as to relieve these Federal appointees of a merely nominal duty, that must be embarrassing and disrespectful to them, whilst the unsettled state of affairs conveys an impressive reproach to those Republican institutions on which all our hopes as a people centre. In the Inaugural to which I have referred, there is a recommendation that our people forsake the government they have adopted, and under the management of usurping, pretended officials, seek to do over again what has been done.

We do not think that any serious or generally entertained desire exists among our people to do so, and, while opinions from such a source may be justly entitled to respect, it is at least unfortunate that a course of action in relation to the Constitution, should be pointed out in the official address of a Federal appointee, who, in that very address, urges the right of the people, and their right alone, to take steps for a State government. It is as clearly evident from that address itself, that Gov. WALKER has not been sufficiently conversant with affairs in Kansas, to warrant the expression of opinion on so grave a matter. In that document he assures us that we shall have everything over which his Executive function has no control, and refrains from expressing any opinion on the only points for which we could entertain hopes of his action. You are doubtless aware that Acting-Territorial Gov. STANTON issued a proclamation containing an apportionment of representation for a Delegate Convention. That apportionment leaves nearly one-half of Kansas without any representation, and as no census has been taken there by any one, they will, of course, have no privilege of even voting.

Had there been no State Constitution in Kansas, had a fraudulent, pretended Territorial Legislature never originated the steps to which this Inaugural refers, had that action come simply from the people as it legitimately should, there would still have been the strongest reasons why all good men should refrain from participating in an act so grossly fraudulent and deceptive as this pretended census, and partial apportionment under it. In any event, such proceedings will inevitably fall to the ground as lacking in that great essential, the popular will, which alone could give it vitality.

Although that strange appointment which deliberately anticipates disfranchising one half of the people, was issued a week previous to the Inaugural of Governor WALKER, there was not the slightest allusion to it in that document. And yet the evidence of the fact was of easy access to him, and he was not ignorant of it. What does he mean when he says, "the law has performed its entire appropriate function when it extends to the people the right of suffrage."

Has it done so? or, is Governor WALKER ignorant of the fact that it has not? He adds:

"Throughout our whole Union, however, and wherever free government prevails, those who abstain from the exercise of the right of suffrage, authorize those who do vote to act for them in that contingency, and the absentees are as much bound under the law and Constitution, where there is no fraud or violence, by the act of the majority of those who do vote, as though all had participated in the election."

It would be needless to tell you that such a position, however good, is quite inapplicable to this so-called census law, and all the proceedings under it. It originates in an usurping fraud. It is not a proposed election to ascertain the wishes of the people, but a foregone conclusion, every part of which is carefully framed to accomplish a certain result. But if its applicability cannot be found in these proceedings, let me suggest where it can be applied. In the proceedings under which the State Constitution was framed and ratified, all the actual voters had the privilege of participating. Men of all parties did do so, and if any parties declined, it was because they feared to hazard the policy they were trying to thrust on Kansas to a popular vote.

How are we to reconcile the two positions of this Federal inaugural—first, that the people alone must freely and fairly make or change their Constitution, and secondly, that if the Territorial Legislature is the power ordained for this purpose by the United States, and in opposing it you oppose the authority of the Federal Government."

Well knowing that the complaint that the Legislature referred to did not derive its power from the people of Kansas, he makes up for its lack of popular legitimacy thus: "That Legislature was called into being by the Congress of 1854, and is recognized in the very latest Congressional legislation. It is recognized by the present Chief Magistrate of the Union."

There is not much of "popular sovereignty" and "self government" here. This usurpation is repudiated by the people, but it is recognized by "Congress" and the "President." Its pretended enactments are a dead letter. All the official proclamations and bulletins of President and Territorial Governors cannot make them law, for nothing is law or can have the authority thereof, save the legitimately expressed will of the people. But if the Federal authorities cannot make their usurpations laws, they seem bent on preventing the people from having any law unless they will stoop to accept of this. Never let it be said that the people of Kansas were so recreant to the principles of self government as to accept the laws thrown upon them by a body of invaders. Such a fatal precedent would sow the seed that would spring up to the ultimate ruin of our Government. An inelgnificant minority in Kansas may cooperate with the invaders outside to perpetuate this usurpation, but as Gov. WALKER says: "The minority, in resisting the will of the majority, may involve Kansas again in civil war; they may bring upon her reproach and obloquy, and destroy her progress and prosperity; they may keep her for years out of the Union, and, in the whirlwind of agitation, sweep away the Government itself; but Kansas can never be brought into the Union with or without Slavery, except by a previous solemn decision, fully, freely and fairly made by a majority of her people in voting for or against the adoption of her State Constitution.

This has been done in the adoption of our State Constitution—has been done in accordance with the very principles and requirements of this inaugural itself, and we may well ask, in the language of Gov. WALKER, "Why, then, should this just, peaceful, and constitutional mode of settlement meet with such opposition from any quarter?"

I cannot dismiss this inaugural, sent among us by the federal authorities and Territorial Governor, without noticing one or two other points. He says there is a clause in our Constitution forever excluding the African race, bond or free, from Kansas. There is no such clause in our Constitution, and it is to be regretted that Gov. WALKER, who talks so much about the "will of the people," should not have given a Constitution emanating from them a more careful investigation. At the time the Constitution was submitted to the people, a resolution from the people to the first Legislature was also submitted. This was neither "in" nor connected with the Constitution, and has just as much force as the first Legislature may choose to attach to it. It originated in an anxious desire to show favor to the peculiar institutions of "her sister States"—especially her immediate neighbor, the State of Missouri. And how has this compromise spirit been met? By invasion, usurpation, rapine, fire and sword. Such clauses as that which he has sarcastically said were in our Constitution, he expressly denies, in another paragraph, to be in it.

How much more deeply must he feel the interests of Missouri than Kansas is, is apparent when he recalls the debt of gratitude that the people of Kansas owe that State which has stripped our people of every Constitutional right, has involved us in the confusion of civil discord, and which is trying by the aid of General Government to place its feet upon our neck to-day. The first cause of a political struggle in Kansas was whether Kansas should be a free or slave State. After the invasion of 1855 a still more fearful issue arose whether the people of Kansas should have a right to govern themselves. It is for this we struggle. The rights of the people, the glory of Republicanism on earth, the integrity of our Government are all wrapt up in the issue. Truly we can say, "never was so momentous a question submitted to the decision of any people, and we cannot avoid the alternatives now before us of glory or of shame."

The rights of a free people we love, the Union we regard, the integrity of the Government we will maintain. The devotion of the people of Kansas to the Union is evidenced by the stern reality of their sufferings and their endurance. In wisdom and devotion the people of Kansas will struggle to preserve the Union should they ever be permitted to enjoy the bonds of sisterhood, they will do so by endeavoring to make the Union worth preserving, without which it will inevitably crumble in pieces. We may with such a logic hand tear from the tomb of WASHINGTON or JEFFERSON some perishable relic of the mortality of those who while living, were devoted to liberty and reverenced the claims of God and humanity and under the cover of the awe-striking symbol, incite the reluctant representatives of the people to acts disfranchising American citizens, robbing Republicanism of all that is good in it. We may shout "the Union," "the Union," over acts of the most reckless despotism, and hurry our Government into oligarchy and anarchy under the delusion, but the delusion will not save us from the penalty of our folly and our crime.

Let us then preserve the Union by maintaining the integrity of Republicanism.

It is an universal maxim that usurpers never voluntarily relinquish their power. Under whatever guise it may come, the action of those who now pretend to hold territorial power, will be for the continuation of that power.

For Gov. WALKER to urge us into that flimsy trap in which they hope to ensnare our people is wrong; and to talk to us in that connection of fairness and justice is to add insult to wrong.

While the great principle for which we have to contend, is to maintain our right to self-government, the second consideration of preserving Kansas a Free State is not to be lost sight of. It is of importance that the principles of Freedom should prevail, not only because the people have willed it, but because it is good policy, and above all because it is right. Where would be our prosperity if slavery were entailed upon us? Where would the towns and cities, the railroads and the commerce be, with such a plague-spot on our energies? The owls would hoot through the cities now laid out in Kansas, the railroads be confined to charters of usurped legislation.

The industrious settler would shrink from the contamination of slave labor that would degrade his manhood and his honest toil. Nor can we trace all the reasons by which the unerring finger of a just Providence guides the policy of every systematic wrong to a sure decay, and entails the curse that there should be no prosperity in the land that is stained by the tears and watered by the unpaid sweat of any portion of the children of man.

There is indeed an "isothermal line" and a law of the thermometer "which may make slave labor comparatively profitable or unprofitable," but there is unhappily no "law of the thermometer" to prevent infatuated slavery propagandists from attempting to establish the institution, where wise policy says it never should be. It will therefore be an important duty in us to guard carefully against all the steps in such an inelegant design; the more so that "policy" and an "isothermal law" are united with the claims of Republicanism and justice.

Under these circumstances we can contemplate the duties before us, and with judicious calmness undertake them. We struggle for our birthright, and we must not sell it for a "mess of pottage." The eyes of the country are on us, for our cause is the common cause of all who love Republicanism. In our defeat the principle on which the Government rests will sustain a shock; in our victory it will take root and be perpetuated. To you is confided no common share of the task. To you will be meted no common share of the glory of victory or the misfortune of defeat. Be true and we shall triumph. Our task is difficult, let us meet its responsibilities in full reliance on the Wisdom of Him who is the God of Justice. A future of prosperity and usefulness is before the people of Kansas. A great State is rapidly expanding into prosperous existence. May we hope to establish in it a Government not unworthy of this civilized age and our Republican institutions.

NEBRASKA.

Condition of Affairs in the Territory.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

OMAHA, Nebraska Territory, May 29, 1857.

The steamer Florence arrived here to-day from Fort Randall, some four hundred miles above this place. She brings down a company of three—agents for the American Fur Company, who left the Territory of Washington in March, came over the Rocky Mountains to Fort Benton, eighteen hundred miles above here, where they took a skiff down the Missouri River till they met the Florence at Fort Randall. They report very cold weather in that far-off country, with an abundance of snow and ice. They had no trouble with the Indians, and report them as generally peaceable and quiet, except at Fort Pierre, where they are rather impudent and restless. They believe there will be no very serious trouble in that direction at present.

The mania for land speculations and town shares is now at its height, and while you are trembling with apprehension for a disastrous result, we are rushing on regardless of any future except such as shall yield its thousands of per cent. upon our hopeful investments.

Nebraska, though rich in her agricultural elements, is poor in the actual products of her soil; and though honest farm labor would be abundantly profitable, yet almost every one seems to leave Agriculture and take to the manufacture of fancy towns and embryo cities, believing that every "claim" can be staked and plotted and its many corner lots be made into sudden fortunes. The consequence is, provisions of every sort are high and have to be imported, while City Scrip is a drug in market and can only be disposed of by exportation. The plateau upon which lies Omaha is seven miles long, yet it is all laid out into town lots, commencing with South Omaha and continuing on through the several distinctions of Omaha City, Scrip Town, Saratoga and Florence, and the holder of each lot enjoys the prospective fortune which the future imaginative population of several hundred thousand will be sure to yield.

But the prospects of Omaha never were brighter to one whose anticipations have not been of the very brilliant order. Here will grow up steadily and naturally a city of importance, but of what population and in what time, the development of the country about it alone will determine.

The enterprise of man may do much to build up a town, but it must be aided by natural advantages of considerable importance, else it cannot largely succeed; and if the advantages claimed for Omaha shall really be secured to her, she will take rank with the cities of 20,000 or 30,000, within the coming ten years. Building of every description goes on as rapidly as the supply of material will admit, and it is safe to say she will double her importance this Summer. Lots are held at $75 per foot, and claims within five miles of the city, in cases where Government title is obtained, cannot be bought for less than $10 to $15 per acre. Emigration, chiefly from the East, is coming in rapidly, and prices are advancing, though not as fast as in Kansas. The character of this emigration is good, it coming chiefly from the East—New-York taking the lead—Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan coming next. Those who have come this season have come more to settle and improve the country, than to speculate out of, and prove a curse to, it. For the former there is an abundance of room, and then honest, faithful labor will bring an abundant reward.

Your readers should beware how they purchase Nebraska property from strangers. I know of an instance in which a stranger showed to members of a prominent wholesale dry goods house in Philadelphia very pretty plots of the two towns, Hudson and Melrose, which were represented as opposite one another, on the Missouri River, fifty miles above here, and at the western terminus of the Iowa Central Railroad. On the strength of these representations, thirty dozen of choice and valuable corner lots in those fictitious embryo cities were made out and delivered at a dollar each to the hopeful parties, but unfortunately for them, there are no such towns, and the Iowa Central Railroad is not yet located within 200 miles of the Missouri. Other similar swindles have been successfully consummated, and Nebraska is not free herself from suffering at the hands of sharpers; for a few weeks ago a man claiming to be a large operator in Wisconsin bought some seven or eight thousand dollars worth of real estate for which he paid his sight draft on Milwaukee. Now sight drafts on Milwaukee are desirable in certain cases, but in this instance, after the transfers were made and the liberal purchaser had liberal time to leave the city, these drafts began to come back condemned as forgeries, and the triumph of duplicity was complete.

I was at Florence a day or two ago, and witnessed the operations of Lynch law at the hands of a Claim Club. Three or four claims had been jumped, and the jumpers were tried, convicted and sentenced. In the crowd were some half dozen desperadoes, who, armed with bowie-knives, revolvers and slung-shots, threatened, if any pugilistic demonstration should be made, there would be a serious muss: that the Short-Boys were around, and would defend the jumpers. Immediately one of the crowd took the stand, and announced that, as sentence had been passed upon the convicted ones, he would be one of any number of companions to arrest and try any person who should undertake to resist the execution of law, to which some thirty men responded by pitching into the "fancy," disarming them, when they were bound and tried. During the progress of their trial, one man explained that these ruffians had come with their murderous weapons, hostile intent and rotten whisky, into a community of peace-loving, quiet citizens, ignoring the customs of the people and defying them with insulting threats; that he, for one, had tolerated them long enough; he had been raised among Christian institutions and religious influences, and wasn't used to such things; for his part, he "was in favor of whaling them like hell, and setting 'em over on the other side of Jordan, and further, he would be one to help to do it."

Another speaker offered to be one of five to buy up their whisky and whisky shanty, and destroy it, upon condition that the ruffians would leave the country. At this point it was announced that one of the offending whisky sellers had yielded, and had promised to destroy the whisky without pay, and instead of leaving the country forever would never sell another drop of liquor and would remain and become a valuable citizen. He was then received back into the community; but his companions with the jumpers declining to yield, had their heads shaven and were sent over the river into fair young Iowa, the Botany Bay of Nebraska.

We are living here without laws, for the last act of the memorable Legislature of last Winter was to abolish all law. Hence our only present appeal is to claim clubs, which happily are not much resorted to, we being generally an order-loving people.

Trains for California, Oregon, and the great pesthouse of our country, poor degraded Utah, are now leaving here almost daily for their weary, lengthy journey. How much of suffering and toil, of privation and death, will they see ere they reach their destinations!

A pamphlet has appeared here from the press of A. S. BARNES & Co., of your City, giving a history and description of Nebraska. It contains much excellent advice to the emigrant and traveler, and a pretty correct account of the Territory. It is accompanied by a new county map, and altogether will prove a valuable aid to all interested in Nebraska.

OMAHA.

Terrible Whirlwind in Oneida County—Loss of Life.

From the Utica Herald, Monday.

On Saturday afternoon very many of our citizens noted the appearance of a very remarkable formation of nebulous or cloudy substance extended from the heavens nearly to the earth, where it seemed to diminish almost to a point, but expanding gradually as it ascended, until the peculiar form was lost in the clouded sky. This remarkable and tunnel-like column of cloudy mist passed over the city at about 4 o'clock, and was remarked not only by its peculiar appearance, but by a rushing, buzzing noise, as it swept off in the direction of Deerfield.

It was watched for some moments, and people generally believed it to be a water spout, as its conical form corresponded with all ideas of such natural phenomenon. It soon passed from sight, and was made the subject of sportive conversation for the hour, without the least just conception of what the body consisted, or its destructive power. Its effects, however, have been most wonderful, and may justly attract the attention and scrutiny of the scientific world.

The conical mass first settled to the earth a few minutes past 4, in Deerfield, and in an instant scattered a barn to pieces, and tore up several trees on the opposite side of the road, &c.

Mr. JOHN WARREN informs us that he was engaged in his garden at about 4 o'clock, and saw the approach of the cloudy object as it threw up the trees. As its course pointed in the direction of his own house, he ran to the dwelling, caught two of his oldest children and called to his wife to save the other three and herself by following him to the cellar. The husband had descended two or three steps with his charge, and the wife, with an infant and two older children, had reached the cellar door, when the house was struck. The whole frame-work was lifted from the foundation; the entire wood-work above the first floor was carried some twenty feet and then dropped in grand perfection of ruin, while the first floor with the sleepers attached, which caught in the foundation, was finally turned, roof like, over the entire mass.

Mr. WARREN, with two of the children, remained in the cellar inclosure, without injury; Mrs. WARREN was found on the ground about ten feet from the cellar door, almost entirely stripped of her clothing, and so severely injured about her neck and body that she died within an hour after the calamity, although entirely conscious; her infant was found near by and almost entirely free from injury, yet entirely destitute of clothing; a little boy who was following his mother to the cellar is now lying unconscious from the wounds he received in the common wreck. His recovery is very doubtful; an older girl escaped without any injury. The dwelling was two stories and substantially built. In the rear of it was a barn, distant about five rods, which was literally shivered into splinters.

Next in the due southeasterly line of its course it uprooted several large trees, scattered the fences, crossed the road, and demolished a large barn belonging to Mr.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Farmers' Club.

The meeting of the Farmers' Club, on Tuesday, was very well attended, with the President in the chair. On the table was a splendid strawberry plant in full bearing, with a number of berries of mammouth size, one of which measured four and a half inches in circumference. The President read some extracts concerning

MUSHROOMS.

The cultivation of mushrooms in France is chiefly in the environs of Paris and the larger cities. Prejudices exist against their free use as an aliment, owing to frequent accidents. Their substance is highly azotized. In boiling they exhibit all the character and smell of boiling ozmazome in meat. They can only be eaten like animal food, moderately, and rapidly putrify. All danger disappears when they are cultivated artificially in beds,—no unwholesome mushrooms will grow in that manner.

PLOWING.

The subject of the proper time for plowing and planting different soils was discussed at considerable length. One member who had considerable experiences stated that heavy soils are too generally injured by early plowing, and no soil ought to be disturbed until it is in a proper condition after the usual heavy Spring rains. He said that some soils may be plowed and planted even in February, with success, but that, as a general rule, a much later period would be preferable.

PLANTING CORN.

The President made some statements in regard to the best time for planting corn, considered in connection with the final plowing of the soil, based upon his own experience. He said, after numerous trials, extending over a number of years, he had obtained the best results from planting on the day, or not later than the day after the ground was plowed, and that his practice now is to plow his land only as fast as he plants it. He said the soil undergoes a chemical change very rapidly after a fresh plowing.

STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

The strawberry question was next taken in hand, and a very able statement in reference to the best kinds of soils, the proper treatment and the most prolific bearing varieties adapted to our climate, with the value of the crop per acre, under the most favorable circumstances.

Mr. ROBINSON followed Mr. PARDEE in reply to the question for how long a time in one season is it possible to grow strawberries. He said Mr. PEABODY, of Georgia, had succeeded in growing strawberries of excellent quality, during ten months of the year, after numerous experiments and unsuccessful trials. Mr. PEABODY's method, described by the speaker, is as follows: He selects sandy soils, with a very light vegetable surface covering, by the side of small streams, and sets out his plants in the usual way, watering them well every day. By this means fruit stocks are constantly being sent up from the root all through the season, showing every state of growth on the same root, from the bud to the ripe fruit. The only manure he uses (at the end of the season, in December,) is a slight covering of oak leaves, which are permitted to decay as the plant forces its way out in the Spring. This simple contrivance prevents the growth of weeds and of leaf stocks on the plant, there usually being not more than one twelfth part of leaf stems as compared with the fruit.

Mr. PARDEE corroborated Mr. ROBINSON's statement, and said that a gentleman, Mr. HENRY LAWRENCE, of the third municipality of New-Orleans, was in the habit of supplying strawberries to that market for ten months in the year.

It was stated that, in Paris, the strawberry was supplied to the markets during the entire year, in considerable quantities, and the seed of ripe strawberries may be planted immediately after the ripening of the fruit, and vigorous plants grow from it in the same season, without the necessity of a Winter freezing—contrary to the common belief.

It was stated that three hundred bushels of strawberries had been raised from a single acre, and that ordinary strawberries, in the season, average at least twelve cents a quart, while the finer qualities range from twenty-five cents to fifty cents a quart, and usually one-third of the crop are of the superior qualities.

AMERICAN THREAD.

Mr. ROBINSON introduced Mr. MOULTON, the agent of an American Thread Manufacturing Company, at Willimantic, Conn., and exhibited a large number of specimens of American spool cotton thread, which he said he had himself tested with the greatest care. He had the testimony, also, of Messrs. DOUGLAS & SHERWOOD, who had for some time used this thread on over one hundred and fifty sewing machines, in their shirt manufactory, with success, finding it invariably even, and, at least, one third stronger than the imported threads. He also said that various intelligent ladies of his acquaintance had, at his request, tested the thread, and there was but one voice in relation to its superiority.

Members took specimens away with them for trial, and the President requested complete samples of all the numbers to be submitted to a test under his own eye, with a view to a proper estimate upon its merits, a report of which will be rendered at a future meeting of the Club. Mr. MOULTON stated, at the request of the President, that the Company had made many experiments in machinery and modes of manipulation, and that they had finally attained a very complete success over the practical difficulties which have hitherto proved insuperable obstacles in the way of thread manufacture in this country. He said this thread was laid and finished by a process patented by the Company, which gave a gloss like silk, and obviated the necessity for oiling wax, and that the thread was used very largely instead of silk.

In reply to a question from the President in regard to cost, Mr. MOULTON said it was not greater than the cost of the best imported spool cottons. Only the best qualities of New Orleans and Sea Island cottons, worth on an average fifty cents a pound, are used in the manufacture.

The subject for the next meeting was announced by Judge MEIGS to be the "Natural History of the Amonia from Arom and its influence upon the commercial value of manures."

GEORGE W. MORTON, City Inspector.

THE NEW-YORK STATE INEBRIATE ASYLUM.—The Board of Trustees of this Institution held their second meetiog (according to adjournment) in the City of New-York, June 17. A quorum being present the meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. BENJAMIN F. BUTLER. The minutes of the first meeting were read and approved. The Chairman of the Committee on By-laws submitted his report, which was read, approved, and accepted.

The Board completed its organization by electing Hon. WM. T. MCCOUN, of Long Island, Vice-President; Hon. JOSIAH B. WILLIAMS, of Ithica, Second Vice-President; J. H. RANSOM, Esq., of New-York, Treasurer, and J. EDWARD TURNER, Corresponding Secretary.

The following gentlemen were elected a Committee on Finance: WM. E. DODGE, Esq, New-York; JOHN F. RATHBUN, Esq., Albany; Hon. CHARLES COOK, Havana; Hon. HENRY P. ALEXANDER, Little Falls, and J. EDWARD TURNER, New-York.

A Committee on Location was elected, comprising the following gentlemen: Hon. REUBEN H. WALWORTH, of Saratuga; Hon. WASHINGTON HUNT, Lockport; Hon. RANSOM BALCOM, Binghampton; Hon. EDWARD A. LAMBERT, Brooklyn, and J. EDWARD TURNER, New-York.

The Committee on Location acts under the following by-law:

"The Committee on Location shall select and report to the Board (subject to their approval) a site for the Asylum; and for this purpose may receive all proposals which may be made by any city, town, incorporation, or individuals, for such site; and may visit the same before any report be made to the Board of Trustees.

It is the intention of the Committee to visit various parts of the State during July and August, in order to make their report to the Board of Trustees at their meeting in September. Mr. N. A. PRINCE, No. 97 Chamberlain's, is Recording Secretary of the Institution.

DEATH OF GRAHAM, THE DEFORMED MAN.—JAMES GRAHAM, a well known cripple, who was admitted in Bellevue Hospital sometime since in the last stage of pulmonary consumption, died on the 15th of May. For many years back citizens have been accustomed to see him moving about in a little hand-car, which he set in motion at pleasure by means of a crank attached to the wheels. Till within a year previous to his death he had worked at the watchmaker's trade. He was very ingenious, and found no difficulty in making a respectable living. His physical deformity did not interfere with his intelligence. A few days before his admission to the Hospital, having crawled out into the street for exercise, he became so feeble that he was unable to make his way to his lodgings, and late in the evening entered a barber's shop in the Bowery, whence he was taken to a lodging-house down town, and finally to the Hospital. He was 44 years old at the time of his death, and unmarried.

YACHTING.—The annual race of the Hoboken Model Yacht Club will come off on Wednesday, June 24th. The Yachts will start from a stake-boat, anchored opposite the new Club-house, foot of Fourth-street, Hoboken. Prizes to consist of plate. This Club was organized only last September, and at present numbers 13 yachts and over 60 members. Some of the yachts have already distinguished themselves in these waters, while others are entirely new this season.

☞ There were in this port on Saturday, 753 vessels, including 29 steamers, 170 ships, 144 barks, 115 brigs and 295 schooners.

☞ The Pilot Commissioners, who are charged with enforcing the law to prevent deposits of rubbish in our harbor, and to prevent the piers becoming encumbered in any way, met on Wednesday, Captain RUSSELL STURGIS in the chair. They resolved not to proceed to execute the law. They propose, among other things, to contract for a dredging machine, to remove accumulations from the slips, and to take some action with a view to prevent deposits from the sewers. The Pilot Commissioners are faithful and energetic men, who will perform what they undertake in a thorough manner.

MARINE COURT.

Before Hon. Judge McCarthy.

CLAIM FOR GENERAL AVERAGE.

Charles M. Barlow vs. William H. Bird and John Nelson.—The Captain claims that in 1855 he was master and owner of the schooner Eulorado, plying between New York and New-Orleans and other Southern ports. That he applied to the defendants, who are ship-brokers in this city, to make a general average of the ship and cargo. That they did so, and he brings this action to recover a balance of $500 which he alleges they owe him. On the part of the defence it appeared that as the vessel was coming to this port she was cast near the Jersey shore, badly leaking, having lost her anchor, and the steamer Isaac P. Smith went to her relief and brought her to shore, and claimed $1,000 salvage; that suit was tried in the United States Court, and $350 and costs awarded to the libelants; that the defendants in this action employed counsel, and paid the judgment and all the expenses pertaining thereto. The defendants further insisted that they paid other expenses necessary for the care and protection of the vessel, amounting to $169 more than they had received from the insurance companies, and they claimed that the plaintiff had no interest in the vessel, but that it belonged to Thomas L. Ward, as whose agent they acted; and they never had heard that the plaintiff claimed any interest in her until within a short time past. The plaintiff produced documents to show that the agreement between him and Ward was to the effect that plaintiff should receive three-fifths of the net earnings for his services, &c., and Ward (who held a mortgage bill of sale on her) was to receive the remainder. The Court held that the testimony conclusively showed that the defendants acted in good faith as the agent of Ward, and had paid more than they had received; and further, that the plaintiff could not maintain this suit without joining Ward as a party in any event, and that it was questionable whether as the money was paid on Ward's order the suit should not be as against him if he (plaintiff) was entitled to bring it.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.—JUNE 20.

Before Justices Osborne and Brownell.

The Court-room was crowded, as usual, with the friends of the prisoners, witnesses, and those whom curiosity had brought there. The Judges took their seats at 9 A. M., and the Clerk called

"Mary Pew to the Bar." She was an exceedingly pure-blooded descendant of Ham, and had stolen a tin wash kettle from Eliza Jackson, of equally ebon complexion. The gist of the complainant's story is, that Mary, taking advantage of the owner's temporary absence from home, "took de kettle and run." She was caught with it in her possession.

Judge Osborne—Well, Mary, what have you got to say for yourself?

Prisoner—I was agoin' down de street and I met anoder woman wid de kettle, and she asked me to hold it.

Judge—Who was the wuman?

Prisoner—Well, she couldn't come this morning.

Judge—She's guilty. Give her three months in the Penitentiary.

Louis Eberts had beaten Catharine, his wife. He appeared very sorry for what he had done, and Catharine asked the Judge to let him off. "He'll not do so any more, Judge," said she. The Judge told him he might go, and he went off sobbing, "I'll never do it again—as long as I'm alive I'll never do it again." It seems he was under the influence of liquor at the time he committed the offence.

Julia Shea, charged with petit larceny, was discharged, the witness failing to appear. Also, for the same reason, Michael Quinn, Ellen Cunningham and Charles Firsten, all complained of for assault and battery, were set at liberty without punishment. Firsten was complained of by Officer Clancy, of the Seventeenth Ward Municipal Police. "Policemen," remarked Judge OSBORNE, "almost invariably fail to appear after entering their complaints."

Samuel Johnson had complained of his wife Ann as an habitual drunkard, who neglected her family. He did not appear, and the Judge told the prisoner she might go. She looked as if she ought to be sentenced to the Inebriate Asylum for life.

Wm. Sickler, "an old Washington Market hummer," as Judge Conolly (not on the bench) told Judge OSBORNE, was a bloated looking specimen of the lowest class of dock thieves. He had stolen a barrel from a North River pier near Washington Market. He pleaded guilty, and said he was "in liquor" at the time, in extenuation of the offence.

Judge Osborne—Penitentiary for 3 months. That's right isn't it? (to Judge BROWNELL) You (to the prisoner) are one of those old Washington Market thieves who know just enough not to steal so much as will take your case out of the Special Sessions.

Thomas Smith was another old offender. He stole a meerschaum pipe (June 18) and thus secured for himself apartments in the Penitentiary for 2 months.

Catherine McGurl stole a shawl from Ann Easter, June 17. The complainant was walking in the street, and Kate tore her shawl off her shoulders and ran away with it. The Judge asked the prisoner what she had to say.

Prisoner—I never did it.

Judge—You're an old acquaintance in this Court. I guess we'll give you 4 months in the Penitentiary.

Patrick Mulligan pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing three boats, worth $4, June 18

Judge Osborne—How old are you?

Prisoner—Twenty-four.

Judge—You have the reputation of being an old thief. What's your excuse this time?

Prisoner—I didn't mean to, your Honor.

Counsel—He couldn't help it.

He was sent up for four months.

Elizabeth Schmidt, an old offender, stole some wearing apparel, worth $2, from Ellen Rowe, June 17. The witness did not appear. "It's too bad to let her go," said Judge OSBORNE. "She has been here three times before. Let her go back till Tuesday." The complainant afterwards came into Court, and substantiated the charge, and Elizabeth was sent to the Penitentiary for four months.

Joseph Smith, a little boy, stole a pair of gaiters from William H. Ingraham, No. 304 Second-street, June 17

Judge Osborne—Have you got any parents?

Prisoner—Yes.

Judge—Have they been to see you since you've been in jail?

Prisoner—Yes.

Judge—He has a good countenance; let inquiries be made about him, and meantime we'll remand him.

Frederick Stahl and John Switzer were complained of by John D. Block, No. 9 Jacob-street. Mr. Block was away from home, and the prisoners came to his leather store, June 18, and while Stahl, who was rather good looking, was talking to Mrs. Block, his confederate ran off with 5 sides of kip leather. They were caught with it in their possession before they had gone far. Sentenced to the Penitentiary four months each.

Michael Curry, a shoemaker, slapped Owen Murphy in the face, June 11. Both parties resided at No. 334 Greenwich street. The Prisoner had been charged with a similar offence before Judge Conolly in the Police Court, and judgment suspended, "But," said the witness, "he would not leave off abusing me. There's a grass plot in front of the house—I'll tell you the whole story."

Judge Osborne—No you needn't; let the horticultural part go. What did he do to you?

Witness—He struck me with one hand, and held an awl in the other.

Judge—He was a shoemaker by trade, wasn't he? We find him guilty and suspend sentence. It's a very frivolous matter at best.

The complainant began to expostulate.

Judge—The sentence is only suspended; we cannot hang a man because you want him hanged.

Wm. Rooms was charged with throwing Johanna Colman down, beating and kicking her at No. 136 Church-street, June 16. The witness did not appear.

Johnny Lyng (the well-known) preferred a charge against a German named Auguste Spager. It was alleged that the prisoner, driving a lager-bier wagon, June 9, ran into the light wagon of the complainant purposely and damaged it to the amount of $30. The carriage was worth $175. The case was postponed till Tuesday.

Christian Gran, a tall good looking German, resides at No. 229 William street. He split open the door of John Biggler's room in the same house, June 5, and, the complainant said, assaulted and threatened to kill him. It seemed both parties were to blame. The difficulty arose from the women quarreling.

Judge Osborne—Discharge this complaint as frivolous. If the complainant is afraid of his life let him go before a Police Magistrate and state the circumstances, and probably they will both be bound over to keep the peace.

Several cases were here adjourned till Tuesday.

Thomas Butler failed to appear against James McGee, charged by him with assault and battery, and he was discharged.

Michael Rics and Michael Gillins were accused by Charles Katsenshumeckaseirner, (as nearly as we could make it out,) with blacking his eye and choking him at No. 55 Rose-street, June 12. The Clerk, with some difficulty called the complainant's name. He did not appear and the Clerk was about to call him again, "Discharge the prisoners," said Judge Osborne, "such a name as that ought not to be called but once."

John Lynch assaulted Henry Steimke in a public house May 15. They had a dispute about $5, and the prisoner took the method of balancing accounts. The Judge thought it was not an aggravated case, and found Lynch guilty, but suspended sentence.

John Grandon, a little boy, said John Harley, another little boy, took three shillings out of his drawer at No. 126 Cherry-street. The prisoner said he was only skylarking, and the prosecutor acknowledged that he put the money right back. "Pah!" said the Judge, "What did you bring the complaint for? Let him go."

John Geyer and James Andrews were charged, in separate complaints, with assault and battery on two men named Eddington and Hirsch. The latter were going through Fourth-street, one Sunday evening, over a year ago, with some ladies and children, and a boy in the street struck one of the children with a paving stone. Hirsch took hold of the boy and threatened to beve him arrested, when Geyer and Andrews came across the street, asked what they were doing to the boy, and assaulted them. The occurrence took place between Avenues A and B, May 26, 1856. They were both found guilty, sentence suspended as against Geyer, and Andrews fined $10.

William Haskins and Thomas Lyons are private watchmen. On Monday, at 6 A. M., at No 276 Fulton-avenue, Brooklyn, the prisoner assaulted Lyons, who is an old man, and injured him severely. His face was bruised in a terrible manner, and he showed a bunch of gray hair, which had been pulled out of his head in the fracas. It was difficult to ascertain which was the most to blame, but the Judges finally sentenced Haskine to 10 days' imprisonment, with a fine of $25. They afterwards changed it to $50 fine, without the imprisonment.

Margaret Woolf, fifteen years old, was complained of by her mother for striking her. The testimony of the old lady was elicited with difficulty. "She had been living out and I was bringing her home."

Judge—Well, go on.

Witness—We were going home.

Judge—Ah, come to the point.

Witness—We were going along the street.

Judge—Did she strike you?

Witness—Yes.

Judge—Well, that's enough.

Margaret, who was not ill favored or ferocious-looking, cried a good deal.

"If you'll please to let me go home I'll never do it again."

Judge—Well, go home, and never strike your mother again.

John Bush was fined $25 for assaulting a negro with a cart-rung.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 22, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We publish this morning a verbatim report of the speech of Gov. WALKER, of Kansas, delivered to the people of that Territory at Topeka, on Saturday, June the 6th. We also publish the address of Mr. ROBINSON to the Free State Legislature at Topeka on June 9th. Our special Kansas correspondence will be found interesting in other respects.

The State Treasurer of Ohio has announced that the July interest on the State debt will certainly be paid.

The great National Trial of reapers and mowers, has been appointed by the President of the United States Agricultural Society to take place on the 13th of next month, at Syracuse.

This certainly has been a most remarkable Summer thus far, as regards the weather and atmospheric phenomena. From every section of the country we receive accounts of tornadoes, whirlwinds, hail storms, heavy rains, and consequent freshets. Millions of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed by these causes within the present month of June.

A terrific hail-storm visited Washington and vicinity, yesterday afternoon, the hail-stones being of enormous size. Great damage was done to sky-lights and windows; and grain, vegetables, and shrubberries were beaten to the ground. Serious injury must have been done on the plantations in its track, which extended twelve miles in breadth.

We had another showery Sunday, yesterday, accompanied by thunder and lightning, but the weather was much warmer than it has been the past fortnight.

The new Commissioners dismissed forty, and appointed eleven men on Saturday, and ordered the Superintendent to distribute the force equally in the various precincts. By order of Mayor WOOD, the men in all the Wards were summoned again on Saturday to declare which Board they would recognize. In the Fourth Ward four men declared for the new. In all the other Wards the men declared for the old Board, which appointed nearly all of them within a few days. The wounded policemen are doing well. Four more of the Municipal Police surrendered their stars and caps last evening to Captain CRAFT, and reported for duty at the Metropolitan Station in Sixth-street.

General WALKER still holds his levees at the Lafarge House, where he is called upon by prominent politicians, invited to all sorts of entertainments, teased for his autograph, and his picture, and bored by all sorts of reporters.

A man named HOLLY HUBBARD attempted to murder his wife on Saturday at his residence, No. 249 Ninth-street, by cutting her throat with a razor. He inflicted some very dangerous wounds. Her recovery is regarded as doubtful. Mr. and Mrs. HUBBARD are Americans. They were formerly in good circumstances, but of late years have lived unhappily, and in poverty, in consequence of the husband's bad conduct. HUBBARD is in custody.

The June term of the Court of General Sessions closed on Saturday. A number of culprits were sentenced by the Recorder and City Judge, and in some cases judgment was suspended. HIRAM L. BARNES, who pleaded guilty to an attempt at arson in the fourth degree, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the City Prison.

Last evening, about 9 o'clock, a young man from this City was drowned at the new dock, New-York and Erie Railroad, Jersey City. His name we were unable to learn.

The work of street cleaning seems destined to meet with delay. The Mayor sent word on Friday last to Mr. VALENTINE, Clerk of the Common Council, that he would not sign the resolutions passed by both branches of the Common Council, authorizing the City Inspector to proceed with the cleaning of the streets forthwith. On Saturday the City Inspector sent a communication to the Counsel to the Corporation, asking advice as to the course proper for him to pursue in the premises. He had everything in readiness to enter upon the work of street cleaning to day.

There were only 334 deaths in the city last week. The number of the week previous amounted to 353. There were 22 deaths from scarlet fever, 5 from small pox, 3 from measles, and 14 resulted from violent causes. The city was never more healthy.

Officer QUINN, of the Sixth, was terribly beaten yesterday morning, in a house of ill-repute in Centre-street, while attempting to quell a disturbance. Two of his assailants are in custody.

Nearly a dozen arrests for assaults, with intent to kill, were made by the police of the lower Wards on Saturday.

The Case of Mayor Wood.

A part of the press persists in maintaining the monstrous fiction that the riots incited, during the past week, by Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, were exclusively owing to an attempt to serve warrants upon him illegally, by the hands of the Metropolitan Police, and to his forcible ejectment of Mr. D. D. CONOVER from the Street Commissioner's Office. The end in view, of the journals which propagate this falsehood, is to change the issue, upon which Mr. WOOD is to be tried by the Courts, from a personal to a political one, and thus to enlist in his favor the sympathies of all who are opposed to the State Administration, and to the laws recently passed by the Legislature, affecting this City. The public are not to be deceived by any such blurring and mutilating of the facts of the case. As far as we can learn, the vast majority of the members of the very party which elected Mayor WOOD to office, protest indignantly against the misstatements upon which such an unwarrantable interpretation of his conduct is founded. Whether Mr. DEVELIN or Mr. CONOVER were legally appointed Street Commissioner, had little, if anything, to do with last Tuesday's disturbance. The rival pretensions of the old and new Police in an equally small degree affect the matter. Whether Governor KING acted indiscreetly or otherwise in abiding by the decision of Mr. NICHOLAS HILL, has neither a direct nor an indirect bearing upon the question. The brutalities perpetrated by Mr. WOOD's orders, and for which he will be tried, were upon individuals acting under the legal authority of the Coroner, and of the Coroner only—an officer whom the Mayor himself acknowledges to have been fully competent to arrest him. The assault upon the persons whom Coroner PERRY "commanded," as the Statute directs, "to assist him in seizing upon" the delinquent WOOD, was deliberately and willfully committed, after the latter had received due warning in relation to the dangers to which he exposed himself by resistance.

It is the sworn testimony of the Coroner—whose common-law authority is even greater than that of the Sheriff—that, before summoning a posse comitatus, he first went, unaccompanied, to the Mayor's office; that he was met, at the railing within it, by twenty or more municipal policemen, who denied him admission to Mr. WOOD's presence; that he declared to them that he was the Coroner and came with a process of arrest; and that the Mayor, after he had been informed of his business, ordered that he, THE DEPONENT, SHOULD BE TURNED OUT OF THE ROOM. There is no getting over, or around, or behind this fact. Neither the Governor, nor the Metropolitan Police, nor the Coroner, had anything more to do with it than the Governor of Kansas, or the King of Siam. The necessary result was that the Coroner was compelled to fall back upon the law requiring him to "command every male inhabitant of the county, or as many as he should think proper," to aid him in fulfilling his duty. Sundry persons, belonging to the Metropolitan Police, were at hand, better adapted for service than a miscellaneous crowd; but they were only called upon, as has been stated by abundant witnesses, after the statute under which they were summoned had been read, and their office had been clearly defined.

The scandalous guilt of Mayor WOOD is as evident as the noonday. No better proof could be afforded that he is sensible of it, than this very effort which he is making, and which his friends are making, to change the issue between himself and the public. Not one out of ten of our citizens cares, per se, whether Mr. DEVELIN or Mr. CONOVER occupies the place of Street Commissioner. The TIMES has been compelled to censure the course of Gov. KING in some of his appointments, from the very outset. The choice he made of Police Commissioners was calculated to excite distrust and dissatisfaction, and would have tended to defeat the objects of a good, much more of an imperfect, law. The opinion of NICHOLAS HILL (a stanch Democrat) may, or may not, have been erroneous, in relation to the right of the Governor to appoint a successor to Mr. TAYLOR. In any case, the selection was little to our taste, and carried with it none of our sympathies. But these are individual opinions, and neither those held by us, nor by the Mayor, nor by the Governor, nor by any party, or segment of a party, can add to, or subtract from, the homage which every good citizen owes to the supremacy of the law, but especially those who have been elected to execute the law. And, therefore, for the Chief Executive Officer of a city like this to have failed in recognizing an officer like the Coroner, to have ordered him to be bullied and roughly handled, and to have driven away, with bloodshed, the posse which he, as a last resort, summoned to aid him, is an atrocity which cannot be exaggerated.

It is noteworthy that, although rivalry had for months existed between the respective partisans of the Metropolitan and Municipal Police forces—both professing to await the decision of the Court of Appeals—the first and only time that the claims of the former were interfered with by violence, was when an accidental opportunity offered of increasing Mr. WOOD's individual power—the possibility of doing so occurring, also, from the new charter, which the Mayor has almost as strenuously opposed as the Police Bill! On a score or more of previous occasions, the two conflicting elements have been brought within the probabilities of collision, but where the Mayor had no higher stake in view than the public good or the maintenance of the law. These, therefore, passed by without any appeal being made to brute force. The sudden death, however, of Mr. TAYLOR, and the unexpected presentation of himself by a State appointee, at the Street Commissioner's Office, touched the Mayor upon the only point where he has ever shown himself to be either politically consistent, or personally sensitive, viz.: his individual aggrandizement.

The "Governors" of Kansas.

We publish, to-day, an address, which may be fairly enough called the true Inaugural Address of Gov. WALKER to the people of Kansas, for the gubernatorial function, in a free country, is not a sham, but a reality. It is the actual exercise, by one man, of the faculty of control, for the use and benefit of his fellow-men. And a man, therefore, really inaugurates his office in a Territory situated as Kansas now is, when he honestly and directly meets the difficulties of his position, and accepts the actual responsibilities which it imposes.

We took occasion to find fault with the nominal Inaugural of the new Governor of Kansas, precisely because in that speech Governor WALKER wandered away not once, but several times, from the sharp and vital questions before him into general disquisitions upon subjects of political economy and of social philosophy, more apt to the discussions of the college lecture-room, or the scientific association, than to the halls of legislation, or the conferences of an outraged and indignant people with the functionary who was to restore them to peace, by commanding their confidence and their respect. It affords, therefore, the more satisfaction to commend to the attention of our readers the plain, practical, and altogether satisfactory language in which Governor WALKER addressed the people of Kansas at Topeka on the 6th of June.

Nothing could be more direct than the Governor's premises; nothing more sage than his counsels. He undertakes to exert his utmost influence in every legal direction to insure for the will of the majority in Kansas a fair hearing and an efficient action. He declares that if the Constitutional Convention shall not submit the result of its deliberations to the judgment of the people, he will join the people of Kansas in all legitimate efforts to repudiate that result. In fact, while Governor WALKER is very particularly careful to maintain the positions which, as an official of the Federal Government, it becomes him to maintain, he shows as warm and as manly a sympathy with the great democratic instincts of the people of Kansas, as is manifested by Governor ROBINSON, in his address to the Topeka Legislature on the 9th of June.

Those who will take the trouble to read both of these documents impartially and quietly will come, we are sure, to the conclusion that the cause of Freedom is not likely to receive any serious detriment in Kansas, while the people of the Territory are represented by so calm and resolute a will as that of Governor ROBINSON, and the disposition of the Federal Government by so just and pacific a temper as that of Governor WALKER.

OUR CITIZEN SOLDIERY.—The high commendations bestowed by the Boston press on the fine appearance of our Seventh Regiment, which visited them to participate in the Bunker Hill celebration, must be extremely gratifying to the officers and members of that regiment. The Bostonians, it seems, had never before seen such perfect military evolutions, and the Boston press has given vent to the admiration of the people in the most laudatory terms of praise, which will act as a stimulant to our other regiments to emulate the admirable drill of the Seventh.

Our New-Granadian Relations.

All hope of any proposition from New-Granada for a peaceful adjustment of pending difficulties with the United States, is dissipated by the last advices from that quarter. The new President, OSPINA,—though known to entertain kindly sentiments towards us, and believed to be personally solicitous for an arrangement satisfactory to our Government—evidently dares not brave the popular sentiment against any accommodation; so he remains entirely silent on the subject. The fact affords another indication of the imbecility of the New-Granadian Government, and its utter powerlessness to maintain its laws and treaty obligations against the ignorant passions of a semi-barbarous people: and it indicates as well the futility of all expectation that the fearful riots of last year, and the robbery and massacre of American citizens at Panama, will ever be atoned for in any degree until the power of the United States has made itself felt upon the Isthmus.

Under these circumstances, the course which our Government ought to pursue becomes a serious and important question. If our demand of indemnity for the past, and security for the future was untenable, self-respect and national duty require that we should retire from it frankly. If it was just when first presented, it is just now, and ought to be pressed with decisive firmness and vigor. We believe it was and is just,—and that every consideration of national honor and of duty to our citizens requires its enforcement. The weakness of New-Granada was a good reason why we should not proceed hastily to extremities; but it affords none for disgraceful retirement before the puerile insolence of a puny Republic. Had weakness and poverty been plead in bar of execution, we might have suspended judgment as an act of grace; but when our complaints are treated with mockery, our demands for redress with insult, and our propositions to aid the fulfilment of treaty stipulations are spurned with contempt, we become justly the scoff of other nations, and confess our pusillanimity, if we fail to teach the aggressor a lesson of our power and will to enforce every just demand.

It is an error to suppose that this controversy is one for the benefit of the Panama Railroad Company, or the California Steamship line. Not so. They happen to be the agencies through whose assistance our citizens just now seek to avail themselves of the privilege of crossing the Isthmus in passing to and from the Pacific Ocean. They thus became necessary but minor incidents in the pending discussion. The treaty between the United States and New Granada—made for the express purpose of inviting and guaranteeing protection to commerce and travel viâ the Panama route—has no reference to particular companies or enterprises. It guarantees, in general terms, protection of persons and property of either party resident or temporarily in the respective countries. The obligation is mutual. We are bound to respect and protect New-Granadian rights here, and New-Granada stipulates to protect our citizens and their property while in her dominions. In consideration of this and other stipulations, the United States agrees to guarantee the neutrality of the Isthmus—thus precluding itself for all time to come from acquisition in that quarter, and pledging itself to preserve the integrity of our sister Republic against the assaults of a foreign foe.

Any one whose mind recurs to the bloody scenes of April, 1856, at Panama, will realize the sort of protection which New-Granada affords. Many precious lives, and a large amount of property, were sacrificed to the brutal violence of a mob, composed in part of the troops of the Republic. Even women and innocent children fell before the fury of an ungovernable band of semi-savages; buildings were destroyed, and the personal property of the victims of this outrage was seized and appropriated with bandit audacity. For all this we have demanded indemnity,—and that demand is insolently rejected. Nay more,—no effort has been made for the recovery of the stolen property, and none for the punishment of the guilty. Thus a premium for fresh outrage is offered, of which brutality and cupidity will be likely to avail itself whenever our expensive squadrons at Aspinwall and Panama are withdrawn. Can we tamely submit to so flagrant a violation of the treaty guarantee of protection, and let the criminals go unwhipped of justice, without assuming the responsibility of future reënactments of the scenes of April? Can we retire from our just demands without lasting dishonor? It is impossible. Indemnity for the past is a debt due to the injured citizen, for which our Government has become sponsor, and which it must secure. There is no evading it—no mode of compromising it.

Under the protection and guarantees of a treaty into which New-Granada entered from motives of self-interest, American capital, energy and skill have constructed a railroad which has become the great highway of nations across the Isthmus. With the protection stipulated this great work is of inestimable value to its proprietors and to the world. Without it, it is comparatively valueless, because commerce and travel is necessarily checked or extinguished by anything which renders it insecure and uncertain. Without the treaty it never would have been constructed. American energy would have sought some other avenue of inter-oceanic communication, and American enterprise would have supplied it with the needed facilities. The question now is whether we shall give up the best possible means of communication with the Pacific, over the most favorable and practicable route yet discovered, because the Government of New-Granada—which invited and encouraged its establishment, and has reaped of its benefits—chooses to disregard its solemn and unalterable engagements?

In answer, we are met again by the assertion of New Granada's inability to restrain the turbulent spirits who sway affairs in the State of Panama. We admit the plea at once, and propose an easy means of relieving her from the expense of affording the protection that she is bound to give. We propose that, without abating one jot of her sovereignty, she shall so shape the government of the interoceanic route as to enable us to keep her outlaws in subjection at our own expense. Nay, more, for the privilege of thus relieving her from the trouble and expense of a duty which she confesses her political and pecuniary inability to discharge, we even offer to pay a sum more than sufficient to indemnify our citizens for the pecuniary losses to which New-Granadian imbecility subjected them in April, 1856.

This liberal arrangement—objectionable alone to the beggarly pride characteristic of decaying Princes—is rejected with scorn. To sum up—New-Granada's duty to protect the Isthmus transit is clear. She confesses herself unable to fulfill it,—and then refuses to avail herself of the means of doing so, which we place at her disposal. If there ever was a case in which the energetic exercise of every power of a government was demanded for the enforcement of treaty stipulations, the present is that case; and a fearful responsibility will rest upon the national administration should it hesitate in that course, and so peril the great interests which centre on the Panama route. The demands made through Messrs. MORSE and BOWLIN were just in every particular, so far as we understand them, and their rigid exaction at whatever needed cost, will be as triumphantly sustained by the American people as it is demanded by every consideration of equal justice and sound public policy.

The Chinese Mission.

The present week, it is hoped, will see Hon. WM. B. REED fairly upon his way toward the East, for the purpose of assuming the duties and responsibilities of United States Minister to China. The interests confided to his care, in this connection, are of no common order, and if he shall display the wisdom, prudence, and fidelity which the country expects, he may hope to accomplish for his country more than any diplomatic agent of the United States has secured during many years past. Our commerce with China is second only to that of England; and, in a few years, with the stimulus it will receive from a line of steamers between San Francisco and Shanghae, and in the facilities extended by the Panama Railroad, and through our California clippers, there is no reason why we should not surpass even Great Britain in the extent and value of our trade with the Celestials. There is little required by Chinamen for consumption that we do not produce, and they have scarcely anything to sell which we are not ready to purchase at all times. But John Bull got in ahead of us, and so acquired an advantage which he has hitherto maintained.

Events growing out of the internal dissensions among the Celestials have tended to open the heart of the Kingdom wider than ever before to foreign intercourse,—and it is believed that judicious negotiation may break down, to a great extent, the wall of exclusiveness which has hitherto prevented the outward development of Chinese resources and so of foreign commerce. If such a result can be brought about, the United States must inevitably be more benefited by it than any other nation. All we want is a fair field—equal opportunities with other nations, to attract and maintain a large proportion of the increasing trade. England foresees this,—and Mr. REED will find exercise for all his wisdom and industry to check-mate the efforts of our transatlantic cousins to secure the weather-gange of us. In dealing with the Celestials he will, of course, carefully avoid any committals to either party in the pending Revolution, and in his negotiations will unite decisive firmness in behalf of just demands, with a scrupulous regard for the rights of other parties, and all proper consideration for the customs, peculiarities and even whimsicalities of the Chinese if need be.

China can never be opened by gunpowder, for she is crowded with such a surplus of human beings that war, however sanguinary, makes comparatively little or no impression upon her population. Even pestilence, sweeping down its tens of thousands, proves a national blessing rather than a plague—a sort of weeding operation by which needed room is obtained for the growth and development of the survivors. Our diplomacy, consequently, must rely for success on peaceful measures alone; and when they fail there is no remedy. This single consideration presents at a glance the difficult and delicate character of the duties which Mr. REED has assumed to discharge. If he shall achieve success, his triumph will be better deserved and more enduring than any to which military chieftain ever aspired.

Municipal Rights of European Cities.

There have been various attempts made, since the commencement of this Police controversy, to back up the Mayor's cause by citing European cities, and particularly London, as examples of the respect paid, even by monarchical Governments, to municipal authority. No despotic Government, we are told, ever attempted so gross an outrage upon the rights and privileges of a chartered municipality as has been perpetrated upon the Mayor and Common Council of New-York, in taking out of their hands the appointment of Police Constables.

Paris and London are, we believe, the two principal capitals in Europe. As for Paris, the gens d'armerie are, as all the world knows, soldiers acting under the direct orders of the Préfet, and the Préfet is the servant of the Minister of the Interior, and the Minister of the Interior of His Imperial Majesty NAPOLEON III. The Sergens de ville, who are the servants of the Municipality, take about as much share in preserving order as the doorkeeper of the Common Council in maintaining the peace in New-York. Paris, however, is so completely in the hands of an unscrupulous despot, that, as we have already said, we do not think the illustration is of much value in determining the rights of the belligerents in the present contest. London furnishes a case much more nearly in point because it is the City whose Charter has furnished the model of those by which our own has been governed for two hundred years, and is one, moreover, which flourishes under a system of government and of law very nearly akin to our own. The only portion of London in which the municipal police are employed, is that portion known as the "city," containing about 100,000 inhabitants out of a total of 2,500,000. The whole of the remainder of that vast metropolis, with its huge suburbs, on both sides of the river, covering an area of about sixty square miles, in the map of which "the city" is little more than a dot, is subject to the jurisdiction of the Home Secretary, acting through the "Metropolitan Police Commissioners," who are his appointees, and responsible to him alone for official misconduct, he himself being of course responsible to Parliament. Moreover, all offenses committed on the Surrey side of the river, from Richmond down to Greenwich, and on the other side of Hampstead Hill to Temple Bar, and from Highgate to the Thames, are brought before magistrates appointed by the Home Secretary, and holding office during his pleasure.

THE CORPORATION LOTTERY AND WHO GOT THE PRIZES.—We have already given an account of the manner in which the reconciliation was effected between the Mayor and the Aldermen in the selection of candidates to fill the offices of Inspectors of Ships and Street Commissioner, and how the spoils of the Street Department were distributed by lottery among the high contracting powers. But we omitted to mention that the Mayor himself took a chance at the prizes with the Aldermen. The five highest prizes were drawn in the following order:

1. Alderman HARRIS.
2. Alderman MCCONKEY,
3. Alderman HEALY,
4. Alderman STEERS,
5. Mayor WOOD; and so on.

The Mayor was greatly disappointed, it is said, at not obtaining the 1st prize, the office of Collector of Assessments, which is quite as valuable, in a pecuniary point, as that of the Commissioner.

These are the current rumors in relation to this matter, and bear out the determination of the Mayor not to permit any outsiders to participate in the City spoils.

THE CITY ALL QUIET.—The assurance of some of our daily cotemporaries that the City is "all quiet," may, and probably will, mislead our out-of-town friends to think that it has been otherwise. The quiet of the City was not in the least disturbed, at least externally, except in the immediate neighborhood of the Mayor's office. The riotous proceedings were all enacted under the angust shadow of the wooden Justice who stands on the cupola of the City Hall; and the rioters were only the officers who are commissioned to preserve the peace. The City is as quiet as it has been, and, thanks to the copious showers with which we have been favored during the past fortnight, a good deal cleaner than we had any reason to expect it would be.

THE DIAMOND SMUGGLING.—The property seized on board the steamer Fulton, in the possession of the steward, has been valued at $15,000. It consists of gold jewelry, oriental pearls and precious stones. If forfeited to the Government, as it no doubt will be, the Court, as is customary, will order the distribution of the property according to law, which is as follows: The half goes into the United States Treasury, one quarter of the nett proceeds to the private informant, where there is one, and the balance is shared by the Collector, Naval Officer and Surveyor; but as the informant is generally required to sign an affidavit declaring that he has no interest whatever in the case before proceedings are instituted, he is sometimes confronted with this little statement upon a division of the spoils, and told that the law unfortunately makes no provision for him.

It is said this was actually done in a case which occurred not long since, and so the informant got nothing. In this case it is not impossible that an agreement exists between the three officers of the port to give the informant half of their share, by which means the informant does not appear, and is thus enabled to keep his eyes open for other cases.

A petition has been filed against the libelling of the steamer on the ground that her officers were not cognizant of the attempt to smuggle, and, as in other cases of the kind, she will no doubt be released by the Secretary unless he should think it necessary, as he said he intended at some time, to enforce strictly the penalty for violation of the Revenue laws.

THE STREETS—THE MAYOR DOES NOT APPROVE THE COMMON COUNCIL'S ACTION.—The two weeks' agreement for cleaning Broadway, between the storekeepers, on that thoroughfare, and Mr. SMITH, of the sweeping machines, expired last Saturday night. Though the weather was raining for eight days of the twelve, that street has been kept in good condition, and has been swept its whole length ten times. Heretofore it has been deemed impossible in rainy weather, to sweep to advantage, but the success of this experiment with the machines has proved the contrary. With water-tight carts to remove the dirt, the work can be more easily performed in wet weather, for the mud is then soft and easily swept off. The merchants, it is probable, in the absence of measures by the Corporation to keep Broadway clean, will renew their contract with Mr. SMITH.

Meanwhile the majority of the Wards have relapsed into their former deplorable condition.

Last week resolutions were adopted by both Boards of the Common Council authorizing the City Inspector to advertise immediately for proposals to clean the streets, and empowering him, until such contracts should be confirmed, to go on with the work himself. These resolutions Mayor Woon last Thursday returned to the Clerk of the Common Council without expressing his approval or disapproval of them.

Section 11 of the New Charter says:

"Every legislative act of the Common Council shall be by ordinance, act or resolution, which shall have passed the two Boards of Common Council, before it shall take effect shall be presented duly certified, to the Mayor of the City for his approval. If he approve, he shall sign it; if not, he shall return it within ten days thereafter with his objections, to the Board in which it originated.

Section thirteen also provides:

"If the Mayor shall not return the ordinance so presented to him within the time above limited for that purpose, it shall take effect in the same manner as if he had approved it."

Mr. MORTON says, as the Mayor has declined to act on the resolutions, he believes that he has no authority to commence work until the 28th Inst., when the ten days will have expired. To make all sure, however, he has twice written to the Corporation Counsel for his opinion, but has not yet received an answer. If Mr. BUSTEED should advise him to go on with the work, he promises immediately to proceed, and give the City a clean sweep.

CRUELTY ON SHIP-BOARD.—A colored sailor, badly wounded and bruised about the head and body, appeared yesterday morning before Justice CONNOLLY, and stated that he had been, that morning, beaten by the mate of the ship Wyoming, on board that vessel, then lying in the stream preparatory to her departure for Europe. The complainant stated that he was one of the crew of the Wyoming. After the vessel had dropped down the stream, all hands were called on deck by the mate and a quick response was made by all except himself (the complainant) who feeling very ill did not obey the summons as quickly as the mate expected. The mate grew angry, and putting upon his fingers a pair of brass knuckles, he attacked the colored man and beat him so cruelly that he was forced to leap overboard to escape further violence. He swam some distance when he was picked up and conveyed ashore. The mate, not yet satisfied, assailed several of the other men and beat them also.

A warrant for the mate's arrest was issued, but it was not served at the time of the closing of the Court.

PROPERTY OF THE LATE JOSEPH S. TAYLOR.—Application will be made in a few days for letters of administration in the matter of the estate of the late JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, deceased, late Street Commissioner, by his widow. It is understood that Mr. TAYLOR had no assets beyond the life insurance; in fact, his liabilities were large, some say to the extent of $50,000, a large portion of which is due his father, JOSEPH R. TAYLOR, Collector of Assessments, formerly Comptroller.

The life insurance policy was for $40,000,—one half in his own favor and the other for the benefit of his wife. He left a young child. Mrs. TAYLOR is in comfortable circumstances,—having a house and lot in eighty-eighth-street and other property in her own right, to the extent of $30,000 probably.

The $40,000 Life Insurance was distributed among the following offices: United States, $10,000; Mutual, $10,000; New-England, $10,000; Manhattan, $5,000; American Mutual, $5,000. Total, $40,000.

The Police—The Test Question again put in all the Wards by Mayor Wood's Orders, &c.

All was quiet Saturday and Sunday in police circles. The new Board met in White-street, Saturday morning, and dismissed forty men for insubordination, and made eleven appointments. A resolution was adopted directing the General Superintendent to distribute the forces equally in the several precincts.

On Monday 26 men of the Twenty-Second Ward, 22 in the Eighth Ward, and 17 in the Twelfth Ward, will be tried for insubordination.

Complaints have been entered against those of the force in the First, Sixteenth and Fourteenth Wards who have refused to recognize the new law.

The Board adjourned to Monday.

The old Board did not meet on Saturday.

On Saturday, at the sun-down roll-call, the entire Municipal Police were mustered in their respective Wards, in obedience to a general order issued by Mayor Woon, and required to signify their preference either for the old or new Police Commissioners. All the Wards were heard from. The men were unanimous for Mayor WOOD, except four in the Fourth Ward, who declared for the new Commissioners. Their names are Murphy, Denning, Folger and Oram. Many others of the old Police, it is expected, will, to-day, report themselves for duty at the office in White street.

Harrison Bellamy, a native of the United States, aged 33 years, and Municipal policeman, was among the list of persons arrested for intoxication in the Ninth Precinct on Saturday night. Sergeant Sebring alludes to the affair as follows, on his report to Deputy Carpenter: "Information was received this morning (given by A. M. C. Smith) by acting Sergeant Carpenter, that a man was lying in a beastly state of intoxication at the corner of Fifteenth-street and Seventh-avenue. Officer Clark was dispatched to the locality, where he found Bellamy lying upon his back. His star and club were in the possession of some citizens. His cap was lying upon the sidewalk, while his coat, which was closely buttoned to his throat, plainly showed that he belonged to Mayor Wood's force.

THE WOUNDED.

The men wounded at the late police collision are all doing well. Mr. Crofut bids fair to recover. Capt. Squires says on his return yesterday, "Officer Laffin is doing well—the bruises have mostly disappeared, and the stab wounds are healing."

Shields, which are to be worn instead of stars by the new force, will be delivered to the men to-day.

COMING OVER.

Four more of the old force declared last night for the new Police Commissioners,—gave up their stars and caps and reported for duty to Capt. Squires, at the new Station-house in Sixth street.

A MAN CUTS HIS WIFE'S THROAT WITH A RAZOR.—Notice was given at the Seventeenth Ward Municipal Station, about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, that a man named HOLLY HUBBARD, residing at No. 242 Ninth-street, had just cut his wife's throat with a razor, wounding her severely, and that she could not possibly long survive. Policemen CRAMER and JENNINGS were sent to the place designated, and there they found Mrs. HUBBARD lying on the floor of her room, weltering in blood. Her throat was cut in several places, and her breast and hands were gashed. She was able to speak, and in reply to questions put to her said, "'Twas my husband who did this." The husband, who had not left the premises, was thereupon taken in custody. His clothes and hands were besmeared with blood flown from the wounds which he had inflicted on his wife. A bloody razor, with which the assault had been committed, was lying near by.

Police Surgeon SHEPPARD was soon in attendance, and Coroner GAMBLE was notified that he might hold an ante mortem.

After her wounds had been dressed Mrs. HUBBARD revived considerably, and later in the afternoon was able to answer the questions asked her by the Coroner, in presence of a Jury summoned to attend. Mrs. HUBBARD's statement to the Coroner was as follows:

"Mary Elizabeth Hubbard, being duly sworn, says—I reside at No. 242 Ninth-street; Holly Hubbard, at whose hands I received my injuries, is my husband; we have been married fourteen years; I threatened to leave him several times on account of ill treatment, and his having diseased me; he was very intemperate, and used to go with other women; I separated from him about eighteen months ago; we had two children; he made fair promises to me of his reform, and we came together again the following May; that was about four months after our separation; I lived with him then until January last; he was no better than before; he gave me no support; I left him last January, and took the children with me; since then I lived in Williamsburg, in a situation as housekeeper, up to the 5th of May last; he agreed to bring back the children, and have his sister support the family if I would live with him; I agreed to this, and consequently we hired apartments in the house No. 242 Ninth-street; he did not bring back the children since; they are with his people in Greenwich, Conn.; I have supported him and myself by taking in washing, &c.; I was constantly asking him to go for the children; he agreed to go on Saturday last, a week ago; I provided him with money to enable him to do so; he left home, and returned the following Friday without the children, saying that his family would not permit him to bring the children if I did not consent to go to the country and live with him. He has been acting since his return as if he was continually under the influence of liquor. He said last evening that he would go to-day for the children, and he packed his trunk and set out to do so. I told him this morning if he did not bring back the children I would not live with him. He said, I guess you do not want me to live with you anyhow. He then proposed to me to sign a bill of mutual separation; and that he would take one of the children and give me the other. I said I would do so as quick as I got the child. He wanted me to go to Portchester to sign this agreement; I asked why it would not do for me to sign it here? He answered, that he had his own reasons for my going with him to Portchester. He left me after he had this conversation; was gone about two hours; when he returned I was ironing in the back room; there was no one present but myself; he came into the room and approached me, asking if his clothes were ready. I answered that they were, and asked him to take something to eat; he made no answer, but went towards the closet in the room; he then came to me and placed his arm around my neck; I thought he was going to caress me as he was going away; soon I found he was in the act of cutting my throat; I called for help and flung myself on the floor. He endeavored to raise me up, and I called out "he is killing me." Upon this, some gentlemen in the house came in and took him away from me; he was removed by some officer, and the doctor came and dressed my wounds. There was a razor in the closet which I had used for paring corns, and this was the instrument he used to inflict the wounds upon me; I did not see it in his hands, but saw it soon after."

When the statement had been concluded the Jury rendered a verdict that the wounds from which Mrs. MARY E. HUBBARD was suffering were inflicted by her husband, HOLLY HUBBARD. The accused was thereupon committed to the Tombs, by order of the Coroner.

Mrs. HUBBARD is about 30 years of age, and a native of Massachusetts. She was alive last evening, but her recovery was regarded as very doubtful.

The prisoner is a native of Connecticut. His people as well as those of his wife, are wealthy and respectable.

EXCURSION TRAINS ON HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.—This Company has made arrangements at all their stations between this City and Albany, to sell trip tickets, or rather tickets to and from New-York, good for the day upon which they are issued. These are sold at a reduction of more than one-third from the regular rates.

This arrangement will be a great benefit to our citizens, who are desirous of living on the river, and yet are under the necessity of doing business in the City, and affords satisfactory evidence of a desire, on the part of the Hudson River Company to adapt its rates of fare to the necessities of the traveling public.

☞ The Courrier des Etats Unis says of the rescue of PAROT, one of the defendants in the Extradition case: "The flight of PAROT places the Sheriff in an extremely embarrassing position; making him responsible to the Northern Company for the amount of the prisoner's bail—some $500,000. Besides the audacity of braving the law thus openly and assailing its officer, there is reason why special energy should be given to the pursuit of PAROT and the prosecution of his liberators."

☞ The steamships Atlantic, Vanderbilt and Glasgow left this port at noon Saturday, respectively for Liverpool, Havre and Glasgow. They carried out an aggregate of five hundred and twenty one passengers. The Atlantic and Vanderbilt took out $1,898,573 in specie—a greater sum than the total shipment during the month of June, 1856. The steamer Star of the West also sailed Saturday for Aspinwall. She carried out the semi-monthly mails for the Pacific and 470 passengers.

War Department Orders—Illness of Commodore Jones—Terrific Hail Storm, &c.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 21.

The War Department has issued orders to the Army, directing that when officers of the Army arrive at the seat of Government they will report at the office of the Adjutant and record their names; and during their sojourn in the city will wear either the undress costume prescribed in paragraph 1,574 of the general regulations, or the military frock coat with or without epaulettes, at their option; and that the inspection of military supplies reported as unserviceable required by paragraph 1,927 of the general regulations for the Army, will, unless otherwise ordered, be made by the commanding officers of posts. Fort Cascadee, Washington Territory, is announced as a double ration post, and will be considered as such from the date of its occupation.

Commodore THOMAS AP. CATESBY JONES, U. S. N., is lying dangerously ill of an affection of the heart. His life is despaired of.

Professor ANDERSON, the new Commissioner on Coinage, had an interview with Secretary CORB, today, and will soon leave for England. He is instructed under no circumstances to yield the decimal principle.

The surplus in the Treasury was reduced nearly half a million of dollars last week.

HENRY C. STEDMAN, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, a first-class —$1,200—clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Customs, vice JOSEPH DOWDELL, resigned.

A terrible thunder-storm at about 3 o'clock this afternoon passed over this city, and 10 or 10 minute, hailstones of an enormous size fell. Some of the stones weighed from five to six ounces. There was an immense destruction of skylights, windows of churches, public and private buildings and Government conservatories. Several private galleries of art were seriously damaged, trees were half stripped of their foliage, and grain, vegetables and shrubbery were beaten to the earth. There are some cases of horses and cows which were severely cut. The storm extended twelve miles in breadth, and its course was from the southwest to the northeast. No reports have been received from the plantations in this vicinity, but the crops are undoubtedly greatly injured, if not entirely ruined.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 17, 1857.

Again the Governorship of Utah goes begging, ex-Governor THOMAS, of Maryland, having respectfully declined it. Rumor assigns the appointment now to three or four other parties,—but Mr. CUMMINGS seems to be most likely to obtain it at this time. If offered to him new it is understood that he will accept. Since the President has decided definitely to send troops to Salt Lake to establish the supremacy of the law, there seems to be less anticipation of serious difficulty in effecting that object, which certainly ought make it easier to find a suitable man to fill the office of Governor. The tone of much prominent Mormons as are within reach, is materially modified within the last week or two. They scout the idea of any collision, put on the air of men aggrieved by suspicion, and declare that the troops will find they have nothing whatever to do when they reach their destination.

HOW YOUNG WILL YIELD.

This is significant of returning sense or of a crafty foresight of the futility of any attempt to maintain open rebellion against Federal authority. The presence of an armed force sufficient to protect the officers of the law in the execution of its forms, at least, will put an end to overt acts of rebellion. That it will establish justice in that Territory there is little hope;—and hence arises the most serious difficulty which the Administration finds in dealing with the Mormon question. Nothing can be clearer than that BRIGHAM YOUNG, while yielding to legal force, will take care, by suborning jurors as in the past, to use those forms themselves to work his will; while the ready obedience of his secret band of Danite assassins will find safe means of punishing and effectually suppressing any attempts to evade his commands.

SUBSTANTIAL REASONS FOR DECLINING OFFICE.

Major BEN MCCULLOCH who has been here for several days, was again strenuously urged by the President to undertake the Governorship. The Major, among other reasons for declining, suggested that he would inevitably suffer in public estimation if he should undertake to fulfil the duties of that position, for the reason that the people would expect him to string up BRIGHAM YOUNG at once, and thrash his adherents soundly—gentle pastimes for indulgence in which he was well satisfied the Mormons would give him no pretext when they found him backed by troops. If a peaceful policy was to be pursued—as he believed it must be necessarily—that Major thought it better that some man of whom the public have a less ferocious idea, and consequently less ferocious expectations, should be the instrument of its initiation and development at Salt Lake. The President was unwilling to let him off on this plea,—and then the Major fired his reserve,—informing the bachelor Executive that he couldn't go because he was intending to get married soon—a duty, the discharge of which he had neglected for forty years or more, until his day of grace had nearly expired. This argument brought Mr. BUCHANAN down. He at once acknowledged its invincibility, and bowed his acquiescence.

THE SHIP CANAL EXPEDITION.

The expedition ordered to survey the Atrato and Truando Rivers Ship Canal route across the Isthmus of Darien, will not set out before October next, when the season for operations there will be most favorable to the health of the party, and to dispatch in the fulfilment of the duty assigned them. Secretary TOUCEY manifests a good deal of interest in the work, and seems determined to carry out the order of Congress for the survey in the most liberal manner. Mr. KENNISH, of the Engineers who made the original private survey of this route, will be appointed as guide to the party,—but otherwise the survey will be conducted entirely by the U. S. officers detailed for that purpose. Mr. TOUCEY does not deem himself authorized to provide measures for making examinations of any other proposed ship canal route than this one to which Congress specially directed his attention.

PREPARATIONS FOR JOINT SURVEY.

Mr. KELLY, President of the Atrato Ship Canal Company, has been anxious for a general survey of the Isthmus, for the purpose of ascertaining where the best route for a canal lies, and during his recent sojourn abroad had obtained assurances from both the British and French Governments that they would cheerfully respond to an invitation from the Government of the United States to unite in a joint survey of that character. It is unfortunate that so desirable an arrangement should fail of consummation; but the interest awakened by the Atrato Survey may lead Congress next Winter to provide for an extension of its search after information on this important subject.

THE NEW GRANADIAN QUESTION.

The Administration is silent on New-Granadian affairs, evidently disposed to wait awhile to see what will turn up. Mr. BUCHANAN has a very conservative dread of positive collision, and will be glad to avoid it with New-Grenads, if possible. But it is difficult to see how he can hesitate to enforce the demand made through Commissioner MORRIS, unless, on behalf of the nation, he is ready to condemn the course of his predecessor in making those demands, and to frankly and publicly withdraw them. That he will thus outrage public sentiment, and humiliate the nation, is not to be anticipated. Take it altogether, and our position before the world with respect to this Isthmian imbroglio, is not calculated to achieve us honor. We stand insulted, mocked and submissive, before a power whose weakness is almost below contempt.

SAVAGE ASSAULT UPON A POLICEMAN.—Policeman JOHN J. QUINN, of the Sixth Ward, (one of the detailed officers at the Court of General Sessions) was terribly beaten on Saturday night in a house of ill-repute, at No. 114 Centre-street, which he entered for the purpose of quelling a disturbence. The moment he entered the place, the same young men who were present locked the door, and then attacked him violently. They knocked him down, kicked him, and beat him so badly about the head and face that his best friends could not recognize him. They then thrust him into the street, from which he made his way to the Station-house, only a few doors distant. Policemen were sent at once to the place where the assault had been committed, but the ruffians had fled. Two of them, FRANCIS COLTMAN and JOHN BURKE were arrested during the forenoon by Sergeant JOURDAN, who brought them before Justice CONNOLLY, at the Lower Police Court. They were fully identified by Mr. QUINN, who made the necessary affidavits against them, after which they were committed to the Tombs for trial.

ANOTHER BRUTAL ASSAULT.—A young woman, giving her name as EMMA JEWETT, and her residence No. 36 Lispenard-street, applied, yesterday morning, at the Lower Police Court, for a warrant for the arrest of JOHN MOORE, whom she charged with committing a felonious assault upon her. Her face was much blackened and bruised, and her head was covered with deep wounds, from which the blood yet oozed. He stated that she had been living with MOORE; that he was "her man," and she was "his woman;" that late on Saturday night she came home with another girl, named ISABEL DOTY, whom she invited to remain all night, because it rained so hard. Some words passed between the parties as to the arrangements that should be made for the accommodation of the visitor. MOORE made a remark which "his woman" resented, and she clapped him on the cheek. MOORE became enraged; he knocked her down with his fist, struck her in the face several times, and, not satisfied with this, seized a washbowl, with which he struck her on the head.

MOORE was arrested and locked up to answer.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—There were sixteen licenses granted on Saturday. The Board met, pursuant to adjournment, in the Common Pleas Court room, Part First, at 10 o'clock A. M. Present Commissioners HACKETT and HOLMES. Mr. KERR is still too unwell to attend the meetings of the Board.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Applications, presented by J. B. La Forge, for innkeeper's licences, were received from Peter H. Dodge, of McComb's Dam, One-hundred and fifty-fourth-street, Andrew Matthew, No. 380 Greenwich street; Albert Crook, No. 195 Washington street; Isaac Bagwell and William Ray, No. 13 Wall-street. Applications for storekeeper's licences were received from Albert T. Albro, No. 376 Bowery; A. Bininger & Co., Nos. 92 and 94 Liberty-street; Frederick S. Cozzens, No. 73 Warren-street; J. J. Drummond & Co., No. 85 Canal-street; Albro & Smith, No. 328 Bowery; Charles C. Durenbury, No. 756 Broadway; and Benjamin V. R. Corwin, No. 811 Broadway.

CHARLES A. STETSON, of the Astor House, also applied for an innkeeper's license.

It was resolved to grant licenses to the following persons as innkeepers on the payment by them of $30 each: Robert Earl, Peter Henry Dodge, Henry L. Crocker, Albert Crook, Andrew Matthew, Isaac Bagwell and William Ray; and to the following persons as storekeepers on payment of the same fee: Charles C Duenbury, Albert T. Albro, Benjamin V. R. Corwin, Albro & Smith, Bethuel Bunker, Theodore Burgoyne, A. Bininger & Co., Bininger & Dewitt, Frederick S. Cozzens, J. J. Drummond & Co.

It was resolved that the applications of HIRAM CRANSTON, of the New-York Hotel; CHARLES A. STETSON, of the Astor House; and HAWLEY D. CLAPP, of the Everett House, be held under further advisement.

The Board adjourned to meet again this morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of granting licenses. This is the third day that has been assigned to this business, and the Commissioners intend both to grant and receive applications for licenses daily hereafter until the term during which they are authorized to do so has expired.

Many of the storekeepers who were to be prosecuted by the Temperance Alliance, as stated in the TIMES on Saturday, applied during the day for licenses.

Coroners' Inquests.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A WEALTHY CUBAN.—Notice was given at the Coroner's office on Saturday afternoon that CYNARIOA CAZERO, a gentleman just arrived from Cuba, had died very suddenly that day at the New-York Hotel. Coroner GAMBLE proceeded to the place and held an inquest. Dr. E. ACOSTA testified that about 1 o'clock Saturday morning he was called to attend deceased, and on arriving soon after, found him dead. He then, assisted by Dr. ISAACS, embalmed the body, when it was shown that deceased was suffering from Bright's disease of the kidney, which caused congestion of the brain. The Jury rendered as their verdict, "Death from Congestion of the Brain." Mr. CAZERO was 60 years of age. He was one of the wealthiest men in Cuba. He arrived on Friday, in the Black Warrior, accompanied by his wife, three children and six servants.

DROWNED—The body of MICHAEL FITZGERALD, the watchman, who disappeared so mysteriously about two weeks since from the foot of Stanton-street, where he was employed in watching iron, was found, on Saturday, near the foot of Stanton-street. No marks of violence were found upon the body. Coroner GAMBLE held an inquest upon it. No evidence to show in what manner the deceased came into the river was offered. The Jury rendered a verdict: "That deceased came to his death by causes unknown,—supposed drowning." The deceased was a native of Ireland and aged 28 years.

KILLED BY FALLING FROM A WINDOW.—The same Coroner held an inquest, on Saturday, at No. 222 Stanton-street, on the body of FREDERICK BARTH, a child aged 2 years and 6 months, who came to its death by falling from a second-story window. The little fellow, while playing in the room, clambered upon a chair to the window and was precipitated to the sidewalk and was instantly killed. Verdict: "Fracture of the skull from falling out of a window."

Marine Matters.

A BARK BURNED AT SEA.

The Bark W. H. Brodie, Captain MOORE, left New York on the 30th May, for the West Indies, with an assorted cargo. They had light SW winds most of the time until June 12, weather fine and moderate; about 8:50 PM, discovered smoke coming through the cabin bulkhead, and in five minutes afterwards she blew up from powder, which was stowed in between decks under the afterhatch; had just time to get clear of the vessel with two boats, saving nothing whatever. Some of the crew were badly injured by the explosion, and afterwards by falling timber. The bark went down stern first, and afterwards came to the surface, and then fell over on her side; the most of her was gone from midships aft. Lay by the wreck through the night, and on the next morning was picked up by schooner Diadem, Captain WILLITT, from Bracos for New York, to whom for his kindness we feel grateful.

SCHOONER LYDIA GIBBS.—Captain WATSON, of schooner Lydia Gibbs, from Providence for Boston, which put into Norfolk 13th instant, after collision with schooner Storm Cloud, of Southport, writes that the accident took place during a severe thunder storm on the night of the 9th, and that both vessels were badly damaged. The cost of repairs on the Lydia Gibbs will amount to about $500.

Schooner B. W. Sanders, previously reported ashore near Squam Beach, was, on Friday evening, got off through the assistance of Messrs. HUALBUT & BINNEIT. She now lies at anchor on the outer bar, and a steamtug has been sent down to tow her to the City.

The Turf for 1857.

The Recent Freshets.

GREAT FLOOD AT DANSVILLE!—IMMENSE DAMAGE TO THE CANAL!

From the Rochester Union.

We are this morning favored with intelligence of the flood at the South referred to yesterday. The greatest amount of mischief was caused at Dansville, where the Canal has been nearly destroyed, or rendered useless for the season. The rain began to fall on Tuesday afternoon and continued until Thursday without intermission. The water poured from the mountains into the valleys of the Canasaraga and Mill Creeks, and these streams deluged the village of Dansville, sweeping before the flood immense quantities of lumber piled upon the docks. The water was upwards of a foot in depth in the main streets of Dansville.

The branch of the Genesee Valley Canal heads there, and the village is reached by a succession of locks. Three of these locks nearest the village were swept away, or partially destroyed. The aqueduct over the Canasaraga was left standing, but the canal at either end is gone. The damage to the canal and locks is so great that well informed parties doubt whether an attempt will be made to put it in order for navigation the present season. A messenger arrived here this morning for Canal Commissioner WHALLON to proceed to the spot and direct what shall be done. The public abroad will understand that the damage is not to the Genesee Valley Canal proper, but to the Dansville branch of the same.

The loss to the owners of lumber at Dansville must be heavy, as large quantities were piled there. It is said that all has been carried away by the flood and most of it is lodged at Cummingsville, a mile and a half below Dansville.

The Dansville Herald contains the following particulars:

"On Stony Brook, about three miles above this village, a man by the name of BURDICK, had his house, shop and barn swept away, and carried down stream last night; we have not learned the amount of his loss. D. WHITING, Esq., living in the same vicinity, had part of his house, nearly all his clothing and provisions, wagons, farming utensils, etc. taken by the resistless torrent.

"The dwelling-house of Mr. HOWLAND, near the California House, was nearly "swamped," and the contents considerably damaged, and we understand that Mr. H. was somewhat injured.

"Considerable damage has been done at L. SWEET & Co.'s works, at Commonsville, the water completely surrounding and entering their building—it being four feet deep in the moulding rooms.

"The Canal bank just above the aqueduct was completely destroyed. The creek looks in at Commonsville, and came out at the aqueduct, guttering the canal several feet below its bottom. Damage estimated at $5,000.

"The bridge over the Canasaraga at the foot of Osaian-street, was about two-thirds carried away, between five and six o'clock yesterday afternoon. The bridge near Porter's Mill was also swept off, and as far as we can learn, the bridges on these epiteful little streams were all destroyed.

"All the bridges on Losey Creek, between that place and Rogersville have also been swept away.

"From THOMAS FOGLE, driver of the Dansville and Geneseo stage, we learn some particulars of the state of affairs between here and Geneseo.

"The is scarcely a rod of fence left on some farms on the flats; houses have been carried away, with furniture, bedding, &c., the families barely escaped with their lives, some of them being rescued in boats. Trees three feet through, logs, dirt, and almost everything else obstruct the road.

"One thing strange about this storm is that at Rochester up to 5 P. M., yesterday, there had not fallen a drop of rain. Passengers on the afternoon train from that city, say there was no appearance of rain having fallen the other side of Conesus Center; between that place and Springwater Station the train passed through water four feet deep.

"The damage done by this freshet is estimated at $50,000 for this vicinity alone.

The Freshet—Lives Lost.

From the Binghampton Republican, 19th.

We learn that on Wednesday afternoon and evening last the Six-Mile Creek, at Ithaca, was so swelled by the incessant rains that Halsey's mill and dams were carried away, that the water rose on the main street three feet in half an hour, and 11 or 12 persons were drowned. The railroad track has been torn up for about 100 rods, and it will take a week to repair the track and bridges. The tannery belonging to Mr. STODDARD was also destroyed. A man climbed upon the top of a tree, which was torn down by the water, and he was hit by a log and carried down the stream some distance.

Destructive Tornado in Central Illinois.

PANA, (Christian Co.,) Sunday, June 14, 1857.

Our town was visited, yesterday afternoon, by the most terrific and destructive hail-storm ever known in Christian County. It has destroyed almost everything in its course. It has leveled twenty five houses in our village, and done serious damage to fifty others, nine among them. Many of the houses left standing are rendered worthless, being riven and shattered. Some of the houses have been taken up so clean, and precipitated from their foundations, that you could hardly tell where they had stood. Roofs were carried through the air as if they were straws. A number of new stores, just completed, were torn into fragments, and the wreck scattered about. The new Presbyterian Church was moved some distance, and partially destroyed. The roof of the Illinois Central freight depot was taken off; a large number of cars were hurled by the fury of the wind from the track. Quite a number of persons were wounded by timbers and pieces of buildings thrown through the air by the tornado, and I have just heard a report that a woman and three children were killed by a falling building. Others may not recover from their injuries.

The storm was accompanied with a deluge of rain and a heavy shower of hailstones. The air was dark when the awful tornado broke upon us. It was a terrific scene while it lasted. The elements howled and roared; buildings were dashed in the path of the storm; timbers, rails, boards, roofs and every movable article hurled through the air. Strong men stood aghast; women and children screamed with terror. Many were hurled headlong to the ground, and rolled forward by the merciless element. Some of the more ignorant people supposed the comet was about striking the earth, and was causing all the uproar and devastation. They were awfully frightened, believing as they firmly did that the last day had come.

Our pleasant town is in a sad plight—shattered, torn and destroyed. Many of our people are left wholly destitute, escaping from their dwellings with nothing but the few clothes upon their bodies, all their household furniture and other personal property having been swept away or destroyed by the atmospheric deluge. These poor people are left in a very suffering condition, and are proper objects for public benevolence.

The value of property destroyed is variously estimated at 50 to $100,000.

Public Lands—Official Regulations.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, June 4, 1857.

The following regulations have been prepared for the convenience of those who may have occasion to draw conveyances, make abstracts, or collect evidence of title to lands in cases where it may be the duty of this office to certify concerning the validity of title. A strict observance of them will greatly facilitate the examination, as well as tend to correct conclusions:

1. The deed from the vendor to the United States and their assigns must be acknowledged according to the laws of the State, District, or Territory where the land lies.

2. A plot or draft of the land should be furnished, showing the boundary lines, their courses and distances, and the adjoining owners, streets, rivers, or other waters.

3. Where the property proposed to be sold consists of more than one piece, the titles to which are derived through different persons, the dividing lines must be traced on the draft, and the seperate pieces distinctly marked.

4. It is necessary to have an accurate and full abstract of the titles, showing its transmission from the original source to the vendor, with each transfer noted in the proper order of time, the name of each grantor and grantee written at length, with dates showing when the several conveyences were executed, acknowledged and recorded. This abstract must note every fact on which the validity of the title depends, whether it be proved by matter of record, by deed, or en pais.

5. The abstract must be verified by being accompanied, either with the original documents it refers to, or else with copies legally authenticated.

6. The title papers must all be marked with numbers corresponding to the numbers under which they are arranged in the abstract.

7. When an estate in the land has passed by devise, the will and the probate must be shown, and if the devisee is named proof of his identity will be required.

8. Where it has descended from an intestate ancester to his heirs, satisfactory proof of the condition and number of the descendant's family must be given.

9. If the estate has passed by a judicial sale, or by a sale under the order of any court, or if it has been divided by proceedings in partition, the regularity of the sale or partition must be shown by a copy of the record.

10. The foreclosure of a mortgage can be shown only by an authentic copy of the proceedings had for that purpose.

11. When the wife of a grantor has not joined in a deed, some evidence must be given that he was unmarried at the date of the deed from her.

13. When a deed is executed by the heirs of a person within twenty-one years after his death, evidence will be required to show that they were of full age at the time of the grant.

14. When the title has passed through a corporate body, the charter must be produced, and the authority of the officer who granted away the estate must be shown.

15. When the estate has been conditional, it will be necessary to furnish clear proof that the conditions have been fulfilled or lawfully excused.

16. When the title depends on statute law, other than the public laws of the United States; upon a local law differing from the general rule of the common law; upon a public document, or upon history, the books relied on to establish it should be accurately referred to and the page noted.

17. Presumption arising from lapse of time will be allowed the weight given to them by the judicial tribunals of the State where the land lies. An apparent defect in an old deed need not be explained if the possession of the property has been according to such deed for thirty years or upwards.

18. A title offered to the United States will not be regarded as invalid on account of an outstanding title which has been barred by a legal limitation. But in all case where time is relied on to extinguish an outstanding title of the party must show by clear proof not only an adverse possession for the full period, but also that there are no persons who have rights that may be saved by exceptions to the statute.

19. Before sending the papers to this office for examination, they should be submitted to the attorney of the United States for the district in which the land lies. It will be his duty to certify an opinion on the whole title, and state particularly whether the local laws are correctly given, the papers properly authenticated, and the facts established by satisfactory proof. Very respectfully, J. S. BLACK.

Indian Hostilities on the Plains—An Emigrant Train Attacked and Destroyed—Four Men Killed, two Men and one Woman Wounded—The Indians in rear of Col. Sumner's Command.

From the St. Louis Republican, 16th inst.

We have just received a letter from Fort Riley, which we publish below, informing us that an emigrant train has been attacked and destroyed by the Cheyenne Indians, about 80 miles west of that post.

It may be recollected that Col. SUMNER left Fort Leavenworth some three or four weeks ago, with six companies of cavalry and two companies of infantry, for the purpose of making war upon the Cheyennes. He divided his force, sending one portion up the Arkansas, under command of Major SEDGWICK, and leading the other himself up the Platte. It would appear that the Indians have slipped down between these two columns, and commenced murdering and robbing in their rear.

The Cheyennes are amongst the boldest and most warlike Indians on our Western prairies, and if once fairly aroused, will be difficult to subdue. They number about 1,000 warriors, and will, doubtlessly, be joined by many young Sioux braves, with whom they are closely connected.

As there are a great many emigrants crossing the plains this season, it is very much to be feared that we shall soon hear of other catastrophes similar to that described below:

NEAR FORT RILEY, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

MR. EDITOR: Our quiet community has just been thrown into considerable excitement by the news that the Indians, supposed to be the Cheyennes, have attacked a small party of emigrants about 80 miles West of Fort Riley, and killed four men and wounded two men and one woman. One of the survivors, Mr. A. P. WEAVER, has reached this place, and makes the following statement:

"About eighty miles from the Post on the Republican fork of Kansse River, my party had just left camp on the morning of Saturday, the 6th of June, 1857, about 9 o'clock, A. M. About 150 Indians, mounted, charged on our train and surrounded it; they commenced firing on our men; they killed four men of our party. After their guns were discharged, the Indians retired to a creek close by, and continued their fire until we had left the wagons. Before we had got out of sight they had emptied the wagons; a part of them pursued us. Our party consisted of ten men, eight women, and ten children. I left the party coming down in this direction, with two men and one woman wounded, all on foot, and out of provisions. One of the four men killed was endeavoring to escape, but was overtaken, and the last that was seen of him the Indians were dragging him by a lariat.

The names of three of the men killed are S. D. WEAVER, M. LEWIS and SAM SMITH. The wounded are J. HOUSTON, J. SMITH, and a woman, name unknown. Capt. HENDRICKSON, with two companies of the 6th Infantry, who had just arrived here from Leavenworth, has gone out to bring in the survivors. As his command is on foot it will be impossible for him to pursue the Indians, who are all well mounted.

This may be looked upon as the commencement of the Cheyenne war. Col. SUMNER has gone out after this tribe; but one portion of his command is on the Arkansas, and the other on the Platte, two hundred miles apart, so that the Indians have a fine chance of slipping in between and getting in his rear, which, it appears, they have done. As the emigration crossing the plains this year is very large, there will be a great loss of life and property unless the Government promptly sends an additional mounted force in that direction. Instead of sending such an unnecessarily large number of troops to Utah, a portion should be sent to chastise the Indians who are murdering and robbing our citizens at our very doors.

Yours, &c., A. B."

The Fire at Cape May.

We have the following particulars of the recent destructive fire at Cape May:

"The Mansion House was an old and favorite hotel at this place. It was kept for many years by the owner, Mr. SMITH LUDLAM. At the time of the fire it was in possession of the Sheriff.

The "Kursaal" was a very long building, which was erected some 12 or 13 years ago by Mr. BAOLASKY, for dancing purposes, and as a place for public exhibitions, concerts, &c. It was handsomely finished upon the inside, and has been the scene of many pleasant entertainments.

A range of sleeping apartments ran along over the hall. They were connected with the Mansion House, and were used by the guests at that establishment in the height of the bathing season.

Both the Mansion House and the Kursaal were built entirely of wood. As there is no fire apparatus on the island, the flames had their own way, and the immense structures burned furiously until they were consumed. The light caused by the fire was seen at a great distance.

Congress Hall and the Ocean House were greatly endangered, but fortunately both escaped.

The Mansion House was the property of Mr. SMITH LUDLAM, who has kept it for a long time. The Kursaal belonged to Mr. BAOLASKY, of Philadelphia.

An insurance of $10,000 upon the Kursaal, expired on Wednesday.

Mormonism in Pennsylvania.

From the York Advocate.

A Mormonite named CHARLES BIRD, one of the followers of JOE SMITH, recruiting for wives for the saints in Utah, visited this place and advertised the community that he would deliver an address in the Market House on last Sunday evening. His audience was quite numerous; but when he commenced his address with an indiscriminate onslaught upon all Christians, he was interrupted by some of his auditors, and the meeting was dispersed by the Police, in order to prevent a row. It must require some assurance to come into a community protected from polygamy by statute laws, for the purpose of advocating the fitness and advantages of such a semi-barbarous state of society.

Insurance in Bonded Warehouses.

SIR: Over the signature of an "Old Merchant," in your paper of this date, there is proof in the old adage of "Straws show which way the wind blows," and if the "Old Merchant" is not the keeper of a storage store I am very much mistaken.

Can he suppose for a moment that the Insurance Companies can wilfully rush into danger by writing upon a general assortment of goods, some very good, and some very liable to spontaneous combustion, as is usually contained in storage stores. In the latter cotton is very extensively stored, and the recent large fires in the South prove conclusively the fact that it is subject to spontaneous combustion, and the only thing in its favor is of the large salvage being greater than any other article. Look at the succession of fires in THORNTON & MAJOR'S, No. 249 Water-street, which probably resulted from the warehouse being closed during Sunday, and no air to ventilate the same. The idea is as novel as it is new, that hemp is liable to spontaneous combustion; and allow me to ask how the oil is to get out of the cask and upon the hey were they in the same warehouse. The difference in the rates is not sufficient to compensate for the extra danger, and the storage stores should be increased to make the risks co-equal. As it is, there are some Insurance Companies who do not, nor will not, write upon merchandise in a storage store, which is a very good evidence of their experience, founded upon past results. Five cents' difference will never increase the profits much, and it is perfectly absurd to think that the Insurance Companies must submit to very heavy losses to accommodate the keepers of storage houses.

A great misunderstanding exists in regard to the recent fire in BAXTER'S store. The lock that was put upon it was obtained for the back doors of his bonded warehouse, and by (him and) the rascally storekeeper, who was discharged, used upon the storage store without permission, and Mr. BAXTER well knew that he had not executed the necessary bond and papers to make it a Bonded Warehouse. He further knew that the bonded goods in that store were there contrary to the rules and regulations of the Treasury Department for Custom-house officers.

The rules of the Department are so very strict upon the subject of bonded goods that the Insurance Companies write very largely upon them and then cannot supply the demand in many of them. Were this rigorous system removed the merchants would be sorely troubled to get insurance at any rate, and rates would naturally be advanced upon them; and unbounded thanks are due for the prompt and efficient manner in which the officers of the Government conduct this vast business. It is true, that there are several grades of Bonded Stores and the rates differ according to class.

AN OLD INSURER.

HER MAJESTY'S CONSUL FOR THE PORT OF NEW-YORK.—After many months' interregnum and an eternity of suspense to the numerous candidates for the office, we learned more than a week ago, through a non-official channel, that a successor to Mr. BARCLAY had been chosen from the long list. We should not, however, have made this information public, until the report was positively confirmed, had not an American contemporary announced the fact, and coupled with it some extremely superfluous remarks. We have reason to believe that Mr. FRANCIS LOUSADA will ere long be gazetted to this office.

It is scarcely necessary for us to say that we are deeply interested in the character and qualifications of the persons selected by our Government to fill the very responsible office of Consul, at the commercial and geographical metropolis of this country. And if the mere name of Mr. LOUSADA convey with it no direct guarantee for the efficient performance of this highly important duties to be intrusted to him, his antecedents lead us to suppose that he will be found perfectly qualified to satisfy our requirements. On the supposition therefore that it will interest our readers, we may state that Mr. LOUSADA is descended from a most respectable family in Jamaica; that his first services were rendered as precis writer to Lord CLARENDON, then Mr. VILLIERS and President of the Board of Trade, in 1846; that he was subsequently employed as Secretary to the Merchants' Seamen Fund Commission; that in 1853 he was appointed H. M. Consul at Riga; and transferred thence to Cuba, in 1855, as Arbitrator of the Mixed Commission at Havana, where he at present resides.—N. Y. Albion.

SYMPATHY AMONG THE NATIVES IN NICARAGUA FOR GENERAL WALKER.—We learn from Mr. HEWITT, who arrived from Greytown day before yesterday, on the Philadelphia, some interesting particulars, which we hasten to lay before our readers. He says that the arrival of the news of the capitulation of WALKER awakened no demonstration of rejoicing among the native population in Greytown, except on the part of a few individuals evidently under the influence of British interests. The number of Costa Ricans now at Greytown do not amount to over eighty men. They are in charge of the river boats. The posts along the whole of the San Juan River are under the occupancy of about three hundred and fifty Costa Ricans. The Nicaraguans, under the agency of some of their leaders, had demanded of them to evacuate their positions, but the request received no attention. A serious struggle was daily anticipated between the Chamorietas and the Leonese, and the war would have, undoubtedly, broken out before this time, were it not for the overawing presence of the Costa Ricans. The people of Nicaragua express their regrets at the turn which affairs have taken, and it is thought, by well informed persons, that but a short time will elapse before they recall General WALKER.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those boioing stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 15th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association

GEORGE L. SENEY, Cashier.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1857, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 20th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered. (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

BOSTON, June 1, 1857.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote per share, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 12 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000. TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

The New Harbor Masters.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—JUNE 20.

Spencer S. Benedict vs. Edward Holley.—Some four weeks ago, upon the affidavit of the plaintiff in this case, setting forth that the defendant, who was a Dock Master under the old régime, had hindered him in the discharge of his duties, an order of arrest was granted in the Marine Court. Since then the parties, we understand, have agreed upon the following case, to be submitted to the General Term of the Supreme Court without argument, in pursuance of section 372 of the code of procedure:

Facts to be submitted to the Supreme Court as agreed upon by the parties to action:

Spencer S. Benedict and others were before the — day of May, 1857, appointed Harbor Masters of New-York, and duly qualified and entered upon their duties as such on the 28th day of April, 1857; in the division of the labor into — districts, Benedict was assigned all that part of the City from Market-street, Pier No. 37, to the end of New-York City, which geographically included the wharf next mentioned.

That Pier No. 43 East River belongs to the City of New-York, and is by them leased to the present holder.

That Edward Holley was duly appointed Dock Master for the First Ward of New-York, which includes the Pier above mentioned.

That on the — day of May, 1857, said Spencer Benedict claimed the right to regulate and station vessels at said Pier No. 43 East River, as such Harbor Master directed the ship Harvest to be hauled into a berth at said pier, ordered others to accommodate him, and that said Holley prevented said vessel harboring into the pier and prevented her from being accommodated, he claiming the right to do so as such Dock Master.

The question submitted is whether under the laws of the City of New-York, the said Benedict has the power to regulate and station vessels as what are called Corporation Wharves, or whether the powers in the Dock Master.

Spencer C. Benedict vs. Edward Holley—City and County of New York, ex.—Charles Donohue, being duly sworn, says that he is counsel for Spencer C. Benedict; that he is acquainted with the facts set forth in the annexed submitted case, and that the same are true and as they really exist; that this controversy is real and actually existing between the parties hereto; that the proceedings are instituted in good faith, by the said parties, to determine their respective rights and duties and to settle the question as submitted, to avoid the expense of litigation.

Chas. Donohue for plaintiff; Richard Busteed for defendant.

A SINGULAR CASE.—An application has recently been made to the Surrogate of Brooklyn by HESTER E. MILLSTAUGH, to be appointed administratrix of the estate of her father, THOMAS NOAHS, in place of CATHARINE D. NORRIE, who represents herself as the wife of deceased. The difficulty arises in the fact that deceased had two wives—one the mother of the applicant, whom he abandoned, and took up with the second Mrs. NORRIE, who also claims to have been legally united to him. The only ques ion is as to the legitimacy of the applicant, and after a partial examination of the case, the Surrogate suggested that as the circumstances were so recent as to be easily proved, the parties make some mutual arrangement, and with this view the case was adjourned. There is only about $3,000 worth of property involved.

DROWNED.—A lad named BRADLEY Sr. JOHN STEELE, aged 11 years, and the only son of a widow living in Bridge-street near Johnson, was drowned while bathing at the foot of Clinton avenue on Saturday afternoon. Upon hearing of the accident, Officer JOSHUA EVANS hastened to the spot, but was too late to rescue him; he, however, dove down and brought up the lifeless body of the lad, which was lying upon the bottom ten feet from the dock. Coroner REDDING held an inquest, and the body was taken home to his mother.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Friday afternoon last, a young son of Mr. WALTERS, grocer, on North First, near Seventh street, Brooklyn, was run over by one of the Calvary Cemetery omnibuses, on North Second-street, and almost instantly killed. Coroner SNELL held an inquest, when a verdict of "Accidental death" was rendered.

A CONSTABLE IN THE JUG.—Early yesterday morning a posse of police, under the direction of the Mayor, made a descent upon a gambling den in the Ninth Ward of Brooklyn, and succeeded in captuning the keeper of the place and five other persons, one of whom was a Mr. LADLEY, elected to the office of Constable by the people of that Ward.

BRUTAL OUTRAGE.—A man named THOMAS BROWN was arrested in Flatlands, Saturday, on a warrant in which he is charged with attempting to perpetrate a gross outrage upon the person of a girl only nine years of age. The accused has been committed to the Kings County Jail, in Brooklyn, for examination.

BODY IDENTIFIED.—The body of a sailor, found a few days ago in the water at the foot of Bridge-street, Brooklyn, from papers found on the body, is supposed to be that of BENJAMIN P. GOODRICH, of Biddeford, Maine. Further particulars can be obtained by applying to Coroner REDDING, Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF EXCISE.—This Board has granted 199 licenses, and they have now on hand 334 applications not considered. They can hold but one more session.

☞ Mr. DENT, who keeps a saloon on High-street, Brooklyn, was arrested, yesterday, by the First-District Police, for selling liquor on Sunday.

MONDAY, June 22—A M.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New York, for the past week, was again characterized by a large export of Bullion, the steamers Vanderbilt for Havre, and the Atlantic for Liverpool, having carried out on Saturday $1,897,927, in addition to which $850,000 was forwarded to Boston for shipment, and $137,462 shipped to the West Indies. The Sub-Treasury balance was further reduced during the week $270,715, the balance on Saturday afternoon standing $11,472,589 against $11,749,304 at the close of the previous week. There was no income of Gold beyond the usual receipts through the interior exchanges, which continue to rule in favor of this city. The apparent difference growing out of the various Specie movements of the week, against the Bank reserve, is $2,008,674, but as the week probably opened with a reserve considerably above the declared average of the previous week ($11,974,879), and as the heaviest outgoings was on Saturday. The average to be made up this afternoon is not likely to prove a very unfavorable one. The export demand of the week upon which we are just entering will be nearly, if not quite balanced by the California packet of the 5th of June, now in her nineteenth day out. While the amount of the export of last week was enhanced by the continued ease in the Money Market, the movement itself, in connection with the previous transhipments, was not without its influence on the Foreign Exchanges, which fell on Friday to 109⅝ for leading bills on London. This declining tendency in Exchange and a gradual, though as yet not very marked inclination to dearer rates for money, are calculated to lessen the movement of Bullion, though it may not be sensibly checked until money gets to be worth 10@12 ₰ cent. in the open market instead of 7@9 as at present. Whether the higher rates are soon to rule, or not, will according to the prevailing opinion among the bankers in the Street, depend on the complexion of the financial news from Europe. Thus far there has been considerable disappointment, on both sides, at the slow progress of improvement in Paris and London, and the disposition among prudent business people in the Foreign Trade is, to move with caution, until a more decided change is felt. The Banking interest here have not hesitated to contribute the largest sums in Bullion that can be spared to the two markets on the other side, to bring about their desired relief, and nothing could speak louder, for the financial credit of the United States, than the fact that the ports of New-York and Boston will have shipped over eighteen millions in Bullion, in May and June, without disturbance to the market for Money, or lessening materially the accustomed reserve in the Banks.

The Import entries of the week were nearly all for Warehousing, to await the operation of the new Tariff next week. They amount to $1,214,796 including the Dry Goods table in our last paper against $1,490,727 the week ending 21st June last year. The accumulation in the Public Stores will be materially, though not rapidly relieved after the 1st July. The change will, of course, greatly add to the cash duties going into the Sub-Treasury. At the same time, that establishment will immediately disburse about $750,000 for the half-yearly interest on the Public Debt, and other large disbursements, which have been awaiting the commencement of the new fiscal year, will soon follow. The Exports of the week of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods were $1,954,958 against $1,926,407 the corresponding week last year. The direct Export of Specie, (as above mentioned,) was $2,055,380 against $525,034 same week direct last year.

The official Custom-House returns of the Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, make the Import Entries from the beginning of the current Treasury year, July 1, 1856, to the 1st June inst., amount to.....$204,740,000

The first figures in the above table represent the closing sales of the previous week. From this point there was a steady advance for several days to about the middle of the week, when the speculators against the market again secured the ascendancy, and kept it until the close on Saturday afternoon. The general market left off with some degree of steadiness on the cash sales of Reading, New-York Central and Erie. The extreme fluctuations of the week average full 3 ₰ cent. the list through. There was a free supply of Reading for transfer, and of this fact advantage was taken in pressing sales both for cash and on contract. Most of the other active Road Stocks continue scarce. The Cleveland and Toledo transfers were closed for the annual election. The dealings of the week were occasionally marked by considerable spirit, one of the leading operators of the Street, from having been a large seller for the decline, apparently turned to be a heavy buyer of several prominent stocks for the rise.

We are under obligations to Mr. JOSEPH G. MARTIN, of the Boston Stock Exchange, for a copy of his tabular compilation of the weekly condition of the New-York and Boston Banks for the past twelve months ending May 31. We avail of this convenient document to present the following:

At the recent election of the Terre Haute, Alton and St. Louis Railroad Company, the following persons were chosen Directors: Thomas Allen of St. Louis, Samuel Wade, Hiram Sandford, Thomas A. Marshall, S. W. Monlton, Calvin F. Hone and P. C. Huggins, of Illinois. Charles Craft of Indiana; John Stryker, D. B. St. John, Edwin C. Litchfield, and Robert Christie, Jr., of New-York, and James Barnes of Massachusetts. THOMAS ALLEN, Esq., of St. Louis, was elected President. Mr. ALLEN is a gentleman of intelligence and high position in St Louis, and was formerly President of the Pacific Railroad Company. The earnings of the road for the year ending 1st March last were $764,291 76, and for the first quarter of the current year the earnings have been as follows, compared with last year:

March.....	$39,956 23	$71,119 46
April.....	42,635 30	72,381 95
May.....	47,469 61	71,422 73
Total.....	$130,061 14	$214,924 14

At the same rate of increase for the year, writes a correspondent, "the total earnings would exceed $1,250,000 for the season ending 1st March next. The Directors have estimated $1,100,000 to $1,200,000, and there is every prospect that their estimate will be realized."

The Coal Trade.

From the Miner's Journal, June 20.

The quantity sent by Railroad this week is 46,614 02—by Canal 36,123 10—for the week 82,737 12 tons. Total by Railroad 867,560 12, against 949,272 00 tons. Total by Canal 857,370 01, against 308,816 05 tons to same period last year.

The shipments this week exceed those of last week only 544 tons, and fall short of the quantity sent for the corresponding week last year 11,473 tons.

The trade sums up for the week as follows:

	Week.	Total.	Inc.	Dec
Schuylkill Railroad...	46,614	867,601	—	81,774
Schuylkill Canal.....	36,124	357,370	—	10,956
Lehigh Canal.....	34,973	183 697	—	112,272
Lehigh Railroad.....	9,0 2	180,251	132,702	—
Del. and Hudson Co..	16,726	61,373	—	34 127
Penn. Coal Company.	28,464	79 548	—	14 993
Scranton.....	7,190	132,783	130,0 0	—
Last year.....	203,186		254,052

From the above it appears that we have lost, compared with the corresponding week last year, 25,549 tons, reducing the increase to only 8,650 tons, all of which, and more too, will be overcome the ensuing week. Last April the increase from these regions was about 200,000 tons.

Vessels are scarce at Port Richmond for the East, and some of the dealers in New-England are limiting freights even as low as $1 25, when they know that nothing short of $1 50 to $1 60 will more than pay expenses. We believe that some of the dealers prefer having a short supply of Coal in market, in order to reap enormous profits in the Winter season. The quantity of Coal which has reached Boston this season, is only about half as much as last year to same period, and there are orders for every ton of Coal at Port Richmond, but no vessels to carry it away, particularly to the East. Freights are now 35 cents a ton less than they were this time last year, and the freight from Pottsville to Philadelphia is 20 cents less, making 55 cents less than last year—yet the retail price of Coal in Boston is quoted the same as last year. Under these circumstances, the dealer that would limit freight at less than $1 50, or at less than the actual expenses of carrying, must have a very contracted soul, to say the least of it. For the last two years, the consumers have been taxed at least 50 cents a ton on the prices of Coal, by this skinning system of limiting freights, below what they ought to be in the Summer season, driving off the vessels into other channels of business, and subjecting the whole trade to derangement and embarrassment.

Business at Chicago.

From the Chicago Journal, June 18.

The week past, however croakers may grumble, has been an active one in the general business of the city. Never before were there so many proofs of the rapid growth and material progress of our city in every respect, as at present. Money is easier, the grain market is finding a healthy level, and speculation is impeded; the erection of new buildings stares at you at every block, the docks are crowded with merchandise, and in fact everything goes to prove that not only is business prosperous, but that business is conducted on a safe and paying basis, in spite of the gramblings of Eastern papers that are rapidly approaching a crisis here in Chicago. Of the fatal failures in the United States, only nine are in Chicago, and these so small that they were not known here until announced in New York.

The crops promise well in every part of the State, and the present weather is nothing rather detrimental to our crops, is favorable to the crops. Receipts have greatly increased, and the farmers are sending in grain rapidly, many of the roads being taxed to their utmost capacity.

The receipts for the week have been as follows:

Flour, bbls.....	9,112 Wheat, bus..... 181,853
Corn, bus.....	51,756 Oats, bus..... 21,727

The shipments for the same time are:

Corn, bus.....	437,777 Oats, bus..... 6,000

The general jobbing trade of the city has been very active. The stock of Dry Goods is large, and additions will be made by the first of next month. Great complaint exists in the foreign market of the small American demand. This fact is a very important one, and one at which every reflecting person will rejoice. With the cessation of the ridiculous demand for foreign luxuries will come an improved demand for home manufacture, and a reduction of the immense shipments of specie every month to foot foreign bills.

The Ohio Treasury Defalcation.

From the Ohio State Journal.

The announcement made by us on Saturday of the resignation of WM. H. GIBSON, Treasurer of State—the appointment by the Governor of A. P. STONE to fill the post, and the defalcation to the amount of nearly $550,000 ascertained to exist in the State Treasury, created, as may be supposed, an excitement in this City. We propose now to give a statement more in detail of the facts of the case.

The interest upon the State debt, which falls due on the 1st of July, had to be provided for, and the State Auditor, Mr. WRIGHT, had an interview on Wednesday with Mr. GIBSON in relation to it. Then it was that Mr. GIBSON first disclosed the existence of the deficit in the Treasury.

Mr. GIBSON stated to Mr. WRIGHT that when he came into office he found Mr. BERSLIN, his predecessor in the Treasury Office, to be a large defaulter, and that he was induced by representations made to him by BERSLIN to the effect, that if nothing was said in regard to the default, and if time was given him, that the whole deficit would be made up, and the State would not lose anything by his operations with the State funds. In an evil hour Mr. GIBSON agreed to the proposition made to him by Mr. BERSLIN, and from that time until the present he had been shouldering this vast load of debt. The whole amount of deficit in the Treasury, exclusive of the sum of $225,819 30, long since made public, at the time Mr. GIBSON entered upon his duties, was about $550,000. Mr. GIBSON further stated that not one dollar of the public funds had been taken by him, or used illegally by him since he had been in office, and that the entire default was the work of Mr. BERSLIN.

The Auditor of State in his report for 1856, page 7, says, "The books of this office show, on the 15th day of November, 1856, a balance in the Treasury of $579,517 57; of this I am informed by the Treasurer of State, there is $226,815 30 which has not been paid over into his hands." This amount was deposited in sums varying in amount as follows:

In the Commercial Bank of Toledo.....	$36,271 23
In the W. W. Cosses & Co., of Cincinnati....	47,788 00
In the City Bank of Cincinnati.....	79,611 95
In the With Daniel Beckel of Dayton.....	50,785 49

charged and retained by the late Treasurer as amount paid by him for exchange during the four years of his administration, make up the aggregate named by us above. Not any of this money, we believe, has ever been received into the Treasury. How much of it can be recovered from the depositaries or from Mr. BERSLIN is wholly uncertain. A large proportion of it is lost without doubt. The whole amount of the deficit under Mr. BERSLIN'S administration of the Treasury is about seven hundred and seventy five thousand dollars.

On the same day after making the disclosure, Mr. GIBSON left Columbus for Tiffin, from whence he did not return till late on Friday night. In the meantime, and at the earliest possible moment, Mr. WRIGHT communicated the state of affairs to the Governor. A dispatch was sent to the Attorney General at Cincinnati, requiring his presence, and early on Saturday morning the Governor and Fund Commissioners had an interview with Mr. GIBSON, the result of which was his resignation in the afternoon. In the meantime, the keys of the safes had been placed by Mr. GIBSON in the hands of the Governor, who retained them until he handed them over to Col. STONE, his successor, who was appointed immediately after the resignation, and proceeded at once to obtain the necessary sureties on his bond, required by law to be given in the sum of $250,000, with not less than six sureties. This, of course, with the execution of the bond with the necessary certificates of sufficiency and execution of the bond by the Treasurer and his sureties, was the work of some time. The Governor did not leave his office on Saturday evening until all was accomplished—the bond given, the oath taken, and the new Treasurer in his office.

This morning (Monday) Mr. STONE, on receiving the keys of the safes from the Governor, invited Mr. DENNISON and Mr. SPARROW, late Postmaster of Columbus, to be present at the opening of them, and to assist him in taking an inventory of everything found in the Treasury. Mr. DENNISON has also been appointed by the Governor, under the act of last Winter, to make, in conjunction with the Auditor of State or one of his clerks, the examination of the Treasury required by that act to be made once in three months. Mr. MORGAN, late Auditor of State, was invited by the Governor to act with Mr. DENNISON in making this examination, but being obliged by his engagements to decline, recommended the appointment of W. S. V. PRENTISS, who, we understood, has consented to act.

These, we believe, are all the facts that are yet fully known. Mr. BERSLIN is absent from the city on a visit to Nebraska. He was expected home on Saturday evening, but he did not come. Mr. GIBSON left the city on Saturday night for his home in Tiffin, but will be here again to-morrow.

Our city is filled with all sorts of rumors and surmises, growing out of the disclosures made on Saturday, but we believe that all is really known in regard to them, as we have above stated. The bond of Mr. GIBSON, which is on deposit in the office of the Secretary of State, is said to be one of the most substantial ever given to the State. We shall endeavor to acquaint our readers with all the facts in the case as they transpire.

Banks and Money at New-Orleans.

From the New Orleans Picayune, June 13.

The money market to-day has exhibited no change. Some negotiations were made both of long and short dated paper at previous rates, say 9¾ for the former, and 9@12 for the latter, mostly at the inside figures. The bank statement shows but trifling alterations and is rather favorable. The exact changes, as compared with last week are as follows:

Decrease in Short Loans.....	$256,175
Decrease in Specie.....	25,018
Decrease in Circulation.....	234,935
Increase in Deposits.....	126,639
Decrease in Exchange.....	187,538
Increase in amount due Distant Banks.....	28,433
Increase in Deposits proper.....	100,206

A considerable business was done in cotton to day, all for the continent, and not a bale on English account. A heavy purchase of coffee was made by two parties, amounting to 30,000 bags, partly on speculation and for export, as it is said to England. Unfavorable advices from Rio, in regard to crop, are assigned as the cause for this move.

Exchange is without alteration. Clear Sterling is selling at 109⅝@110¼, but scarcely anything under 110. Some Bill of Lading drafts were taken at 109. Francs are drooping, and sales have been made at the reduced rate of 5f. 15. We quote from 5f. 15@5f. 12½, but difficult to sell over 5f. 13¾. There are more offering. Sixty-day bills on New-York ¼@1⅛ ₰ cent. discount. Sight ½@⅝ ₰ cent. premium.

Prophecy as to the Decision of the Court of Appeals.

How Charley Develin was Appointed—His Honor's Plan for the Defeat and Capture of his Foes—Grand Dramatic Entertainments, &c., &c., &c.

Effects must be measured by their originality and force, and in proportion to the vasiness of imitation is the low estimate we form of the natural powers of the imitator. Although "a bird in the hand"—a callow fledgling perched on the ebony branches of the Tribune—sets itself up as being (proverbially) "worth two" of me, and with poisoned beak and venemous talons has attempted to pluck some of my most cherished plumes—the burden of his song running to the effect that my "crop has been stuffed," et hinc illæ lachrymæ, and that I have proved myself but a "very venal carrion crow after all."

Now, therefore, I admit that my crop has been stuffed, but not with notes of the description he insinuates—rather with private notes intended for the public ear and public good; and, as to being a "carrion crow," the Fledgling has vindicated me from that while blaming me for not having gorged upon the last remains of the dead and dying on the field of the Tammany fight. The rule holds good, as well in politics as religion, to let the dead bury the dead; and, in a letter to our friend Col. FULLER, (who will remember those noctes ambrosianæ at the New-York Hotel,) we expressly declared our determination "never to strike our epistolary beak into moribund matter of any kind." For further particulars, inquire of Mr. G. F. THOMSON, (THOMSON "without a P.,") who publicly declares that he, that duck of a man, Mr. MCINTIRE, and the "Weary DRAKE," their associate, will give recognizances in any amount for any statement vouched by your correspondent.

OUR BIRD EXPLAINS HIS SILENCE.

The book shortly to be published by the APPLETONS, entitled, Dealings of the firm of Fernando Wood & Co.; Men, Means and Measures, Banks, Bankers and Bamboozlements, will best explain my silence. This work—for which I beg to give a puff in advance—will be got up regardless of expense, and illustrated in every paragraph with the neatest and choicest "cuts." You will find it, I think, the most instructive, interesting and amusing book ever published (for modesty) on either side of the Atlantic; it will be a chart for the dangerous waters of municipal politics, without which no adventurous mariner can successfully attempt these perilous seas. By a process entirely our own, the politicians, big and little, who have had dealings, public or private, with the above firm will be turned inside out and held up to a newly-invented and partially-patented "Speaking Mirror," for the examination, dissection, amusement and judgment of the people of this City and the remainder of mankind. It will compass the entire political field, from the Presidential coalitions, through all the range of minor scoundrelism, down to the latest intrigue for the reelection of BILLY WILSON, in the first Aldermanic District, under the new Charter.

THE THROTTLEMENT OF A BIRD OF PREY.

The Fledgling before alluded to, with a bird-acity peculiarly its own, attempted at one fell swoop to carry off, without notice and without leave, the entire dramatic company—stars, stock actors, supes, fiddlers, stage properties, and machinery, embracing a vast amount of tragic, comic, and melo-dramatic talent, together with ground-and-lofty tumblers, tight-rope balancers, clowns, harlequins, pantaloons, equestrians, and muscle-men—which your correspondent had collected together at an enormous outlay of oyster-suppers, Champaigne dinners, and convivial engineering.

CAVEAT FILED AND RECLAMATION MADE.

In this emergency we have professionally consulted Mr. JOSIAH SUTHERLAND, who has called to his aid Judge DEAN and Hon. JOHN W. EDMONDS (who has, in his turn, called upon the ghosts of COKE and LYTTLETON,) and under the advice of this living talent and spirited assistance, we have made requisition on the official help of Marsha RYNDERS, filed a caveat, and now give legal notice to all the feathered and unfeathered bipeds of the universe that the following dramatic company are exclusively engaged, for the present and all future time, at this establishment, and this establishment only:

LEADING STARS.

AUGUSTUS SCHELL,	ISAAC V. FOWLER,
FERNANDO WOOD,	JAMES M. SMITH, JR.,
EDWIN CROSWELL,	ELIJAH F. PURDY,
JOHN C. MATHER,	DAN. E. SICKLES,
JOHN KELLY,	DAN. E. DELAVAN,
HORACE F. CLARK,	JOHN VAN BUREN.

These eminent actors will have the distinguished honor of appearing before the public on the boards of this Establishment at regular intervals, in all their well-known, highly popular and varied round of characters; and the exalted Histrio, whose name heads the list, is underlined for the 30th instant, when he will make his début in a wholly new and original character (the rôle from the pen of a distinguished author now in Washington,) entitled—"The Steam-Guillotine at work, or the Collector Cornered."

STOCK ACTORS AND SUPES OF OUR ESTABLISHMENT.

They will be assisted in their various representations by the powerful and versatile Stock Company, consisting of Mr. Wilson Small, (the world-renowned "Sancho Panza,") Mr. Michael Tuomey, (as the "Rumin Hero,") Mr. R. B. Conolly, (favorably known as "Slippery Dick,") Richard Busteed, (highly popular both as "Glorious" and "Dirty Dick,") Mr. Josiah Sutherland, (in his celebrated personations of "Uriah Heep" and "McSycophant,") Benjamin Wood, ("Brother Ben," in his new and irresistibly ludicrous character of "The Banker") Wm. J. Brisley, (Braudy-sour Brisley, as "Stiggins" the spiritual shepherd,) Mr. George F. Thomson, (as Bunsby—"wot a head!") Tom Byrnes, ("Working the rotary,") Weary D. Parsons, (as Captain Cuttle, "with a hook,") Anson Herrick, (as "the Deacon,") John Cochran, (the "Red-bearded Indian,") Isaac Townsend, (the "Retired," but not "Retiring politician,") Dan Linn, (everywhere known as "Robert McCaire,") Jim Irving, (the "muscleman,") Charley Develin, (the new favorite, who has recently made his first appearance with such éclat,) Peter B. Sweeny, (the "Devil on two Sticks,") Nelson J. Waterbury, ("Oily Gammon,") Mr. M. Ives, (in the universally misappreciated rôle of "The man who knows nothing about it, and can't help it,") John Y. Savage, Jr., (his Honor's "confidential friend,") John H. Chambers, ("Jingle,") Jack Brown, (the "Adjutant,") John Clancy, (as "Dazzle" and the "Leader,") Isaac Bell, Jr., (convulsing the world as "The Eminent Politician,") Charles H. Ring, (Pangloss—"I owe you one,") Mr. George H. Purser, (in his duality of characters "the Pirate and Puritan,") Tom Dunlap, (profound in politics and perspicuity.) Baldwin, (as the "Pale-face of the Pollywogs,") and Minor as ("Chief of the Braves.")

The foregoing large amount of available talent will be further assisted by Irish Tom, and Bill Powers, as "Whiskey Braves," together with the following Supes, Dancers, and Fiddlers: Charley May, Garry Striker, George Barnard, Aleck Ming, Billy Cook, (no relation to the "Captain,") Tom Carroll, Ase Reed, Barney Kelly, Tom Ferris, Fishy Ely, Chemung Smith, (with that "buffalo-robe,") Joe Cornell, Dug Taylor, with others too numerous to mention, however distinguished their merits.

PRODIGIOUS EQUESTRIAN FEAT IN PREPARATION.

The Manager has the further satisfaction to announce that he is negotiating engagements with Hon. HORACE F. CLARK, ELIJAH WARD, and WM. B. MACLAY,—one of whom will appear in the never-hitherto-successfully-performed grand and terrible equestrian feat of riding two horses going in opposite directions at one and the same moment!! This truly-wonderful Acrobat has long performed this prodigious feat in private, without any visible damage; and it must be needless to observe that the chief interest of this performance consists in the fearful danger which the rider encounters of being trampled under the hoofs of both steeds, and finding himself "nowhere" at the end of the race.

Having thus disposed of the Fledgling, we now address ourselves to business,—merely remarking, in parenthesis, that we are content to accept the account given by a "Bird in the Hand" of the fight in St. Tammany, and his muster-roll of "the killed and cold on the field of combat," as parts of a veracious history, not needing any particular reprehension or correction.

THINGS EXPLAINED AND POINTS REQUIRING FURTHER LIGHT.

Your regular reporters having so ably kept you posted on the progress of the late Police contest, resulting in civic insurrection—(a contest, let me add, which will be terminated within six hours after the appearance of this letter in your columns by a wonderfully unanimous decision of the Court of last resort AGAINST HIS HONOR—thus giving the coup de grâce to our municipal autocrat, already staggered by the "blow between the eyes" received from the "Reformers" in St. Tammany)—it only remains for us to supply the secret history of the cellar-caucuses, confederations, combinations, corruptions and wire pullings which lay behind the overt acts of the dethroned King of Manhattan and his associate conspirators.

CROWDING THE MOURNERS FOR THE STREET COMMISSIONER.

When the tidings had reached his Honor that the late Street Commissioner had ceased to live, a council of war was immediately held, at which were present Sancho Pauza SMALL, Brother Ben, BEN. FAIRCHILD, Mr. MICHAEL TUOMEY, JOSIAH SUTHERLAND, Judge RUSSELL and four others of the inner circle of boudsmen—whose names it would not be prudent to mention for obvious reasons. The first thing determined on was that his Honor, in order to keep the Bohemians at bay, should pretend a holy horror of the hunger which would fill the office before its late incumbent had received the last rites of the Church, and this was done in order to gain time for the discovery of an applicant whose moral and social stature would fulfill the requirements on which his Honor insisted. Mr. MICHAEL TUOMEY then presented a list of candidates for the vacancy, with some curious Arabic numerals opposite every name, and these numerals were preceded by a mysterious hieroglyph, purporting (in the tongue of the Egyptians) "Says he'll give."

Prominent on the list stood Mr. CHARLES H. RING, BEN FAIRCHILD himself, JOHN H. CHAMBERS, JOHN CLANCY, JOHN R. BRIGGS, (very heavy numerals,) WM. N. MCINTIRE, JOHN PETTIGREW, JAMES MURPHY, ("Boiler Jim,") JOHN D. MURPHY, of the Eighteenth, ("Bricks,") MCLEOD MURPHY (Navy Yard) and one other MURPHY, (just imported,) a third consin to "Glorious," and for whom said "Glorious," in his own classic phrase, offered "to pint up the dibs."

HIS HONOR DEVELOPS HIS PHILOSOPHY—HOW CHARLEY DEVELIN WAS APPOINTED.

When these names had been read with suitable comments, Mr. MICHAEL TUOMEY went back to the name of JOHN H. CHAMBERS, on which he dwelt with particular affection;—whereupon his Honor brought him up with a round turn, (waving his hand and pulling up his shirt collar, Henry-Clay-fashion,) saying in a highly Senatorial tone, and with his "muscular smile" in full development,—"No, MICHAEL, No! There's a philosophy about this thing which none of you can pretend to understand. The office of Street Commissioner, just at this juncture, is more important than any of you can comprehend. It is worth, with proper management," went on his Honor emphatically—(the two fore-fingers of his right hand being again in operation, as when he made that memorable boast that he could "twist Mr. BENNETT either this way or that, like a child or a straw,")—"It is worth, I say, with proper management" (and BEN FAIRCHILD showed his grinning teeth, while the paunch of Sancho Pauza shook like a bowl of jelly,) "at least one hundred thousand dollars in hard cash, to say nothing of the immense patronage—little inferior to the Custom-House itself—with bureaus, clerks, inspectors, deputies, contractors, laborers and jobs innumerable,—affording me, also, the opportunity of either promising or employing nearly all the force of Irish and German legionaries just in advance of the election. This is the best card in my hand, and must be played to the best advantage. You see, MICHAEL," continued His Honor, patting the perspiring Commissary-General of his Liquor Department on the head, "nearly all those on the list have rendered me very important political and personal services, and consider me very deeply in their debt. You will grant that, MICHAEL, will you not?" queried His Honor, persuasively.

"To be sure I will," blurted out the individual appealed to;—"and isn't that the very reason——"

"Stop—stop! Mr. TUOMEY," said his Honor (he had called him "Michael" previously). "I have no doubt that in your innocence you may think so: but if you knew a little more, MICHAEL, you would know that this is the very reason you should not! They would consider it mere payment of a debt, and wish to use the office for their own benefit. But the safest plan—my plan, MICHAEL—is never to pay a political debt, or any other debt, for that matter, so long as I can help it:—and when the obligation becomes too heavy to be longer borne, the true course is to quarrel with the man you owe all to, and destroy him by all means within your power."

Mr. MICHAEL TUOMEY stared agbast at this new and rather striking development of political economy—but, like a dumb dog, he opened not his mouth—while his Honor thus went on: "Now, MICHAEL, I want for this place a man who hasn't the slightest earthly claim, political, personal or otherwise; and then, you see, he and his office will be wholly within my power. But as to those you have named, MICHAEL, I can still feed them on promises of fat sinecures in the good time coming, when I myself shall have taken that celebrated 'backest of back seats.' You now know my wishes, gentlemen," added his Honor triumphantly, "and now go hunt for the proper man!"

The Council, having thereupon adjourned, reassembled in about a quarter of an hour, having caught CHARLEY DEVELIN, whom they unanimously recommended.

YOU CAN'T TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS.

Brother BEN saying it "was all right," CHARLEY DEVELIN was instantly agreed upon; but just then a knock sounded on the door, and the portentous visage of BILL BOWERS, big with unfathomable mysteries, was seen winking to Mr. MICH'L TUOMEY to come out—to whom he confided upon the landing place, with many a shrug, and finger shake, that the Democrats of the Board of Aldermen had held a secret meeting, and had resolved, nem. con., that they would confirm no man not appointed on their own recommendation. This reaching his Honor's Council, Surprise and Dismay flapped from their Condor wings "invisible woe" over the faces there assembled; and the countenance of Mr. JOSIAH SUTHERLAND in particular assumed that hazy film of morbific feebleness, which his Honor once so happily hit off by the remark that "SUTHERLAND in a fix, always reminded him of one who had swallowed a bad oyster." But his Honor, ever fruitful in chicanery, now came to the relief of his terror-stricken brood, and thus he spake, in his best imitation of the Sage of Ashland:

"Brother BEN," said he, "this case demands some 'policy.' It won't do to quarrel with the Aldermen, and I'll give you a plan by which we can bind them hand and foot. Let them suppose they are securing everything, while, in point of fact they will be cutting their own throats. We'll come a 'Georgia-lottery game' over them, Brother BEN, dividing the offices into prizes, and each taking an equal chance. Then, after the confirmation has been secured, we can settle, on our own terms, about the payment of the winners. DEVELIN will be completely within my power, as he can only be removed by me, or a two-thirds vote, which they haven't strength to accomplish; and then"—added his Honor, with another muscular and furtive smile, broadening on Brother BEN's face into an open grin—"then, Brother, we'll see about the paymeuts! We'll show them that men may pack cards without winning the game."

This was on the afternoon of last Saturday week, and the Aldermen were assembled in the Library, where his Honor attended, and, having made known his plan, superintended the "drawing" in person. Alderman HARRIS, as your admirable reporter discovered, drawing the first prize; and the others being distributed in the order you have already made public. [The point of this joke will not be fully realized until the winners "step up to the Captain's office for settlement;" and then ——!]

NEW MOVEMENTS IN CHINESE TACTICS.

It was next day (yesterday week) that the widely whispered of caucus was held at his Honor's town-house—not the Bloomingdale villa—where the plan of primary elections, since adopted by the Wilson Small Committee, was introduced, digested and passed out to the world in its present form. Here were assembled the same parties engaged in the Develin conference, with the omission of BEN. P. FAIRCHILD, who had an engagement on that day to see a certain fair child in Westchester, for whose welfare he has generously interested himself; but this loss was more than compensated by the additional deliberative strength of Captains MURRAY, of the First, LEONARD, of the Second, and WINES, of the Eighteenth, together with Deputy Sheriff ROLLINS, ASE REED, JOHN ZIPPER, of the Custom-House, and Deacon HERRICK, of the Atlas, all members of the sub-Committee from the Wilson-Small organization, to prepare a system of primary elections, for the perpetuation of His Honor's dynasty, and the prospective reward of SUTHERLAND, HERRICK, CHAMBERS, RING, MORANGE, and other "chiel of that kidney."

Here it was that his Honor unfolded the project, since obediently adopted, by which the Democratic Inspectors of Election, who will have to superintend officially the next General Election, could be directly interested in advance in the result of that contest over which they are to sit as judges—in fact, becoming partisans of his Honor, by being involved as directors in the enrollment of voters, and the formation of Ward Associations. His Honor, upon this occasion, also, developed his plan in a Sage-of-Ashland speech, which we have been so lucky as to obtain a report of, and which we shall have to divide into separate paragraphs, under headings appropriate to each.

HOW THE CHINESE SALVE MEDICINE IS EXPECTED TO WORK.

"Certain facetious gentlemen," commenced his Honor, "amused themselves highly, and, no doubt, afforded comfort to my enemies, by their highly-colored descriptions of what they termed the 'Chinese War,' in connection with the Tammany fight, and that infernal combination made by me with Mr. SCHELL for the subjugation and annihilation of the refractory Reformers. They designated me as Grand Mandarin, and all of you, my faithful friends and followers, as Coolies—a degraded East Indian caste, of whom you must most probably have heard a certain ship-master's grim joke.* But, I'll give them, by this new system of Primary Elections, under the direction of the already elected Inspectors, a dose of Chinese medicine that will make their finger-nails grow considerable, if not more, before they know it." [Capt. WINES here attempted a cheer at this allegorical mode of describing the powerless condition of inactivity which the Reformers would be reduced to.] "The Chinese, as you know, when assailed by an enemy, resort to poisons—of the bread, springs, and necessaries of life; and the elective franchise, as you will all admit, is just at this time the most important element of our political existence: so that if I can 'doctor' that, by getting the Inspectors mixed up in my political squabbles, so that they shall be bound to sink or swim with me—I think," and again that furtive, muscular smile, "my adversaries will have a nice time of it when they come to vote! Who ever heard, RUSSELL," and he winked at the City Ermine, "of a man losing his cause where the Judges were partisans of his own appointment and personally interested in the defendant's success?"

The City Judge faintly intimated an apprehension that the Inspectors (in his own classical phrase) could not "be rung into the arrangement;" but this was derisively pooh-poohed by the uniformed gentlemen present (who have strictly uniform ideas of political matters) and the proposition was at last unanimously carried—the City Ermine consoling itself with a cigar.

HIS HONOR'S DEFINITION OF THE COLLECTOR'S POSITION.

The proceedings were here slightly interrupted by Deacon HERRICK, who blurted out in his bluff way—"But how does SCHELL stand in the fight, and what can you reckon on him to do for you?"

His Honor scratched his head for a moment, bit his nails, and manifested unusual hesitation. "To be candid with you, gentlemen," he said—the allusion to candor being one of his Honor's very severest jokes—"I have found that SCHELL about the toughest bivalve I ever attempted to chaw up. It was no later than yesterday that, dining with him at his brother DICK'S, and broaching the subject of the Custom-House patronage, our new Collector expressed himself very much in the following manner: 'I have acquired my position,' said he, 'not as a matter of personal right, but as the representative or banker of the party whose sacrifices and struggles have made me what I am. I may consider myself the custodian of the political treasures accumulated by our National Democracy; and am bound to administer these funds as conscientiously as would the President of a Saving's Bank the funds intrusted to his honesty; and I could no more permit you to exercise that control over the patronage which you desire, than I could—were I President of a Bank—allow you to overdraw your account, as you did in the case of that North River Bank.' This allusion," went on his Honor, wincing, "was made with an appearance of facetiousness which forbid my taking notice of it; but, having professed entire candor with you, I was bound to give you the whole story. You will see, therefore, gentlemen," said his Honor, summing up, "that I am wholly at sea about our new Collector, and must place my whole dependence on SCHELL'S affection for JOHN C. MATHER, who is now engaged cleaning saucepans and hiring cooks for the Custom-House Kitchen Cabinet—over which said MATHER (that "bad egg" to the contrary, notwithstanding) still hopes to reign as chef de cuisine, with Bill MCINTIRE, Mr. G. F. THOMSON and a third party, who shall be nameless, as his scullions, dish-washers and turn-spits. I told you how I would work on MATHER to make him consider, and cause others in the rural districts to believe, that every attack upon him personally, is proof of a vast conspiracy got up by FOWLER, SAUNDERS, HART, SICKLES, DEAN RICHMOND and CAGGER, ("not CODGER,") for the destruction of the Hard-Shell Party. So completely has this delusion taken possession of him, that I verily believe, if his landlady should present her board-bill for the few weeks he has sojourned in our City, the deluded individual would draw himself up to his full height and ask her, "How much she had been paid for insulting the National Democracy in his person?"

HIS HONOR EXPATIATES ON THE MUNICIPAL POLICE.

Here Judge RUSSELL'S cigar going out, he suddenly turned round and exclaimed, "But what the, ahem, will you do, FERNANDO, should the Court of Appeals decide the Police case against you?" This was evidently what JIM IRVING would call a sockdologer, and staggered his Honor for several minutes; but recovering himself, the wounded Mayor faintly gasped, "Yes, Judge, that would be awful; for the Police, trained as I have them now, are a political engine possessed of the domiuating power. Every man of them I regard as a political prize-fighter in my cause; and were I to lose them, what would become of 'The Traveling Committee of Five Hundred?' how could my enemies be kept from voting, as at least ten thousand of them were at the last election? And how could the shoulder-strikers who prevented them, escape with impunity as heretofore? Besides, Judge"—and here his Honor's face became truly ghastly—"just fancy these men, now and heretofore my most supple and reckless tools, converted into bitterest enemies, as they must inevitably become should I lose in my present game! O'CONOR'S advice to me, to obey the law and allow the policemen to remain in the service, drawing pay until a decision of the Court of last resort could be obtained—that advice, Judge, and be hanged to it, has somehow or another leaked out; and every scoundrel of them all will hold me responsible for his dismissal and the sufferings of their wives and families, should I fail through an adverse decision. The idea of day and night watchmen under the old Montgomerie and Dongan Charters which I have kept them going with, is of course the ahem-dest bosh; for even, supposing there to be authority, they would have to look to the ghosts of those Eminent Deceased for their pay; in which case," and a shuffling chuckle ascended from his Honor's epigastric region, "the assistance of my friend, Judge EDMONDS, would be about the best they could employ."

HOW THE DUTCH AND IRISH ARE TO BE DIDDLED.

After this his Honor very lucidly unfolded his scheme for the continued hocussing of the Irish and Dutch handitti,—observing that CONNERY had sworn "upon his sowl that he was not only willin' but aiger to die for him;" and that, although things were not quite so smooth in the German camp, he yet hoped to be able to bring round EIKOFF, of the Staats Zeitung, to sneak into Tammany Hall, as heretofore, without further Teutonic growls. But those who depend on CONNERY'S "gratitude" must be not only willing to deceive themselves, but blind to the thorough manner in which he has "vindicated" himself from any such weakness.

A GOOD STORY ABOUT JUDGE RUSSELL.

The Fledgling of the Tribune truly reported that our respected City Judge was maintained at the Everett House, by his Honor's order, as a sort of overseer and wet-nurse to the venerable ogre of one of our daily prints. When the exposure was made public, the hotel was in a roar, and Mr. CLAPP, the respected proprietor, finding the Judge insensible to the ecce homos and finger-pointings of the other guests, quietly took him aside and related his Honor's remarks. Upon this the City ermine waxed indignant as if rubbed against the fur, and swearing any number of extra judicial oaths, which (as a mere matter of taste) we omit, he ripped out: "You don't say so, CLAPP! Did he actually say that? I haven't sat with him making appointments for the last three weeks, and if he talks that way—cuss me if I won't show him up! No—no, Mr. CLAPP. I can stand as much as any man. But when people go to rub it in, they'll not find me thar!"

"Why," said CLAPP, innocently, "don't you know people say that his Honor carries you in his breeches pocket?"

"Who says it? Let me see the man," yelled the City Ermine, squaring off and allowing his voice to rise in proportion with his anger.

Startled by the row in that quiet house, faces were everywhere thrust out of doors and over bannisters; and Mr. CLAPP at length managed to get the rioter off to a secluded place, where he was cooled down, (through a straw,) and quiet once more reigned supreme.

DAN LINN MAKES A BET WITH HIS HONOR.

This story reaching DAN LINN, through PETE DUFFY, the newly-appointed Inspector of Vessels, (the Judge's shadow,) DAN repeated it with embellishments to his Honor, who laughed heartily at RUSSELL'S amusing assertion of independence.

"Carry him in my breeches pocket!" laughed the Mayor. "There was a time, DAN, that I did so; but he's grown so small of late that I now carry him in my vest pocket as easily as my tooth-pick or tobacco-box; and I'll bet you one of LEARY'S new hats that in less than twenty-four hours I'll have him holding the Court of Sessions in my private office."

DAN and his Honor shook hands upon it, and the result—to the great dismay of Mr. "O. K." HALL—has been that DAN lost his beaver.

OUR BIRD SETS HIS FACE AGAINST WIRE-PULLING.

There is a great deal of political manœuvering going on which it will become the duty of your correspondent to unravel in his next, unless certain active wire-pullers come out from their ambush and face the music of responsibility in the Tammany trouble. The Bird will be under the necessity of letting a little light into the operations of the third story, back room, in the house No. 51 Chambers-street. To use the strong language of Mr. O. K. H., before referred to, it will "unroof the building" if PETER B. SWEENY continues his thaumaturgic operations there much longer. The conspiratorial cauldron that has been kept constantly boiling there, with JOHN Y. SAVAGE, Jr., Judge WATERBURY and TOM BARR as the dancing witches, has been recently simmering at a white heat, and threatens explosion if the steam be not either condensed or drawn off. And this reminds us of a good story in connection with ISAIAH RYNDERS, EDWIN DOBBS, President of the Twentieth-ward organization, and the political "Twins," which is too good to be abridged, and so long that we must reserve it for our next.

A FEW LAST WORDS FOR THE PRESENT.

Let me advise Irish Tom not to take this copy of your paper off his file, and to restrain that tendency to effervescing indignation which so pains his respected and attentive friend, (our friend as well,) Mr. GEORGE COLE. Let Glorious, also, look out for our next warble, as we have a vast amount of material, entertaining and instructive, which we intend to expend in a manner that cannot fail to interest him. And as to his Honor and those Central Park speculators, of which Messrs. FERRIS and CALLAHAN can tell us a "thrilling" twenty-five-hundred-dollar story, to say nothing of the Lowber matter, and many other similar transactions which the special Oyer and Terminer now summoned will probably be impertinent enough to inquire into,—"these things," as the Fledgling said, "are they not funny—but is this the proper time to speak of them?"

Let us conclude this letter with the following sage advice to his Honor, who suffers such vicissitudes of private friendship; he will find it, we think, in Bacon if he looks; and that is—"to always live with his friends, so that he can afford to have them become his enemies."

Obediently, and so forth,

A BIRD IN THE BUSH.

JUNE 22, 1857.

* His Honor must here have alluded to a certain Boston clipper captain who recently wrote home to his employers that he "had shipped 430 coolies at Singapore, all in good condition; but that, unhappily, 270 of them had spoiled on the passage, and had to be thrown overboard, all efforts to salt them down for the use of the survivors proving utterly futile."

THE POLICE QUESTION.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners dismissed a number of insubordinate members of the Department, and appointed the following-named patrolmen: G. Elder, T. Snodgrass, C. Coon, W. Little, N. Dubois, S. H. Hastings.

At the Mayor's office there were during the forenoon a large number of applicants for appointment on the Municipal Police, but, so far as learned, no further appointments were made.

Rumors as to the decision of the Court of Appeals were plenty during the day, and bets thereon were freely made. The Municipal men expressed themselves sanguine of success.

Towards evening the newspaper offices were crowded with policemen, new and old, and citizens generally, asking anxiously for the latest news from Albany.

Judge Brown, of the Court of Appeals, was in the City during the day, and paid a visit to Chief Matsell. This fact becoming known, added much to the general interest, which was greatly heightened by the avowal from a "quarter entitled to credence," that Superintendent Talmadge had received a private dispatch from Albany to the effect that the Court of Appeals had decided, by six to one, in favor of the new Police, and by the spread of other reports of similar purport.

Chief Matsell, it was also asserted, was so convinced that the decision had gone "the other way," that he would start, on Monday next, for his farm in Iowa.

The statement that four more of the old men of the Eleventh Ward had gone over on Sunday evening to the new Commissioners, is contradicted. The story has its rise in the fact of officer Sham of the new force having tendered his resignation to Capt. Squires.

Not any arrests of importance were noted on the returns made yesterday to either Deputy Carpenter or Chief Matsell. Sergeant HICKS, formerly of the Seventeenth Ward, made a "blank" return yesterday from the Sixth Ward to Deputy Carpenter. The Sergeant reports, "forty-six men absent without leave, and fourteen vacancies."

A warrant for the arrest of officer Andrew Mulligan, of the Seventeenth Ward, now on detail, was issued yesterday by Recorder Smith. Mulligan stands charged with felonious assault, and with resisting the officers of the law in the discharge of their duty, on Tuesday last, at the City Hall. When Policeman Mulligan learned that the warrant had been issued he repaired to the Recorder's office to answer. Corporation-Counsel Busteed was in attendance to defend him. The Recorder was absent, whereupon Mulligan left, by advice of counsel, to report himself again at the Recorder's office to-day.

Dr. Bigelow reports that policeman Crofut is yet quite low, and not entirely out of danger. The rest of the injured are doing well.

Patrick Garvin, the Hudson-street tailor, is still under arrest on a charge of perjury, in swearing that he had heard Commissioner Cholwell threaten to "stab or run a knife into Fernando Wood's black heart," exhibiting at the same time the knife with which the deed was to be done.

F. John J. Rabineau, of the Ninth Ward, has been appointed a clerk of the Commissioners' office in White-street. He entered upon his duties yesterday morning.

The Bell Strikes Twelve—We Take a Note of Time.

The practice of striking on all the fire bells of the City, the hour of nine in the evening, has proved so serviceable to our citizens, enabling them to keep their watches constantly regulated, that, at the suggestion of the Mayor, Professor BULL has extended the service to the hour of noon, a great convenience to all business men, especially to workmen and others employed in factories or large establishments, whose hour allotted to dinner commences with the first stroke of twelve. Variations of time, if only for a minute or two, have often occasioned disputes between employers and employed. The City Hall bell, cotemporaneously with the other bells in the City, will, for the future, obviate all such difficulty. It commenced the good work on Saturday, and henceforth the hour of noon will be tolled forth in real, good, observatory time.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Monday, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

The petition of E. W. Voorhees for flagging and curbing in Sixth-avenue, was referred to the Committee on Streets. Several petitions for remission of taxation were referred to the Committee on Finance. So also was a petition from Hose Company No. 50, for repairs.

A remonstrance from George W. Pell and others against the formation of a sewer in Broadway between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets was referred to the Committee on Sewers.

Several similar documents of no public interest were referred.

The report of the Committee on Finance, concurring to substitute 6 per cent. bonds in lieu of 5 per cent. in payment for land in Central Park, was referred to the Committee of the Whole. Also, the report of the same Committee on petition of Francis M. Baum, was similarly referred.

A communication from the New-York Fire Department relative to the use of steam fire engines, and embodied by that Department and adopted at one of their meetings, was presented to the Board. The document, already published, protests against the use of such engines. It was referred to a Special Committee.

The Board concurred with the Board of Aldermen in the payment of $529 to defray the funeral expenses of the late Joseph S. Taylor, and that of the late Dr. Vaché.

Also, with another resolution directing the Corporation Counsel to conduct the defence of any suits brought against the Mayor by reason of the appointment of Charles Develin as Street Commissioner.

Also, adverse to the petition of Patrick O'Brien in his complaint as to insufficient award from the Central Park Commissioners.

Some other formal business being transacted, the Board then adjourned to Thursday, at 5 o'clock.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Expected Revelation in Mexico—Security of Private Interests—Survey of the Darien Ship-Canal Route, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 22.

The prospect of another revolution in Mexico has given rise to great efforts for the security of private American interests. Agents are going out, and the parties to the Tehuantepec grants—GARAY, HARGOUS, BENJIMEN and SLOO—are urgent for action.

X. Y. Z.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 22.

Lieutenant CRAVEN has received preparatory orders for building boats and making other arrangements for a survey of the Isthmus of Darien, with this view of a ship canal. He will not start before October. The Navy Department has made application to the War Department for the assignment of an officer to cooperate with the expedition. For this purpose the Varina will take the place of the Arctic, which will be employed by the Coast Survey under Lieutenant BERRYMAN, in taking deep sea soundings on the coast of Newfoundland for the Submarine Telegraph.

The Saranac, which has been ordered to the Pacific, will precede the Merrimac as the flag-ship there, and take the place of the John Adams.

New-Orleans papers of the 16th inst. are to hand by the arrival of the mail as late as due, but they contain no news of importance.

More Trouble in the Anti-Rent District.

ALBANY, Monday, June 22.

As WALTER S. CHURCH and Sheriff BRAYTON, with two Deputies and others, were proceeding on Saturday afternoon to make a sale of propery in the town of Berne, 22 miles from this city, in the Anti-Rent District, they were fired upon by some one in ambush. They immediately gave chase and arrested a young man named SCHULTZ, son of the person whose property was to be sold, and found him armed with a gun. One of his shots passed through the hat of one of the Sheriff's party. No one was injured. The sale was then concluded without further trouble.

The Albany Argus has the following additional particulars:—As Sheriff BRAYTON with Messrs. TYLER and CHURCH were on their way to a sale under execution at SCHULTZ, in Berne, on Saturday last, they were fired at by persons unknown and concealed on the roadside in the bushes. They gave chase and captured SCHULTZ, a son of the defendant, in the execution, who had in his possession a loaded gun. They kept him prisoner and went on to the sale; and were not further molested. Afterwards, Deputy Marshal WEMPLE accompanied by Deputy Sheriff VAN LUVEN, made arrests under writs of United States Courts, of ERASMUS ST JOHN, DANIEL BAKER, and JAMES SANDFORD, at the complaint of EPHRAIM M. FISH, who, it will be recollected, brought suits and recovered damages against Anti-renters several years ago.

These persons were brought into the city, and were followed by several of their townsmen, who offered bail, which was accepted by Commissioner HILTON.

The prisoners, we believe, have in turn commenced actions for damages against WEMPLE, CHURCH and VAN LUVEN for violence in making the arrest. A. J. COLVIN, Esq., is their attorney.

SCHULTZ, who was caught with the gun in the vicinity of the place where the shots were fired, is in jail, and will be examined on Tuesday at the Police Court. He was committed after a preliminary examination by Justice GALLUP on Sunday morning.

News from Kansas.

ELECTION OF DELEGATES TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, June 22.

The Republican learns that the Counties of Doniphan, Atchison, Leavenworth, Johnson, Jefferson, Shawnee and Douglas, in Kansas, have elected 41 Democratic Delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

A letter to the Democrat says that the vote of Leavenworth is 225, and that of the whole county will not exceed 500. Jefferson County gives 50, Douglas 175, and Franklin 30, as far as heard from.

LAWRENCE, K. T., June 15, via ST. LOUIS, June 22.

The total vote of Douglas County for Delegates to the Constitutional Convention is only 293. Only three precincts had polls opened. The ultra ticket is elected. Only five precincts were opened south of Kaw River except in the Border Counties. The total vote will probably fall short of 4,000.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 22.

The Alexandria Gazette, of this morning, has a letter from Williamsport, dated the 19th inst., saying that the work on Dam No. 5 was commenced on that day, and the canal would be open for the passage of boats in three weeks. President MAULSBY has obtained permission from the Secretary of War for Capt. MEIGS to visit the work as advising Engineer. There is no difficulty about pecuniary means.

Onslaught on Houses of Ill-Fame in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Monday, June 22.

A mob of 50 or 60 persons made an onslaught on Saturday night, on the houses of ill-fame in the upper part of the City. They burned three, demolished two others, and drove out the inmates of the sixth. A large crowd gathering, the rioters were compelled to desist in their work of destruction. One person was stabbed. No arrests were made.

The New Officers of the Custom-House of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, June 22.

Collector BAKER has made his appointments of officers of the Custom-House of this city, including, it is said, the following old Whigs: ALBERT R. SOCFIELD, HARMAN YERKES and PAUL POHL, and some others less prominent. There is much dissatisfaction among the faithful Democrats.

Grand Masonic Festival.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Monday, June 22.

Extensive preparations are being made to celebrate the Centennial Anniversary of St. John's Lodge, No. 2, in this city, on the 24th inst. Encampments, Chapters and Lodges from various parts of the country have given notice of their intention to be present. Many distinguished persons are also expected.

Burning of a Paper-Mill Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Saturday, June 20.

Yesterday the paper-mill of JAMES HOWARD & Co., at Manchester, near this city, was burned to the ground, with all its contents. The fire was caused by an incendiary. The loss amounts to $35,000, and the insurance, which is in the Pittsburg offices, to $10,000

KANSAS—THE MORMONS—SLAVERY.

SPEECH OF SENATOR DOUGLAS.

Delivered at Springfield, Ill., June 12, 1857.

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I appear before you to-night, at the request of the grend jury in attendance upon the United States Court, for the purpose of submitting my views upon certain topics upon which they have expressed a desire to hear my opinion. It was not my purpose when I arrived among you, to have engaged in any public or political discussion; bnt when called upon by a body of gentlemen so intelligent and respectable, coming from all parts of the State, and connected with the administration of public justice, I do not feel at liberty to withhold a full and frank expression of my opinion upon the subjects to which they have referred, and which now engrosses so large a share of the public attention.

The points which I am requested to discuss are;

1st. The present condition and prospects of Kansas,

2d. The principles affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott case.

3d. The condition of things in Utah, and the appropriate remedies for existing evils.

Of the Kansas question but little need be said at the present time. You are familiar with the history of the question, and my connection with it. Subsequent reflection has strengthened and confirmed my convictions in the soundness of the principles and the correctness of the course I have felt it my duty to pursue upon that subject. Kansas is about to speak for herself through her delegates assembled in Convention to form a Constitution, preparatory to her admission into the Union on an equal footing with the original States. Peace and prosperity now prevail throughout her borders. The law under which her delegates are about to be elected, is believed to be just and fair in all its objects and provisions. There is every reason to hope and believe that the law will be fairly interpreted and impartially executed, so as to insure to every bona fide inhabitant the free and quiet exercise of the elective franchise. If any portion of the inhabitants, acting under the advice of political leaders in distant States, shall choose to absent themselves from the polls, and withhold their votes, with a view of leaving the Free-State Democrats in a minority, and thus securing a Pro-Slavery Constitution in opposition to the wishes of a majority of the people living under it, let the responsibility rest on those who, for partisan purposes, will sacrifice the principles they profess to cherish and promote. Upon them and upon the political party for whose benefit and under the direction of whose leaders they act, let the blame be visited of fastening upon the people of a new State, institutions repugnant to their feelings and in violation of their wishes. The organic act secures to the people of Kansas the sole and exclusive right of forming and regulating their domestic institutions to suit themselves, subject to no other limitation than that which the Constitution of the United States imposes. The Democratic Party is determined to see the great fundamental principles of the organic act carried out in good faith. The present election law in Kansas is acknowledged to be fair and just—the rights of the voters are clearly defined—and the exercise of those rights will be efficiently and scrupulously protected. Hence, if the majority of the people of Kansas desire to have a Free State, (and we are told by the Republican Party that nine-tenths of the people of that Territory are Free State men,) there is no obstacle in the way of bringing Kansas into the Union as a Free State, by the votes and voice of her own people, and in conformity with the principles of the Kansas Nebraska act; provided all the Free-State men will go to the polls, and vote their principles in accordance with their professions. If such is not the result let the consequences be visited upon the heads of those whose policy it is to produce strife, anarchy and bloodshed in Kansas, that their party may profit by Slavery agitation in the Northern States of this Union. That the Democrats in Kansas will perform their duty fearlessly and nobly, according to the principle they cherish, I have no doubt, and that the result of the struggle will be such as will gladden the heart and strengthen the hopes of every friend of the Union, I have entire confidence.

The Kansas question being settled peacefully and satisfactorily, in accordance with the wishes of her own people, Slavery agitation should be banished from the halls of Congress, and cease to be an exciting element in our political struggles. Give fair play to that principle of self-government which recognizes the right of the people of each State and Territory to form and regulate their own domestic institutions, and sectional strife will be forced to give place to that fraternal feeling which animated the fathers of the Revolution, and made every citizen of every State of this glorious confederacy a member of a common brotherhood.

That we are steadily and rapidly approaching that result, I cannot doubt, for the Slavery issue has already dwindled down to the narrow limits covered by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dred Scott case. The moment that decision was pronounced, and before the opinions of the Court could be published and read by the people, the newspaper press in the interest of a powerful political party in this country, began to pour forth torrents of abuse and misrepresentations, not only upon the decision, but upon the character and motives of the venerable Chief Justice and his illustrious associates on the bench. The character of Chief Justice TANEY and the associate Judges who concurred with him require no eulogy—no vindication from me. They are endeared to the people of the United States by their eminent public services—venerated for their great learning, wisdom and experience—and beloved for the spotless purity of their characters and their exemplary lives. The poisonous shafts of partisan malice will fall harmless at their feet, while their judicial decisions will stand in all future time, a proud monument to their greatness, the admiration of the good and wise, and a rebuke to the partisans of faction and lawless violence. If, unfortunately, any considerable portion of the people of the United States shall so far forget their obligations to society as to allow partisan leaders to array them in violent resistance to the final decision of the highest judicial tribunal on earth, it will become the duty of all the friends of order and constitutional government, without reference to past political differences, to organize themselves and marshal their forces under the glorious banner of the Union, in vindication of the Constitution and the supremacy of the laws over the advocates of faction and the champions of violence. To preserve the Constitution inviolate, and vindicate the supremacy of the laws, is the first and highest duty of every citizen of a free Republic. The peculiar merit of our form of Government consists in the fact that the law, instead of the arbitrary will of a hereditary prince, prescribes, defines and protects all our rights. In this country the law is the will of the people, embodied and expressed according to the forms of the Constitution. The Courts are the tribunals prescribed by the Constitution, and created by the authority of the people to determine, expound and enforce the law. Hence, whoever resists the final decision of the highest judicial tribunal aims a deadly blow to our whole republican system of Government—a blow which, if successful, would place all our rights and liberties at the mercy of passion, anarchy and violence. I repeat, therefore, that if resistance to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, in a matter like the points decided in the Dred Scott case, clearly within their jurisdiction as defined by the Constitution, shall be forced upon the country as a political issue, it will become a distinct and naked issue between the friends and the enemies of the Constitution—the friends and the enemies of the supremacy of the laws.

The case of DRED SCOTT was an action of trespass, vi et armis, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Missouri, for the purpose of establishing his claim to be a free man, and was taken by writ of error on the application of SCOTT to the Supreme Court of the United States, where the final decision was pronounced by Chief Justice TANEY. The facts of the case were agreed upon and admitted to be true by both parties, and were in substance, that DRED SCOTT was a negro slave in Missouri, that he went with his master who was an officer in the army to Fort Armstrong, on Rock Island, and thence to Fort Snelling, on the west bank of the Mississippi river, and within the country covered by the act of Congress, known as the Missouri Compromise; and then he reaccompanied his master to the State of Missouri, where he has since remained a slave. Upon this statement of facts two important and material questions arose, besides several incidental and minor ones, which it was incumbent upon the Court to take notice of and decide. The Court did not attempt to avoid responsibility by disposing of the case upon technical points without touching the merits, nor did they go out of their way to decide questions not properly before them and directly presented by the record. Like honest and conscientious judges, as they are, they met and decided each point as it arose, and faithfully performed their whole duty and nothing but their duty to the country by determining all the questions in the case, and nothing but what was essential to the decision of the case upon its merits. The State Courts of Missouri had decided against DRED SCOTT, and declared him and his children slaves, and the Circuit Court of the United States for the district of Missouri had decided the same thing in this very case which had thus been removed to the Supreme Court of the United States by SCOTT, with the hope of reversing the decision of the Circuit Court and securing his freedom. If the Supreme Court had dismissed the writ of error for want of jurisdiction, without first examining into and deciding the merits of the case, as they are now denounced and abused for not having done, the result would have been to remand DRED SCOTT and his children to perpetual slavery under the decisions which had already been pronounced by the Supreme Court of Missouri, as well as by the Circuit Court of the United States, without obtaining a decision on the merits of his case by the Supreme Court of the United States. Suppose Chief Justice TANEY and his associates had thus remanded DRED SCOTT and his children back to slavery on a plea in abatement or any mere technical point, not touching the merits of the question, and without deciding whether under the Constitution and laws as applied to the facts of the case, DRED SCOTT was a free man or a slave, would they not have been denounced with increased virulence and bitterness on the charge of having remanded DRED SCOTT to perpetual slavery without first examining the merits of his case and ascertaining whether he was a slave or not?

If the case had been disposed of in that way, who can doubt that such would have been the character of the denunciations which would have been hurled upon the devoted heads of those illustrious Judges with much more plausibility and show of fairness than they are now denounced for having decided the case fairly and honestly upon its merits?

The material and controling points in the case—those which have been made the subject of unmeasured abuse and denunciation—may be thus stated:

1. The Court decided that under the Constitution of the United States a negro descended from slave parents is not and cannot be a citizen of the United States.

2. That the act of the 6th of March, 1820, commonly called the Missouri Compromise act, was unconstitutional and void before it was repealed by the Nebraska act, and consequently did not and could not have the legal effect of extinguishing a master's right to his slave in that Territory. While the right continues in full force under the guarantees of the Constitution, and cannot be divested or alienated by an act of Congress, it necessarily remains a barren and a worthless right, unless sustained, protected and enforced by appropriate police regulations and local legislation, prescribing adequate remedies for its violation. These regulations and remedies must necessarily depend entirely upon the will and wishes of the people of the Territory, as they can only be prescribed by the local Legislatures. Hence the great principle of popular sovereignty and self-government is sustained and firmly established by the authority of this decision. Thus it appears that the only sin involved in the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act consists in the fact of having removed from the statute-book an act of Congress which was unauthorized by the Constitution of the United States, and void because passed without constitutional authority, and constituted in lieu of it that great fundamental principle of self-government, which recognizes the rights of the people of each State and Territory to control their own domestic concerns.

I will direct attention to the question involved in the first proposition, to wit: That the negro is not and cannot be a citizen of the United States.

We are told by a certain political organization that that decision is cruel—is inhuman and infamous, and should neither be respected nor obeyed. What is the objection to that decision? Simply that the negro is not a citizen. What is the object of making him a citizen? Of course to give him the rights, privileges and immunitiee of a citizen, it being the great fundamental law in our Government, that under the law, citizens are equal in their rights and privileges. It is said to be inhuman—to be infamous—to deprive an African negro of these privileges of citizenship, which would put him on an equality with the other citizens of the country.

Now let me ask, my fellow-citizens, are you prepared to resist the constituted authorities of this country, in order to secure citizenship, and through citizenship, equality with the white man. [Voices, "No! no!"] If you are, you must reverse the whole policy of this State—the organic law of our own State. In order to carry out that principle of negro citizenship and negro equality under the law, you must not only reverse the organic law in our own State, but of every other State in this Union. But you have not accomplished it then, you must make furious war upon the Slaveholding States, to compel them to emancipate and set at liberty their three millions of slaves. When that shall be done, before you have secured that great principle of equality to the sons of Africa, you must strike out of the Constitution of Illinois that provision which prevents a negro, whether free or slave, from crossing the Ohio or the Mississippi, and coming into Illinois to reside. When you shall have made that change in our organic law, and turned loose all the Africans that may choose to come from the slaveholding States to settle upon our prairies and turn Illinois into a negro colony, rather than into a State of white men, still you have not secured to the negro the rights of citizenship on an equality with the white man. You must then strike the word "white" out of the Constitution of our own State, and allow the negro to come to our polls and vote on an equality with yourselves. You must also change the Constitution in that respect that declares that a negro shall not be eligible to office, and declare that a negro shall be eligible to your Legislature, to the bar, bench and gubernatorial chair. And still you have not reached that point to which we are told we must go, of placing the negro on an equality with other citizens. You must admit him to the jury-box, and license him by law to marry a white woman. And then you will have secured nearly all the privileges that the decision of the Supreme Court has denied him. [Applause.]

I submit to you, fellow-citizens, whether any man can pronounce the decision inhuman and infamous, without resorting to that great principle, which, carried out, puts the negro on an equality with other citizens. But listen to the speeches of any one of those who sympathize so much with the poor African that they are not willing to allow him to occupy an inferior position, and you will find that they all adhere to the position of negro equality. For instance, did you ever hear any of them make a public speech in which he did not quote the Declaration of Independence, that "we hold all men are born free and equal," and then appeal to you to know whether Slavery could be justified or palliated by any man who believed in the Declaration of Independence. Do they not argue that, by this instrument, negroes were declared to be born equal to white men, and hence, any man who is opposed to carrying out that great dear principle of theirs, of negro equality with the white man, is opposed to the Declaration of Independence.

Now, my friends, permit me to reply to this assumption, that the Declaration of Independence declared the negro to be equal with white men, by a few historical facts recorded in our school books and familiar to our children. By reference to the History of the United States, you will find that on the Fourth of July, 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was put forth, the thirteen colonies were then, each and all of them, slaveholding colonies. Each signer of the Declaration, without an exception, represented a slaveholding constituency. Every battle of the Revolutionary War, from Lexington and Bunker Hill to King's Mountain and Yorktown, was fought in a slaveholding constitutency. The treaty of peace with Great Britain, which acknowledged our independence, was made, on the part of Great Britain on the one side and the thirteen original slaveholding States on the other. Passing from that to the formation of the Constitution of the United States, you will find that instrument was framed, and adopted, and put into operation, with the immortal WASHINGTON at the head, by twelve slaveholding States and one free State, or one State about to become free. In view of these facts, I submit to you whether any sane man can assert that the founders of our institutions intended to put the negro and the white man on an equality in the system of government which they adopted? If the signers of the Declaration had intended to declare the negro equal to the white man, would not they on that very day have abolished Slavery in every one of the States of the Union in order to have conformed to that Declaration! If any one of these States had thus understood to the Declaration of Independence, would not that State then immediately have abolished Slavery, and put the negro on an equality with the white man in conformity with that Declaration? Did they do so? I have already shown you that no one of those States abolished Slavery during the whole period of the Revolutionary war. I have already stated, and I challenge contradiction that to this day no one of them have put the negro on an equality with the white man in all the laws touching on the relations of life. And yet if they honestly believed the Declaration of Independence meant negroes as well as white men, they were bound to advocate every law so as to carry out their principle. Their position on this subject would charge the signers of that Declaration with hypocrisy in making it to the world and going on to fight battles on the principle thus asserted. But no vindication is needed from me of those immortal men who drafted and signed and proclaimed to the world the Declaration of Independence. They did what they professed; they had reference to the white man and to him only when they declared all men were created equal. They were in a struggle with Great Britain. The principle they were asserting was that a British subject born on American soil was equal to a British subject born in England—that a British subject here was entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities under the British Constitution, that a British subject in England enjoyed; that their Parliament, whose power was omnipotent, had no power to alienate them. They did not mean the negroes and Indians—they did not say we white men and negroes were born equal; but they were speaking of the race of people who colonized America—who ruled America, and who were declaring the liberties of Americans, when they proclaimed the self evident truth that those men were born free and equal. And if you will examine the journal of the Continental Congress, you will find this great principle carried out. No one of the colonies would then consent to the Declaration of Independence until they had placed on the record the express reservation, that each colony reserved and retained to itself the sole and exclusive right of regulating its own domestic concerns and police regulations. It was made a fundamental condition of the Declaration, that this right should be forever reserved beyond the power of Congress or other confederation or power on earth, except the free will of their own people. The articles of confederation were based upon the same great fundamental principle, and the Constitution of the United States was adopted for the purpose of preserving and carrying into effect the same great principle that made us one people for one especial object, but reserved to each State and each locality the sole and exclusive privilege of managing its own domestic concerns.

At that day the negro was looked upon as a being of an inferior race. All history had proved that in no part of the world, or of the world's history, had the negro ever shown himself capable of self-government, and it was not the intention of the founders of this Government to violate that great law of God, which made the distinction between the white and the black man. That distinction is plain and palpable, and it has been the rule of civilization and of Christianity the world over, that whenever any one man, or set of men, were incapable of taking care of themselves, they should consent to be governed by those who were capable of managing their affairs for them. It is on that principle that your courts of justice appoint guardians to take charge of the idiot, the lunatic, the insane, blind, dumb, the unfortunate, whatever may be his condition. And if history had proved that the negro race, as a race, were incapable of self-government, it was not only the right but the duty of those who were capable to provide for them. It did not necessarily follow that they were to be reduced to Slavery. The true principle is that the inferior race should be allowed to enjoy all their rights, which their nature is capable of exercising and enjoying, consistently with the good of society. I would not advocate that the negro should be treated harshly or unkindly. Far from it. I would extend and secure to him every right, privilege and immunity he was capable of enjoying consistent with the highest welfare of society. The Constitution is founded on that great principle, and leaves to each State, as the articles of confederation did to each colony the right to determine for itself what those principles were, and the extent of them, in order that they might adopt their laws to their actual condition.

Under that great provision, Illinois has chosen to say, that the negro shall not come here to reside—that a negro shall not vote—shall not hold office—shall not serve in the jury-box—shall not marry white women—and I think that the Constitution of Illinois is wisely framed as to this provision. On the other hand Kentucky goes further, and deprives the negro of his right over his person. Kentucky, under the Constitution, had a right to make that provision. We have no right to complain of her, nor can she complain of us. Each has the right to do as it pleases, and each must mind its own business and not interfere with its neighbor's concerns. [Applause.]

Our fathers, when they framed this Government, had witnessed the sad and melancholy results of the mixture of the races in Mexico, South America and Central America, where the Spanish, from motives of policy, had admitted the negro and other inferior races to citizenship, and, consequently, to political and social amalgamation. The demoralization and degradation which prevailed in the Spanish and French colonies, where no distinction on account of color or race were tolerated, operated as a warning to our revolutionary fathers to preserve the purity of the white race, and to establish their political, social and domestic institutions upon such a basis as would forever exclude the idea of negro citizenship and negro equality. [Applause.]

They understood that great natural law which declares that amalgamation between superior and inferior races brings their posterity down to the lower level of the inferior, but never elevates them to the high level of the superior race. I appeal to each of those gallant young men before me, who won immortal glory on the bloody fields of Mexico, in vindication of their country's rights and honor, whether their information and observation in that country does not fully sustain the truth of the proposition that amalgamation is degradation, demoralization, disease and death? Is it true that the negro is our equal and our brother? The history of the times clearly show that our fathers did not regard the African race as any kin to them, and determined so to lay the foundation of society and government that they should never be of kin to their posterity. [Immense applause.]

But, when you confer upon the African race the privileges of citizenship, and put them on an equality with whits men at the polls, in the jury box, on the bench, in the Executive chair, and in the councils of the nation, upon what principle will you deny their equality at the festive board and in the domestic circle?

The Supreme Court of the United States have decided that under the Constitution, a negro is not and cannot be a citizen.

The Republican Abolition Party pronounce that decision cruel, inhuman and infamous, and appeal to the American people to disregard and refuse to obey it. Let us join issue with them, and put ourselves upon the country for trial. [Cheers and applause.]

Mr. President, I will now respond to the call which has been made upon me for my opinions of the condition of things in Utah, and the appropriate remedies for existing evils.

The Territory of Utah was organized under one of the acts known as the compromise measure of 1850, on the supposition that the inhabitants were American citizens, owing and acknowledging allegiance to the United States, and consequently entitled to the benefits of self government while a Territory, and to admission into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, so soon as they should number the requisite population. It was conceded on all hands, and by all parties, that the peculiarities of their religious faith and ceremonies interposed no valid and constitutional objection to their reception into the Union, in conformity with the federal constitution, so long as they were in all other respects entitled to admission. Hence, the great political parties of the country indorsed and approved the compromise measure of 1850, including the act for the organization of the Territory of Utah, with the hope and in the confidence that the inhabitants would confirm to the constitution and laws, and prove themselves worthy, respectable and law-abiding citizens. If we are permitted to place credence in the rumors and reports from that country, (and it must be admitted that they have increased and strengthened and assumed consistency and plausibility by each successive mail,) seven years' experience has disclosed a state of facts entirely different from that which was supposed to exist when Utah was organized. These rumors and reports would seem to justify the belief that the following facts are susceptible of proof.

I. That nine-tenths of the inhabitants are aliens by birth, who have refused to become naturalized, or to take the oath of allegiance, or to do any other act recognizing the Government of the United States as the paramount authority in that Territory.

2. That all the inhabitants, whether native or alien born, known as Mormons, (and they constitute the whole people of the Territory,) are bound by horrid oaths and terrible penalties, to recognize and maintain the authority of BRIGHAM YOUNG, and the government of which he is the head, as paramount to that of the United States, in civil as well as in religious affairs; and that they will, in due time, and under the direction of their leaders, use all means in their power to subvert the government of the United States, and resist its authority.

3. That the Mormon government, with BRIGHAM YOUNG at its head, is now forming alliance with Indian tribes in Utah and adjoining territories—stimulating the Indians to acts of hostility, and organizing bands of his followers under the name of "Danites, or Destroying Angels," to prosecute a system of robbery and murders upon American citizens, who support the authority of the United States, and denounce the infamous and disgusting practices and institutions of the Mormon Government.

If, upon a full investigation, these representations shall prove true, they will establish the fact that the Mormon inhabitants of Utah, as a community, are outlaws and alien enemies, unfit to exercise the right of self-government under the organic act, and unworthy to be admitted into the Union as a State, when their only object in seeking admission is to interpose the sovereignty of the State, as an invincible shield to protect them in their treason and crime, debauchery and infamy. [Applause.]

Under this view of the subject, I think it is the duty of the President, as I have no doubt it is his fixed purpose to remove BRIGHAM YOUNG and all his followers from office, and to fill their places with bold, able and true men, and to cause a thorough and searching investigation into all the crimes and enormities which are alleged to be perpetrated daily in that Territory, under the direction of BRIGHAM YOUNG and his confederates; and to use all the military force necessary to protect the officers in discharge of their duties, and to enforce the laws of the land. [Applause.]

When the authentic evidence shall arrive, if it shall establish the facts which are believed to exist, it will become the duty of Congress to apply the knife and cut out this loathsome, disgusting ulcer. [Applause.] No temporizing policy—no half way measures will then answer. It has been supposed by those who have not thought deeply upon the subject, that an act of Congress prohibiting murder, robbery, polygamy and other crimes, with appropriate penalties for those offenses, would afford adequate remedies for all the enormities complained of. Suppose such a law to be on the statute book, and I believe they have a criminal code, providing the usual punishment for the entire catalogue of crimes, according to the usages of all civilized and Christian countries, with the exception of polygamy, which is practised under the sanction of the Mormon Church, but is neither prohibited nor authorized by the laws of the Territory.

Suppose, I repeat, that Congress should pass a law prescribing a criminal code, and punishing polygamy among other offences, what other effect would it have—what good would it do? Would you call on twenty-three grand jurymen, with twenty three wives each, to find a bill of indictment against a poor miserable wretch for having two wives? [Cheers and laughter.] Would you call upon twelve petit jurors, with twelve wives each, to convict the same loathsome wretch for having two wives? [Continued applause.] Would you expect a grand jury composed of twenty-three "Danites" to find a bill of indictment against a brother "Danite" for having murdered a Gentile, as they call all American citizens, under their direction? Much less would you expect a jury of twelve "destroying angels" to find another "destroying angel" guilty of the crime of murder, and cause him to be hanged for no other offence than taking the life of a Gentile? No? If there is any truth in the reports we receive from Utah, Congress may pass whatever laws it chooses; but you can never rely upon the local tribunals and juries to punish crimes committed by Mormons in that Territory. Some other and more effectual remedy must be devised and applied. In my opinion, the first step should be the absolute and unconditional repeal of the organic act—blotting the territorial government out of existence—upon the ground that they are outlaws, denying their allegiance and defying the authorities of the United States. [Immense applause.]

The Territorial Government once abolished, the country would revert to its primitive condition prior to the act of 1850, "under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States," and should be placed under the operation of the act of Congress of the 30th of April, 1790, and the various acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof, "providing for the punishment of crimes against the United States within any fort, arsenal, dock-yard, magazine, OR ANY OTHER PLACE OR DISTRICT OF COUNTRY, UNDER THE SOLE AND EXCLUSIVE jurisdiction of the United States." All offences against the provisions of these acts are required by law to be tried and punished by the United States Courts in the State or Territories where the offenders shall be "FIRST APPREHENDED OR BROUGHT FOR TRIAL." Thus it will be seen that under the plan proposed BRIGHAM YOUNG and his confederates could be "apprehended and brought for trial" to Iowa or Missouri, California or Oregon, or to any other adjacent State or Territory, where a fair trial could be had, and justice administered impartially—where the witnesses could be protected and the judgment of the court could be carried into execution, without violence or intimidation. I do not propose to introduce any new principle into our jurisprudence, nor to change the modes of proceeding or the rules of practice in our Courts. I only propose to place the district of country embraced within the Territory of Utah under the operation of the same laws and rules of proceeding, that Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota and our other Territories were placed before they became organized Territories. The whole country embraced within these Territories was under the operation of that same system of laws, and all the offences committed within the same were punished in the manner now proposed, so long as the country remained "under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States;" but the moment the country was organized into Territorial Governments, with legislative, executive and judicial departments, it ceased to be under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, within the meaning of the act of Congress, for the reason that it had passed under another and a different jurisdiction. Hence, if we abolish the Territorial Government of Utah, pursuing and existing all rights and place the country under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, offenders can be apprehended and brought into the adjacent States or Territories for punishment, in the same manner and under the same rules and regulations which obtained and have been uniformly practiced, under like circumstances since 1790.

If the plan proposed shall be found an effective and adequate remedy for the evils complained of in Utah, no one, no matter what his political creed or partisan associations, need be apprehensive that it will violate any cherished theory or constitutional right in regard to the government of the Territories. It is a great mistake to suppose that all the territory or land belonging to the United States must necessarily be governed by the same laws and under the same clause of the Constitution, without reference to the purpose to which it is dedicated or the use which it is proposed to make of it, while all that portion of the country which is or shall be set apart to become new States, must necessarily be governed under and consistent with that clause of the Constitution which authorizes Congress to admit new States, it does not follow that other territory, not intended to be organized and admitted into the Union as States, must be governed under the same clause of the Constitution, with all the rights of self-government and State equality. For instance, if we should purchase Vancouvers' Island from Great Britain for the purpose of removing all the Indians from our Pacific territorise and locating them on that island as their permanent home, with guarantees that it should never be occupied or settled by white men, will it be contended that the purchase should be made and the island governed under the power to admit new States when it was not acquired for that purpose, nor intended to be applied to that object? Being acquired for Indian purposes and applied to Indian purposes, it is not more reasonable to assume that the power to acquire was derived from the Indian clause, and the island must necessarily be governed under and consistent with that clause of the Constitution which relates to Indian affairs. Again, suppose we should deem it expedient to buy a small island in the Mediterranean or in the Caribbean sea for a naval station, can it be said with any force or plausibility that the purchase should be made or the island governed under the power to admit new States? On the contrary, is it not obvious that the right to acquire and govern in that case is derived from the power "to provide and maintain a navy," and must be exercised consistent with that power. So, if we purchase land for forts, arsenals, or other military purposes, or set apart and dedicate any territory which we now own for a military reservation, it immediately passes under the military power and must be governed in harmony with it. So if the land be purchased for a mint, it must be governed under the power to coin money; or, if purchased for a post-office, it must be governed under the power to establish post offices and post-roads; or for a custom-house, under the power to regulate commerce; or for a Court-House, under the judiciary power. In short, the clause in the Constitution under which any land or territory belonging to the United States must be governed is indicated by the object for which it was acquired and the purpose to which it is dedicated. So long, therefore, as the organic act of Utah shall remain in force, setting apart that country for a new State, and pledging the faith of the United States to receive it into the Union so soon as it should have the requisite population, we are bound to extend to it all the rights of self-government, agreeably to the clause in the Constitution providing for the admission of new States. Hence the necessity of repealing the organic act—withdrawing the pledge of admission, and placing it under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, in order that persons and property may be protected, and justice administered, and crimes punished under the laws prescribed by Congress in such cases.

While the power of Congress to repeal the organic act and abolish the Territorial Government cannot be denied, the question may arise whether we possess the moral right of exercising the power, after the charter has been once granted and the local government organized under its provisions. This is a grave question—one which should not be decided hastily, nor under the influence of passion or prejudice. I am free to say that in my opinion there is no moral right to repeal the organic act of a Territory, and abolish the government organized under it, unless the inhabitants of that Territory, as a community, have done such acts as amount to a forfeiture of all rights under it—such as becoming alien enemies, outlaws, disavowing their allegiance, or resisting the authority of the United States. These, and kindred acts, which we have every reason to believe are daily perpetrated in that Territory, would not only give us the moral right, but make it our imperative duty to abolish the Territorial Government, and place the inhabitants under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, to the end that justice may be done and the dignity and authority of the government vindicated.

I have thus presented plainly and frankly my views of the Utah question—the evils and the remedy—upon the facts as they have reached us, and are supposed to be substantially correct. If official reports and authentic information shall change or modify these facts, I shall be ready to conform my action to the real facts as they shall be found to exist. I have no auch pride of opinion as will induce me to persevere in an error one moment after my judgment is convinced. If, therefore, a better plan can be devised—one more consistent with justice and sound policy, or more effective as a remedy for acknowledged evils, I shall take great pleasure in adopting it, in lieu of the one I have presented to you to-night.

In conclusion, permit me to express my grateful acknowledgments for your patient attention and the kind and respectful manner in which you have received my remarks.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

SURROGATE'S COURT—JUNE 22.

In accordance with notice from the Surrogate, the parties in the matter of the Burdell Estate appeared by their respective counsel to show cause why the case should not be opened to admit rebutting testimony in behalf of Mrs. Crane, whose character for truth and veracity had been impeached by the testimony of her step-son and her husband's nephew, given on Friday last.

Mr. Clinton claimed if the case was opened with regard to Mrs. Crane, it should also be opened in regard to other witnesses. He would like to produce merchants of respectability and standing here, who would prove that Mr. Knowlton, a witness for the claimant, and whose character had been impeached by one witness called for the contestants, had no such peculisrity as the contestants claimed, and that the witness by which they attempted to prove it had the very same peculiarity himself. If the case was opened, he would like to introduce witnesses well known to the counsel on both sides to show that Dr. Burdell had assigned reasons to them for not divulging his marriage.

Mr. Edwards hoped that the Surrogate would allow the counsel for Mrs. Crane to rebut the testimony of that young viper who been warmed into life by the hand that he sought now to strike. If his Honor would allow him to introduce testimony in regard to the character of his mother, he would show under his own handwriting what his real feelings were towards her and what character the father really bore. As the matter now stood, it appeared that there was an unhappy difference between Mr. and Mrs. Crane, resulting in a suit for divorce, in which Mrs. Crane was the plaintiff. But with the virtues or vices of Mrs. Crane they had nothing to do upon the part of the contestants. They did not seek this opening of the case; they had been appealed to by this lady—shocked and grieved as she had been in reading the testimony of this boy against her—to allow her to introduce evidence to sustain her good character and reputation. What were they called here for? Simply this: This lady had been examined as a witness in this case, and an effort had been made to impeach her veracity by this boy, who could know nothing about the general character of the lady, and whose feeling in this matter must have been that of spite, malevolence and mere family feeling. If he were a decent young man, he would not have come forward as he did. This appeal to open the case was not sought for by the counsel for the contestants. It was an appeal made to his Honor by the respectable counsel of this lady, who approached him and urged that the lady seeing the testimony of this boy in the papers, was so shocked and terrified that she walked her room all night long in a perfectly frantic state, and as soon as she could see them called in great distress of mind to implore them to open the case, so that she might introduce testimony to sustain her character. They asked that this case might be opened, not in regard to the merits of the case, but simply that they might introduce rebutting testimony in favor of Mrs. Crane.

Mr. Richardson, counsel for Mrs. Crane, said that when she was summoned before the Coroner, she was very ill, and she came to his office to consult with him about the necessity of her appearing here. He advised her personally, that she must go and give her evidence. When he was engaged in the Supreme Court, trying the case between her and her husband, when the son was acting in a most determinedly bitter manner in that Court towards her by affidavit, when the father had absconded from the country, leaving his affairs in the hands of his attorney, at this time this young man came forward voluntarily and pressed upon counsel his testimony against his mother-in-law, and that too, when they had a letter from him now in their hands, in which he expressed the utmost friendship and reverence for her, and desired that he might become a member of her family instead of remaining in his father's. His client came to his office, and in the greatest agony of mind, from finding that every newspaper in New-York was filled with attacks upon her character, to implore him to take the step now asked for. Her counsel had appealed to the Surrogate to open the case for the purpose of having her rights protected, and the scandal and abuse cast upon her by this son-in-law rebutted and met by citizens whose character was beyond all dispute. They desired to show the true character of this woman, and the true position of this son-in law, and put in here letters from both the father and son in reference to her, that would wipe out the stain which would otherwise rest upon her.

Mr. Clinton said it was proper that the gentleman, as the partisan counsel of this lady, selected by her to guard her interests in every possible way, should make precisely the remarks he did. The counsel said that he could show by letters of the father and son, what they really thought of her; that he (Mr. C.) held letters from this lady's mother, stating that these charges against Mrs. Crane were true. He (Mr. C.) would not have alluded to it but for the imprudent remarks of the counsel alluding to this young man as a young viper, because he had espoused the cause of his father and because he believed those rumors, which her own mother said were true, that she had slept with some man in his office. The counsel might thank himself for his allusions to the pretended letters of the father for the remarks he had made in regard to the mother of this lady. He did not suppose that his Honor would allow them to try this divorce suit between these respective parties, Mr. and Mrs. Crane, each accusing the other of rank adultery. He did not see that counsel were guilty of gross laches in not having their witnesses in Court. They were liable to the same calamity or misfortune, had they been guilty of the same negligence in having their witnesses in Court, whose impeachment had been attempted by the other side. Having contradicted Mary Donohue and proved that she said certain things in the presence of Governor Gunther, tomorrow they might come with an application to sustain her, and so they might go on ad infinitum. Facts had been communicated in relation to this Herkimer testimony, which they would like to spread upon the record as to the way in which it had been got up; and other facts, too, they would like to present, but his Honor must stop this case somewhere. He would like to have this case opened upon its merits. Notwithstanding the violent harangue upon the other side, he submitted that the case should not be opened in relation to this lady.

After remarks from Mr. Peck, counsel for Mrs. Crane, sustaining the position taken by Mr. Edwards, Judge Dean said that he did not regard the testimony of Mrs. Crane as at all material in this case. There was so much evidence from other parties in regard to Dr. Burdell's declarations, hostile as well as those of a more loving character, that he did not regard her testimony as at all material. If the case was to be opened, he thought the number of witnesses should be limited. If she were to call more than two, they ought, upon their side, to be allowed to go into testimony as to her character generally.

The Surrogate decided that he should limit the number to four.

Mr. Tilden, counsel for the contestants, said that he did not regard the testimony of Mrs. Crane as at all material, for the reason stated by his friend Judge Dean, that it related exclusively to a point which had been covered over and over again by other witnesses, who had not been impeached. So far as this case was concerned, it was of no consequence whether his Honor would grant this motion or not. They, therefore, should not regard it in case his Honor admitted witnesses to testify to the character of this lady, as a reopening of the case. The witness, Mrs. Crane, compelled by the mandate of law to testify here, had no opportunity to defend herself against the impeachment of her character made in this Court. It was a matter of discretion with his Honor whether he would open the case simply for the purpose of enabling her to vindicate her character. He was sure that for no other purpose would his Honor entertain the idea of reopening this much vexed, laborious and almost endless case. In respect to reopening it for this single purpose, they deemed it ungracious on their side to refuse the privilege asked for by the counsel of Mrs. Crane, to have the case reopened to admit the rebutting testimony which her counsel desired to introduce.

The Surrogate decided that he would reopen the case on Tuesday, June 30, at 10 o'clock A. M., and that the counsel for Mrs. Crane should be permitted to call four witnesses, after which he would decide whether or not he would grant the commission to California to take the testimony of Wm C. Hyde. He, also, notified counsel that he would then be prepared to hear their final arguments in the case.

Virginia Items.

A correspondent of the Lynchburg Courier, writing from Nelson County, says: This morning, some ten miles from this place, a desperate encounter took place between Messrs. HENRY H. HARRIS and BENJAMIN DIGGS. Each was armed with five-shooters, and although when firing at a tree, are very capital shots at long distances, when firing at each other, within a few steps, and both discharging the entire contents of the shooters, missed their aim. They then resorted to double-barrelled guns, at about thirty paces, Mr. H. receiving eleven buck-shot in the back. As Mr. D. made his escape, it is not known whether or not he was shot, but it is thought he was. Nelson County is hard to beat in the way of cutting, shooting, and maiming. In the last twelve years upwards of twelve persons have been killed, averaging one a year, and about twenty times that number either shot or stabbed; we say nothing of affrays where none of the parties have been wounded.

The Washington Star has the following: Yesterday, R. R. PRENTISS, Proctor of the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, arrived in Washington in quest of two students of that University named THOMAS P. BRANCH and C. IRWIN WILSON, who, in company with four others, left Charlottesville on Thursday in this direction for the purpose of fighting a duel. Warrants were issued, and one of the parties arrested by Officer KIMBALL, and he was taken before Justice GODDARD, where he proved to the satisfaction of the Justice and the prosecuting witness, that previous to the arrest the affair had been amicably adjusted. He was accordingly discharged, and the party returned to Charlottesville last evening by the Alexandria and Orange Railroad. The cause of the difficulty was not stated but was said to have been trifling.

One of the principals to the contemplated duel belonged to Georgetown, D. C., and the other in Petersburg, Va. All concerned in the affair were young men apparently between eighteen and twenty two years of age.

The Fredericksburg Herald states that Dr. C. HASLOW has sold his farm, containing ninety five acres, located about seven miles from that town, to Mr. MORRISON, of Delaware, for $1,937. Rev. Mr. OWENS bought some 300 acres of the farm next adjoining him, belonging to Mr. J. HOWISON, at $15 per acre, in Spotsylvania. Mr. W. ROFF, of Albany, N. Y., bought 500 acres more of Mr. HOWISON's farm, next adjoining town, for which he gave $17,500.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A dispatch from Albany states that it is still expected that the decision of the Court of Appeals in the Metropolitan Police case will be rendered to-day. A rumor was current in the City last evening that it had already been given, but it was of course untrue.

A dispatch from St. Johns, N. F, transmitted at 10:35 A. M., and received in Wall-street at 10:34 A. M., yesterday, announced a large steamer as having been seen off that point, heading West. The supposition is that it was the Persia, and, if so, she will probably reach this port this forenoon.

Partial returns have been received of the election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention in Kansas, and indicates, of course, the return of Pro-Slavery delegates almost exclusively, in consequence of the determination of the Free-State men to take no part in the contest. It is thought that the total vote will fall short of four thousand.

Orders have been issued to Lieut. CRAVEN from the Navy Department, for building boats and making other preparations for a Survey of the Darien Isthmus to determine definitely the practicability of a Ship Canal, and application has been made to the War Department for the assignment of an officer to coöperate with the expedition.

Elsewhere in our columns will be found the speech of Hon. WM. B. REED, our new Minister to China, delivered last evening at the public dinner given in his honor by prominent citizens of Philadelphia.

A new trouble has arisen in the Anti-Rent District, in the town of Berne, about twenty-two miles from Albany. Sheriff BRAYTON, with several deputies, on Saturday afternoon was proceeding there to make a sale of property held by a man named SHULTZ, when they were fired upon by some persons concealed in the bushes by the roadside. No one was injured, though one of the party received a shot through his hat. They immediately gave chase, and succeeded in capturing SHULTZ's son, who had a gun in his possession. The Sheriff then proceeded to Berne and made the sale without further trouble. Subsequently several other arrests were made, and young SHULTZ was committed after a preliminary examination.

Our readers this morning, will find another instructive and amusing letter from the "Bird in the Bush," which treats freely of local political affairs, and will prove worth the reading.

The Port Wardens have commenced suits in the Supreme Court of Kings County against several persons for violations of the Port Warden law of 1857, among whom are Capt. TINKHAM, one of the old Marine Surveyors, who was appointed one of the Port Wardens, but refused to be qualified: also, Messrs. FAYSTEIM, BURGESS, GLOVER and AVERY, besides several shipowners and masters of vessels, who have employed outsiders in violation of the statute. The penalty for employing persons not legally qualified to act under the law, is the same as for performing the duty. They have all been served with the complaint, and have each given bonds to take their trial at the next term. The decision of the constitutionality of this law will settle another fruitful source of contention.

Some additional appointments were made yesterday by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, who also removed another large batch of insubordinates. Applicants for appointment on both forces are very numerous. The injured men are doing well. Great interest was manifested yesterday as to the decision of the Court of Appeals, and there was much betting on it, the odds, until towards night, being in favor of the "Municipals."

The steamer Baltic is now entering passengers for her trip hence to Liverpool on the 15th of August. She has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and, with the important additions to her boilers and machinery, is expected to make better time than ever heretofore. She is still to be commanded by her old and popular Captain, COMSTOCK.

General WALKER's levee was better yesterday than any day yet. In the evening he dropped in at LAURA KEENE's, and made another two minutes' speech. The reception Committee are talking of a public dinner for him, at which it is hoped that he will deliver a speech of some length, in which he may indicate his intentions for Nicaragua and his own fortunes.

Holders of Nicaragua scrip were in spirits yesterday, at the sight of GEORGE LAW and General HENNINGSEN riding coolly through Broadway together.

During a heavy squall yesterday afternoon, several vessels lying in the North River, dragged their anchors. The ship Onward came in collision with the ship Webster, carrying away a portion of the ship's stern. The ship Anna Decatur, lying at Pier No. 11 N. R., broke loose from her moorings and ran foul of a brig, carrying away forward rails and head-gear. A small boat, when off the Battery, was also upset and two men that were in her were rescued by a Whitehall boatman.

There is nothing new from Seguine's Point or the new fever hospital. The work of preparing shanties goes on rapidly, but the oystermen wisely keep the peace yet.

The counsel for Mrs. MARY W. CRANE, whose testimony in the "Burdell case" before the Surrogate was impeached by her step-son last week, appeared yesterday morning before that officer, and claimed that the case should be reopened, in order to allow rebutting testimony for the purpose of sustaining her good character. The Surrogate decided that he would reopen the case on Tuesday, June 30, when counsel for Mrs. CRANE might call four witnesses to establish that point. He notified the counsel in the case that he would then be prepared to hear their final arguments.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening and adjourned, after having passed upon a few unimportant papers. The reports for the relief of Broadway were made the special order for Thursday next. The Board of Supervisors did not meet.

The proceedings in the Board of Councilmen last evening were brief, and of no public interest.

The number of arrivals at Castle Garden, from June 1 to Saturday at noon, was 17,134.

The Brooklyn Common Council last evening adopted a resolution withdrawing the consent of the city to the use of steam on Atlantic-street, and repealing all ordinances conflicting with this action; and also a resolution requesting the Long Island Railroad Company to take off steam.

DECISION OF THE COURT OF APPEALS IN THE CASE OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE BILL.—We have not thought it worth while to discuss the probabilities of the decision by the Court of Appeals in the case of the Metropolitan Police Bill, as the decision itself must so soon put all discussion and doubt on that subject at rest. But we have good reasons for stating that we believe the decision of the Court will be given in favor of the constitutionality of the bill by a very large majority. Such a decision will disappoint no one but Mayor WOOD and the deluded men who have trusted implicitly in the power and wisdom of that functionary. Of course he will not attempt to make any further opposition to the law after the decision of the Court of Appeals shall be made known; but he will quietly take his seat in the Board of Commissioners, and endeavor to obtain the control of the body which he has heretofore refused to recognize.

The Cotton-Supply Question.

All England is alarmed by the evident fact that the supply of cotton by no means increases proportionately to the demand. The statement is startling, and, being made while all England is yet flushed with the apparent victory of Free-Trade principles, cannot readily obtain credence. "The supply must increase with the demand," say all the wiseacres; "pay a higher price for it and more land will be planted; better tools and machinery will be used, and the supply will be enlarged." A constantly advancing price has been paid, more land has been cultivated, and some improvements doubtless have occurred in the method of cultivation. Yet it has been hard to get enough cotton to keep the mills running, and some have been obliged to work half-time, when they would have gladly doubled their hands.

The law of supply and demand can't be fallacious; this difficulty is only temporary, it continues to be said, and yet each year's experience shows the demand to be increasing far more rapidly than the supply. It cannot be thought that the area of soil lying in a suitable climate is too limited to furnish a supply to meet the demand when millions of acres of the richest land in the world remain in the shade of the primeval forest in the Southern States of America. Where, then, is the difficulty?

Is there anything in the climate or in the character of the labor required, to prevent a rapid transfer of laborers from other, and over-supplied fields to this? The Germans in Texas have proved that there is not.

The difficulty lies almost entirely in the effect of Slavery wherever it exists to greatly increase the cost of a laborer's comfort. The same labor, applied with the same skill and the same conveniences may produce five hundred dollars a year in cotton culture in Arkansas, and but half that when applied to wheat culture in Illinois; but two hundred and fifty dollars will house, clothe, and feed a man better in Illinois, educate his children and give him altogether a more satisfactory life, as a laboring man, than five hundred dollars will in Arkansas.

The German laborers in Texas, although their prosperity is universal, do not increase in number since their settlements originally made in the wilderness have been overtaken by the planters with their slaves. Sixty times as many white people move from the Slave States into the free as from the free into the Slave States.

Such facts as these are now much discussed in England, and the law they establish begins to be recognized as a permanent one. The system of Slavery insures in effect, a monopoly of cotton production on an extensive scale, to the owners of slaves. If cotton were fifty per cent. more valuable than it is now, the production would be accelerated very little more than proportionately to the reproductive power of the negroes, so long as slave-labor has this virtual monopoly of its production. We cannot expect, say the manufacturers, while that monopoly continues, to obtain a supply of the raw material which will enable us to meet the increasing demand for the manufactured article. The interests of commerce, of England, and of the world, demand now, therefore, that that monopoly be in some way overcome.

The only plan yet suggested for this purpose is that of establishing colonies of free labor in soils suitable for cotton culture. Such soils, recent experiments give reason to believe are to be found in Northern Africa. The cotton lately arriving at Havre from Algeria, has not only proved of admirable quality, but is reported to have cleared a handsome profit to its producers, beyond any Governmental encouragement. The Cotton-Supply Association, of Manchester, and the Liverpool Cotton Brokers' Association, have had their attention drawn to this fact, and much confidence is felt that the deficiency of supply arising from the limited labor which can be devoted to the staple in America, will thus be met.

Upon this the London Morning Post remarks:

"Now, if some extensive new cotton growths be developed, even although the first object shall have been to secure a merely supplementary quantity of the article, there is no saying whether this may not speedily supplant the American produce, instead of only covering the deficit in the market. If investments of this nature be once obtained, they will be limited solely and wholly to the capabilities of the fresh plantations brought thus into existence. It is quite possible that these may land a bale of cotton on the wharves of Liverpool as cheaply as the American plantations are now able to land it. It is quite possible that they may find means of doing this even more cheaply."

The threat is an old one to be sure, and our Southern friends have learned to laugh at it. Yet it cannot fail to strike sensible men that with every penny's rise in the price of cotton, the probability of its speedy accomplishment increases. And the mere suggestion that Europe may soon obtain its supply of cotton elsewhere than from the United States, is unpleasant to us. The income to the country, arising from our present export, is now about one hundred and thirty million dollars per annum.

Is it not possible to increase the supply of labor in the Slave States without resorting to the reëstablishment of the African Slave-trade, as argued in South Carolina? The only practical plan for this purpose which has been proposed is that of forming communities or neighborhoods of free working families, who, led by an industrial purpose and a prospect of profit, will establish themselves together in such a way as to maintain those social, industrial and moral advantages which the dispersing necessity of Slave agriculture renders generally impossible at the South.

Our Envoy to China.

The inevitable public dinner which overtakes most men at the end of their career, has befallen Mr. REED at the outset of his. Very sincerely do we hope that it may prove an augury of good to his mission. He goes from the city of Brotherly Love to deal with a people who have been most obstinately unfraternal in their relations with the rest of mankind. He will occupy a position of active neutrality between the impenetrable Celestial Empire and the Western Powers' resolved upon making a great breach in the venerable Chinese wall. He must maintain the present interests, and provide for the future expansion of American commerce with China as not to compromise us in the hostilities actually waging or to be waged, and yet he must keep us clear of the imputation of wishing to profit by the achievements without sharing in the effort of England and of France. It certainly is not easy to overstate the difficulties of such a position; nor does Mr. REED seem to be unaware of their number and their importance. Forewarned of what awaits him, it is but fair to conclude that he goes forearmed to meet it. And we look to him with confidence for practical results of such a nature as shall abundantly justify us in welcoming him on his return with a still better dinner and more speeches than we have bestowed upon him at his departure.

Important from the South.

Mr. THACKERAY opens his lecture on the third "of the fools and the scoundrels called GEORGE" with a story of his own childhood. He tells how the ship which brought him from his native land of India to England stopped on the way at an island; how he was then carried ashore by the faithful black servant to whom his father had entrusted him; how they two wandered through a little town, and were taken to see a simple country house, where, in a small garden, they beheld a small, stout, sallow-faced gentleman, in a broad hat, who was superintending some horticultural experiment, and how this small, stout, sallow-faced gentleman was described to him by his guardian, speaking loud, and with bated breath, as "the terrible ogre, BONAPARTE, who ate three sheep to his breakfast every day, beside all the little children he could get." This alarming story, adds Mr. THACKERAY, "was confirmed to me on my arrival in England by all to whom I mentioned the name of the formidable person that it had been my fortune to see." There is but little exaggeration in this picture of the English notion of NAPOLEON as it existed forty years since in the juvenile British mind. Nay, the schoolboy's frightful conception of this crowned and ravening beast, from whose devouring jaws Old England had so happily escaped, was hardly peculiar to the schoolboy. Grave men had their own monstrous ideas of the "Corsican adventurer," less absurd, indeed, but not less atrociously false and foolish than the spectral fancies of the child. Diplomatists, in their correspondence with each other and with the Continental Cabinets—orators, great and small, in Parliament and out of it—stately reviewers and laureate poets—were all alike enveloped in the same mist of prejudices. The author of Waverley, in his maturity, was not less ready to swallow the slanderous lies of a GOLDSMITH, than the author of Pendennis, in his boyhood, to believe the tremendous legend of his Oriental protector. Nor is it easy, now, to estimate how much of blood and of treasure—how many wrongs and losses in the past—how many heart-burnings, jealousies, and possible disasters, in the coming time—might have been spared to England and to France, had it been possible for the Englishmen of the old régime to do justice to the Dictator of Republican France, and for the modern Cæsar to comprehend the position and the character of his indomitable neighbor.

But it is, unfortunately, as true of nations as of men, that—

> "Others' follies teach us not,
> Nor much their wisdom teaches;
> And most of solid worth is what
> Our own experience preaches."

And so the mutual understanding, the interchange of common sense and common justice which would have converted the blundering deceivers of Amiens into honest negotiators, had to be learned by fire and sword, which though they be the best of arbitrators, are certainly the worst of teachers. The lesson which came so bitterly to the first NAPOLEON at Waterloo, and not much less bitterly to the grand-daughter of GEORGE III. in the Chapel of the Garter at Windsor, and beneath the dome of the Invalides at Paris, might have been learned with less pain surely, and perhaps with not less profit, from monitors less severe than sanguinary defeat and smiling humiliation.

Wherever two great and apparently irreconcilable systems, whether of thought, of society or of Government, are brought by the necessity of circumstances to face each other, their adherents have but one alternative, to understand each other, or to fight. The time allowed them for their decision may be longer or shorter, but to this complexion it must come at last. Arguments a priori and arguments a posteriori—the logic of feeling, and the logic of facts, alike force us to this one conclusion. There is no escape from it.

The Northern and the Southern States of this Union occupy precisely this position. The South has long and ably asserted it; the North is slowly and unwillingly admitting it. Our systems of society, our modes of life, are radically and absolutely dissimilar. Are they, therefore, irreconcilable—are they, therefore, necessarily and inevitably hostile to one another? Here are the questions which we should have the courage to meet, before they meet us, and overtake us with a crash instead of a solution. We have not had the courage to meet them. We at the North have winked them out of sight. Our brethren at the South have frowned them out of sight. To enter upon the discussion of them at the North has been heretofore denounced as treason. To hint at the discussion of them at the South is now to invite disgrace and death. We do most earnestly deplore and lament this state of things. It is inconsistent with the self-respect of freemen. It is incompatible with the safety of the Republic.

The "Slavery Question" is the gravest question which any existing nation is called upon to solve. Are we in a way to solve it? It calls upon the people whom it confronts, for the utmost calmness, the utmost fairness; for perfect freedom of investigation, for mutual toleration, and mutual forbearance? Are any of these conditions very hopefully fulfilled in our private or public consideration of the matter? What mean do we at the North observe between a reticence which would be contemptible if it were not so dangerous, and a rage which would be ridiculous were it not so odious? Do we not seem to suppose that out of the most inevitable and the most complicated of national dilemmas, we can be extricated by the combined and counteracting force of ignorant or cowardly demagogues who deny its existence, and of fever-smitten fanatics who proclaim it insoluble?

And at the South what progress do we see towards such a condition of the popular mind as shall justify us in hoping for anything like a rational conclusion of this imbroglio? So little, that we find ourselves astonished at reading in the Charleston Courier so gracious an admission as the following: "It is entirely within the reach of our comprehension that an Abolitionist, in the sense in which that term is used in reference to the institution of domestic Slavery, may be an honest Christian gentleman!" Not much this to be thankful for! [illegible] will say—that one of the most grave and peaceful of Southern journals actually professes itself able to believe that a man may agree in opinion with three-fourths of the civilized world, without forfeiting his claims to common respect! And yet it is much to be thankful for. For the South has been and is in the habit of treating the faintest indications of disapproval of the Institution of Slavery as proof positive that he in whom they appeared must have a bad heart, a worse head, and a soul not worth the saving. The man who should venture in a Southern city to suggest the most practical aspect of the controversy, would be howled against on the spot as savagely as if he had waved the red flag of revolt over the plantations of a dozen States. To aver that land in Ohio sells at a higher rate than land in Kentucky, is to be an "Abolitionist"—to prove that the cotton-lands deteriorate under Slave-labor, and to show that under Free labor they might improve, is to be an "Abolitionist"—and to be an "Abolitionist" is to be a demon in human shape. You may be the veriest of Gradgrinds—you may agree with the Harvard Professor, who held "philanthropy to be the worst passion of our nature;" your objections to Slavery may be wholly lucrative—utterly immoral—it doesn't signify in the least. An "Abolitionist" you are—for you hemp grows and crab-trees put forth their branches—for you North Carolina yields the adhesive life-blood of her pines—for you the bird of Michaelmas surrenders his downy robes.

While things are in this state, the true patriot may well tremble for the future of a people so angrily divided and so mutually unjust. And we cannot, therefore, withhold the expression of our satisfaction at the discovery which has been made by our Charleston cotemporary. We hope it may be tested by all the intellects of the South. For if it is properly digested, and properly applied, it may result in the abundant production of the one sure panacea, yet discovered for all the diseases of emotion and of interest—the ancient "simples" of common sense and common justice.

The Press in Diplomacy.

The loose talk of paragraphists, who play with newspaper columns as if they were popguns, sometimes causes a deal of mischief, quite disproportionate to either the capacity or the intentions of the parties responsible.

The force of nonsense follows the law of gravitation in the conditions of its increase, and a phrase which disturbed no man's breakfast in the town where first it saw the light, may gravely compromise the character of a city, and even complicate the affairs of a nation, at the distance of a hundred miles or a thousand leagues.

Our rural and provincial neighbors, for instance, have been grievously exciting themselves for some time past over the approach of anarchy in this Metropolis. The social catastrophe of New-York has been looked for as confidently as the coming of the final comet—with this difference, that while nobody is responsible for the comet, we of the Metropolitan Press must bear our share of accountability for the perturbation that has been caused in the brains and the sympathizing tumult that has been evoked in the hearts of our Arcadian friends. The worst results that can flow from this idle panic about the stability of the Island of Manhattan, and the seven hundred thousand "adventurers" who have set up their tents of freestone, brick and mortar thereupon, will be the momentary diversion of a few letters from our Post-Office to those of smaller and less conspicuous centres, and a dangerous inflation of the organ of self-complacency in the heads of some of our fellow-citizens of other States. New-York is, after all, her own best friend, as she is certainly her own worst enemy, and she will take very decent care of herself.

But it really is a matter of some importance that, in regard to questions of foreign policy, some greater reticence and thoughtfulness of expression should be observed than has always obtained even in our leading journals. Exaggerated statements of the public feeling in regard to points of which, in nine cases out of ten, the "public" knows nothing, and cares less; formidable innuendoes as to "purposes" of the Administration, whereof, in the majority of instances, the Administration turns out to have been as innocent as the compositors who set up the alarming and mysterious suggestions—gunpowder proclamations about the things which are, and are not, compatible with a "national policy," which most of those who talk of it the most loudly, would find it as hard to define as it would be for them to specify the length of the Chinese Emperor's sacred finger-nails—all such declamatory explosions of verbiage as these, which would do no sort of harm if they never went out of the country, do occasionally, and very seriously interfere with the progress of important negotiations, by creating the most unreasonable impressions in the minds of a foreign people who take them at a false estimate of their value. So it has been, for example, with the fulminations of certain journals in regard to New-Granadian affairs. No sensible man who has enjoyed any opportunities of understanding what was going on at Washington, has ever imagined for an instant that we were "going to war" with New-Granada. The idea was so ridiculous on the face of it that people thought it a fair topic for a little harmless display of Buncombe. The display was made. And now, we find, by our last files, that the anticipation of hostilities between the United States and New-Granada, is thought likely to make still more grave the whole Isthmian question in the English Parliament, and between the diplomatists of the two countries. Of course no such consequences will follow. Of course we shall deal with New-Granada firmly but sensibly, and New-Granada will yield us our just rights in the matters of dispute between us. But this does not affect the fact, that heedless and headlong animadversions upon questions which concern a foreign people, and in regard to which, therefore, the observations of our press will be taken by that people as seriously offered, can never fail to do more harm than was meant. Our most pressing foreign "difficulty" at this moment, is the Central American imbroglio with England. To keep this question open is utterly undesirable. Demagogues and conspirators alone can profit by any delay in the settlement of issues which could be arranged, as Lord ELGIN felicitously said in his place in Parliament, by two honorable and intelligent gentlemen after an hour's conversation. Every step of Lord CLARENDON in the recent negotiations which have taken place upon this subject, has been marked by the most unmistakable good will to this country. Whatever the past policy of England or the United States may have been, nothing is more certain than that the interests of the two countries upon all the points of contact between them are identical. If England were governed by a Sir CHARLES NAPIER's insatiable love of conquest for conquest's sake—or if America were ruled by a JEFFERSON DAVIS, frantic for the ruin of the Union and the foundation of a new Southern empire, it might not be easy to bring matters to a peaceful, because it would be impossible to bring them to an honest solution. But, with plain rights, and only plain rights on the one hand, and on the other to be guaranteed—and the best disposition on the one hand, and on the other to see these plain rights of either party so established, nothing ought to be suffered to interrupt the satisfactory arrangement of our difficulties. And the press on both sides, above all, should justify its position in the van of a true and civilized diplomacy, by care and consideration in the discussion, not of the main question only, at issue between the two countries, but of such collateral subjects as may afford an indication either to England or to America, of the temper and spirit of the rival nations whose rivalry can only be profitable to either while it is profitable to both; and whose mutual relations will be firm and satisfactory in exact proportion to the frankness, the sincerity, and the good feeling of either party.

British Colonial Government.

The pending difficulty between the colony of Newfoundland and the mother country, in relation to the Fishery treaty between France and England, affords, probably, the most recent illustration of the folly of administration, by one central Government, of a score of separate and distant Parliamentary systems. It matters not whether the basis of the Fishery treaty be free trade, or a simple desire to extend an expensive courtesy to the imperial Government of LOUIS NAPOLEON. In either case, the persevering efforts of England, for many years, to legislate for Newfoundland, in opposition to the wishes of the whole people, and the threats of disfavor and punishment with which her endeavors have been accompanied, prove how slowly the teachings of modern political economy are received by statesmen, when State policy points in a different direction. ADAM SMITH asserted, sixty years ago, that "the exclusive end and only object of colonial dominion is commercial monopoly." So little progress is made by rulers that Earl GREY, in 1853, expressed his "deliberate opinion" that "it would be far better to part with the colonies at once, than to retain them on condition of having the onerous duty of defending and protecting them, without the exercise of any substantial authority." The "substantial authority" then referred to was the right of sending convicts to Van Diemen's land, in opposition to the wishes of the people of that island! In like manner Lord CLARENDON instructed Mr. ADDINGTON to write to Newfoundland that unless that colony should assent to measures, in favor of France, which would ruin the island, the "protection" of Great Britain would be withdrawn!

England's dominion extends from the rising to the setting of the sun. Her colonial rule is the best in the world. Thanks to the thinking supremacy of Great Britain, the old mercantile idea that colonies were merely markets for English manufactures, and reservoirs for products less advantageously obtainable from other sources, has been, in a great measure, abandoned. The active agitation from HUSKISSON's day down to the era of Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH, of the question how far Colonies were of use at all, has completely overturned the "mutual dependency" system of the last century. The discovery has been made that supplies, from and for the Colonies, can be procured by each, elsewhere, at lower prices than from each other. England can buy her indigo, coffee, sugar and cotton cheaper from the United States, Cuba, &c., than from her dependencies; and the Colonies can get iron, silk, wool and manufactures in more advantageous markets than in England. Self-interest has inaugurated a new commercial era, and the abandonment of protective and differential taxes and duties. The revolutionary principle of economy has overthrown many of the despotic international antiquities which, until recently, governed Great Britain. The consequence, however, is that the Colonies are now recognized to be of no commercial profit whatever, and that the highest wisdom of modern rule has been shown to consist in not ruling at all. The efforts which are sometimes made, as in the case of Newfoundland, to depart from the sagacious policy of non-interference, must always end in the discomfiture of the home Government, and, in extreme cases, in declarations of independence similar to those which have so repeatedly been made by Colonies in North and South America.

Each colony of freemen must, of necessity, have its own legislation, its own peculiar homogeneity, and frequently be in distinct antagonism with the land of its origin, on points of local interest. Hence, the colonial history of England, especially at a period anterior to the present, has been an ever-flowing stream of jealousies, strifes, discords, complaints, rebellions, hatreds and difficulties—ending, invariably, in humiliating concessions on the part of the mother country. Only pride, and tho most unjustifiable and unprofitable self-glorification could wish to perpetuate, at an expense of £4,000,000 a year, such disastrous connections. They necessitate otherwise useless fleets and armies in time of peace, and constitute, in time of war, a most grievous yoke and burden. Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH estimated the expense of the colonies as equal to the united income, sugar, and malt tax, and repeatedly proved that a universal war would cost England, on their account, double the expense. Yet, with this knowledge, and in the teeth of the disastrous experience of centuries, the British Government have persisted in the endeavor to compel Newfoundland into acquiescence with a measure which would destroy her commerce, cripple that of Labrador, and seriously encroach upon the fishery rights of the United States. We are led, by recent accounts, to hope that Lord PALMERSTON has determined to drop the whole question, and that Newfoundland representations will have had more weight than was at first intended; but the lesson taught is fraught with interest and instruction for statesmen everywhere, and it is to be hoped that they will lastingly profit by it.

ONE-SIDED NEWS.—It is dangerous to place implicit reliance on one-sided statements in political matters. The Boston Post, which appears to depend upon papers of its own stripe in this City for local intelligence, says:

"Mayor WOOD is yet Mayor of New-York—SIMEON DRAPER has discharged his police—the old municipal authorities are in full power, and CONOVER has retired to bind up his cracked head. Gov. KING has indicated his displeasure at the conduct of his officials, and they have, accordingly, drawn in their horns."

There is a grain or two of truth in this summary; but SIMEON DRAPER has not discharged his police, nor is there any probability of his doing so; CONOVER has not retired, nor has Governor KING indicated his displeasure at his officials, unless he did it in a very private manner. Mayor WOOD is yet Mayor, it is true, but, as his term does not expire until the 31st of next December, there is no necessity of announcing that he still lives officially.

A HANDSOME REWARD.—It will be seen by referring to the letter of a correspondent in another column, that a reward of five hundred dollars is offered to any one who will give such information in relation to the late alleged bargaining for the office of Street Commissioner, as will lead to the presentation by the Grand Jury of the parties concerned in that business. The offer is made in perfectly good faith, and we will guarantee the payment of the money on the conditions being complied with. A very excellent opportunity is hereby offered for any person having a competent knowledge of the affair to earn five hundred dollars, and at the same time render a great service to the public.

Beef Cattle Coming.

A special correspondent of the TIMES writes that in the early part of last week he saw a large number of loaded cattle trains coming eastward from Cleveland, Ohio. On Wednesday, by the politeness of the Superintendent of the Cleveland and Erie, and the Cleveland and Columbus Railroads, he was permitted to examine their car registers, from which it appeared that during Monday and Tuesday, and on Wednesday morning, 106 full car loads of stock, mostly beeves, had come eastward. Most of these, with many others at different points, were destined for this market. The present prospect is that we shall still have an abundance of beef at reasonable prices, notwithstanding the fears awakened three and four weeks since.

A BUST OF DR. BELLOWS.—When a man makes himself famous, the next step is for somebody to preserve him in plaster; and the cheapest of all the materials used in art is a more precious testimonial of popularity than precious metal or precious stone. We saw yesterday a miniature bust in plaster, by a German artist named KUNZ, of Rev. Dr. BELLOWS, who has become more renowned by means of his sermon on theatres, than by any of his previous exercises. The bust is a very excellent likeness of Dr. BELLOWS.

Personal.

At the late Commencement of the University of Nashville, the honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred on Professor WM. M. GILLESPIE, of Union College, Schenectady.

Commodore JONES, says the States, was attacked with an affection of the heart about two weeks ago, from which he recovered; but, subsequently, in consequence of excitement produced by some incident occurring in one of the Naval Courts of this city, he was again prostrated, though with dissimilar symptoms, and has not since rallied. Yesterday his condition was regarded as very critical, if not helpless, though, at 3 o'clock P. M., the moment of our latest information, there had appeared a slightly favorable change. He is under the medical treatment of Dr. LAUB, of Georgetown. Commodore JONES is 66 years old.

Musical.

Mad. LA GRANGE'S second concert last night attracted a full and fashionable audience—the best we have seen for some months. It was a very agreeable affair.

It is rumored that Mad. LA GRANGE will not sail for Europe on the 24th, but, in all probability, repeat some of her former operatic roles in a short season at the Academy. There seems to be a difficulty about the tenor. Every one will be glad to hear that LA GRANGE will not leave us.

General Walker's Movements—His Speech at Laura Keene's Theatre—A Dinner.

General WALKER was kept more busy, yesterday, than upon any day since his arrival in New-York, in receiving calls from all sorts of persons, distinguished and otherwise; among them were J. S. THRASHER, Esq., and several ladies. General HENNINGSEN rode out with GEORGE LAW, and there was a good time generally among the Filibusters at the apparently growing attention paid to them and their Chief.

In the evening, General WALKER paid a visit to LAURA KEENE's Theatre, as announced. He arrived about 9½ P. M., in company with Captain FAYSOUX, Colonel WATERS, General HENNINGSEN, and others. His entrance was greeted by cheers and clapping of hands from the full house which had assembled to get a view of the chief of the Filibusters. The Orchestra played "Hail Columbia." In the Parquette, those under the galleries, crowded down in front, filling up the aisles and gaping with intense curiosity at the box in which he and his friends had taken their seats. The play was interrupted for several minutes by calls for "WALKER,"—"Speech,"—"Three cheers for General WALKER,"—calls for HENNINGSEN, &c. WALKER rose several times and bowed civilly, but resolutely refused to speak. The Orchestra finally broke the suspense, and the play went on, but there were ten looking at the front balcony to one at the stage. When the curtain fell at the close of the third act the clamorous calls of the multitude brought the General to his feet. The noise ceased, and the reporters seized their pencils in breathless suspense to catch the words as they fell from the lips of the speaker. He said: "In behalf of those who have struggled and suffered and died—in behalf of a cause tending to promote American greatness and American glory, I thank you for your expression of approbation. This exhibition of your hearty approval consoles us for our sufferings, our fastings and the dangers and death we have had to encounter. With these, the soldier can go on, no matter how great the difficulties may seem which lie in his way. With such hearty expressions of your approbation and your sympathy, we will renew the contest, and hope for a sure and speedy triumph of our cause." As he took his seat, cheers and cries for HENNINGSEN and others arose, until the orchestra drowned the noise, and the play once more proceeded.

The friends of Gen. WILLIAM WALKER contemplate giving him a grand dinner before his departure from the City, for the purpose of affording him a fair opportunity of expressing his views on Nicaragua and his fillibuster movements. Owing to the unpleasant state of the weather on the day of his reception, he was unable to address the assemblage in the Park, and many having been disappointed in not hearing him, it has been suggested to honor him with a grand dinner, and an opportunity to speak.

The Reception Committee hold a meeting on Wednesday night, when it will be finally arranged.

Gen. WALKER will remain at the Lafarge Hotel for a day or two longer, when he will take up his residence at a private house, and will in the course of a week or so return South, first visiting Philadelphia and Washington.

An invitation has been tendered him to visit Albany, but we understand he has declined, on account of important business, which will shortly call him to the capital of the Union.

Marine Intelligence.

The ship ashore near the Woodlands, was not the Flora, as reported, but the Knickerbocker from Liverpool. She has been towed up to the City by the steamer Hercules.

Speech of Hon. Wm. B. Reed, our Minister to China.

As previously appointed, last evening the public dinner to Hon. WM. B. REED, our new Minister to China, "given by prominent merchants, politicians and citizens of Philadelphia, came off at the La Pierre House in that city. The following is Mr. REED'S speech in acknowledgment of the compliment:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN—I have a very few words of earnest gratitude to utter for this mark of your good will. They come, believe me, from the fullness of a heart deeply touched by what has to-day been so kindly and gracefully said.

Thirty-one years ago exactly, I left the city of Philadelphia as the humblest member of a diplomatic mission, dispatched on what was supposed to be an errand of benificence to the world, and privantage to our own country especially. The mission proved a sad failure, and the only persons who derived any benefit from it, or had even any enjoyment, was the class to which I belonged, whose duties consisted in copying a few dispatches, being assiduously attentive at all places of public amusement, and studying a foreign language under the most agreeable circumstances and the most fascinating auspices. Such, to this point, is the diplomatic experiance of my life. This is the exact measure of my real task. There was, however, gentlemen, one benefit of inestimable value which that brief experience gave me—of association, the closest, the most confidential and affectionate, with one whose memory is dear in this community (Mr. SERGEANT.) I need hardly say to you, Mr. President, who knew him as well as I did, to whom I refer. He was not only my kinsman, but my friend, my counsellor, and guide in early life and early manhood; and it is to his precept and example I owe, with many debts besides, the invigoration of that sentiment of State loyalty—consistent with national feeling—love for Pennsylvania, affection for what Doctor FRANKLIN long ago called "dear Philadelphia," which, if I know my own heart, has been the controlling influence on my public life; and, if I had no other reason for the political course which I felt it my duty to pursue, I found one in this—that it had for its aim the elevation to the Presidency of a Pennsylvania statesman who, with a singleness of purpose beyond all praise, is now trying to keep his faith to the Nation, and to execute his high trust on principles of enlightened and conservative patriotism.

Thirty-one years ago! This is no small portion of human life—and these years have been passed, wholly under your eye, in the labor of my profession, in public trusts conferred by you, as your representatives in the councils of the State and City, and in semi judicial functions still more responsible; and now that I am about to venture on a different ephere, and in doing so to leave you, with all the perils of such separation, I feel more sensibly than I can describe, this proof, that all these years of life have not been fruitless, but that I have won and now enjoy your confidence and esteem—that I leave friends behind me who will care for me, and think of me, and be proud of my success, if I succeed in the distant and doubtful enterprise on which I am venturing. To you, my immediate friends and townsmen, I owe more than I can ever repay; and yet this, your kind farewell, affects me more than all beside. It is your approval that I prize. For it I have been most sollcitous, and I venture to add, that when the President did me the honor to offer me this responsible mission, I paused long enough before accepting it, to be made conscious that my immediate fellow-citizens—the men of business and character here, without distinction of party, approved his selection heartily, and, I believe unanimously. For all this, again I thank you and them.

And now, gentlemen, shall I veuture to say a word or two as to the future—my future as one of the representatives of the United States abroad—the future of our country in its relations to the mysterious Empire to which I am accredited? There are, of course, official proprieties imposing some reserve, which no one will expect me to violate; but there is, on the other hand, an official affectation which here, at least, I should be sorry to be suspected of. There is, I imagine, a marvellous exaggeration about this thing called diplomacy, and diplomatic reserve, if not diplomatic reputation. It is Lord CHESTERFIELD, I think, who, describing the mysterious journey of a German diplomatist, says: "The mystery was not on account of the journey, for he made the journey for sake of the mystery." I have no desire that there should be any unnecessary mystery about my errand. A character for diplomatic skill sometimes does a man harm. I am in no danger of suffering in this way, for there has been said to me by some who have criticised my appointment, what I cannot but suspect was an unintentional compliment, in being described as one "wholly without diplomatic experience," (which I freely admit)—a specimen of that "natural curiosity" known the world over as "a Philadelphia lawyer," and with some share of tact, shrewdness and common sense. Now it seems to me the point of the praise—if such was meant—lies in this last attribute, for, after all, gentlemen, it is "common sense," enlightening a loyal American heart which must guide me now.

China is a place where the homely quality called mother wit is very much in requisition. The public men are well educated, shrewd masters of the science of courtesy, and eminently diplomatic in the technical sense of the word—they are very apt to get the better of those who try these weapons with them. There is nothing like precedent or authority to regulate intercourse in that region of isolation. One approaches Chinese diplomacy very much as the navigator approaches the Chinese coasts. There are no light-houses, no buoys, no signs of friendly counsel or guidance. They want no strangers, and they help none to come. The gallant ship which is to bear me must find her way into their ports and rivers by the skill and courage of the American men on board of her, and will anchor there without a word of welcome, except from strangers like herself. But, thus piloted, she will get securely in. She will be safe and respected under her flag—aggressive in no act, for her errand is a peaceful one, but ready to resent insult, and to give prompt protection where protection is due.

My mission, I sincerely hope, may not be unlike my ship. Its animating spirit, vigilance over my country's interests, consciousness of power, reluctance to use it, fidelity to my country's traditions and republican faith. I can honestly say I go abroad with no despondency as to the future, no want of self reliance, if the anchorage which my education has given me only holds. I am proud to belong to that school which believes in the traditionary policy of this nation as it first came from the lips of WASHINGTON, and as it has been maintained with certain mischievous aberrations, ever since. There is not on the pages of our brief history an instance of a departure from WASHINGTON'S foreign policy unattended with mischief to all parties concerned. It is this belief, this implicit faith, resting on principle which alone can guide me through the perplexities of a state of distant warfare to which we are no parties. I have no foreign sympathies or antipathies. I have no cosmopolitan enthusiasm. I have a suspicion there is more danger from too many treaties than too few, especially of undertaking to regulate other people's concerns, on the general policy of the earth and sea they assume the forms of "guarantees." I go abroad—and I hope in this to carry out the views of the Government—with a fixed resolution to avoid such diplomatic complications which, even before my day is over, would be sure to breed new controversies and new dangers to those who are now friends, and who can best keep so by not being too intimate.

But, gentlemen, on the other hand, let me not, either here or elsewhere, be understood as saying, that from the legitimate communion and sympathies of the civilized nations of the world with regard to China, the United States should stand coldly aloof. Almost every practical question to be there determined has relations to others beside ourselves. We have nothing to ask that other may not share; but we choose to ask it in our own way, and in our own good time. No one can find fault. It can be no part of the duty of an American representative to be the sullen spectator of what others are doing and have a perfect right to do; to exchange no word of counsel; to refuse or omit to confer frankly and fully on matters of common interest; for such there are of vast moment. I am more than content,—I go abroad with great anxiety, on all subjects of common and legitimate interest, to have an early and sincere avowal of views and intentions, and to try to interchange, with the representatives of every friendly power in the Chinese vicinage, mutual good offices. I do not presume to be a mediator in other people's quarrels, but I shall be proud to show, by example at least, that Peace can win victories as well as war. The fault will not be mine, gentlemen, if there be any efficacy in candor and fair dealing, if I am not on the best terms with every one in similar trust, belligerent or neutral, and this without disparaging entanglement. I rely on my common sense, and I hope kindly disposition, to effect this result in spite of my inexperience.

I go abroad with a clear sense of responsibility to public opinion at home, the only responsibility an American public man should know. I recognize it fully; and it does not require much foresight to determine what it will exact with reference to this Oriental communication. It will exact there, as everywhere, defence to what in distant excitements are sometimes lost sight of—the restraints of the Constitution of the United States, which happily denies the power to shed blood to the Executive, or to an Executive subordinate. I have heard people, who ought to know better, talk of seizing or conquering Islands in the Eastern seas, as if it were as easy a thing as for an old sea-rover to locate a land warrant in one of our Western Territories. Other nations may fight, and conquer, and colonize, by the mere force of executive will. We—and we ought to be grateful for the restraint—can only do so when the whole representation of the people is authorizes it, or the actual hand of aggression and insult is raised against us—and then we can fight as effectively as other people.

I make these observations, gentlemen, because in the loose talk which excitement and a sense of commercial injury provoke, these land marks are often lost sight of, and the well defined restraints of the Constitution ignored. I mean to try to remember them even on the other side of the globe.

With these lights, with this consciousness of duty at home, with the Constitution and the traditional policy of my country always before my eyes, with the strongest desire to be on friendly terms with all, with a determination to demand all that my country has a right to ask, I trust I can exercise the large discretion which distance requires and which the confidence of the President has clothed me with, without a fear, I will not say, of failure; for really with a people so peculiar as the Chinese, nine times in ten failure is a probability, but without discredit abroad or at home. I hope I am not presumptuous in this. It is not self-complacency. It is common sense, self reliance. It is patriotism of the most homely texture.

And let no one, and, least of all, no one of you, my friends and fellow-citizens, who know and can measure the personal sacrifices I am making, underrate the importance of the trust I have assumed. It is certainly no diplomatic sinecure. It is no obscure function. By one of those sudden whims our planet sometimes makes, China and Chinese affairs have presented themselves in most imposing interest to the eyes of mankind. They discovered Great Britain the other day; the English people forgive, whether rightly or wrongly I do not pretend to say, that a point of honor was involved. It occupies the attention of the two great empires of Continental Europe, and in Paris and St. Petersburg there are sagacious, far-seeing men, now scanning the map of the distant world.

It has stirred the commercial policy of the smaller States for, I observe, they are dispatching ships of war and diplomatic agents to the scene of trouble. The sympathies of Christendom are awakened, from the venerable power of the Church of Rome through every denomination of Protestant Christians which has made a missionary experiment; and China, which, from 1840 to this day, has been relatively forgotten, except by the never-sleeping vigilance of commercial men interested in its peculiar trade, China looms up from the dim distance as the great object of the world's interest just now; and I venture to affirm that no civilized nation has more direct and important relations to China than the United States. Not England, with her string of colonial settlements, and her military and commercial marine in every nook and corner of the world—not imperial Russia, with her conterminous territory extending over sixty degrees of longitude—none have more direct interest than this Republic, mainly through its youthful settlement of the Western coats. When Mr. CUSHING, after the negotiation of his treaty of 1844, turned his face homeward by the way of the Pacific, he had to seek his path through Mexico, and a friendly hand or voice, no sound of his mother tongue, greeted him on the soil of this continent. In four years the flag of this Union, planted by the hand of unexpected conquest—planted by the Navy of the United States; always ready for gallant enterprise—floated in every part of California: and now, thirteen years later still, a great and prosperous community, American in name, in organization, in feeling, and most American in energy and enterprise, has been created, which claims an interest in the commerce of the East, beyond all measurement.

Across the waters of the Pacific ocean, in the extreme northeast, is a growing commerce of vast amount, or the beginning of it, with the Russian ports and great rivers, and in the south, from Australia to China, come to us the familiar sounds of the English language, words, we may always hope, of peace, and friendliness, and good will, to meet the echo from our shores of the same friendly voices, mingled with respectful and decisive warning, that on this continent it is better for all parties there should be no intrusion, no interference—that our progress is the progress of free principles of trade and security of commerce under law everywhere, and no enlightened nation need be afraid of it. Gentlemen, there has always seemed to me something sublime in the last century's growth of this language of ours, and now that the circle is nearly complete, all who speak it may proudly and gratefully think of it. Just one hundred and two years ago, a hostile army hung upon our western frontier, routed within twenty four hours' ride of this spot, with fearful carnage, the only Anglo-American force between the Ohio and the seaboard, and threatened this city of Philadelphia with despoilation or conquest. The English language and with it constitutional liberty were in danger here. In the East, in India, the struggle was equally doubtful, and yet in both hemispheres it prevailed; and now, as I have said, the century's triumph is complete. Victoria and San Francisco (I wish both had Anglo Saxon names) are within hailing distance, and the commerce of the Pacific—to be increased to our benefit immeasurably by freedom of intercourse with China—is mainly in the hands of those who speak our mother tongue. If my mission shall succeed in enlarging and liberalizing the free commerce of the world, of which we Americans always manage to get our full share, if we have a fair chance—if something more than mere superficial intercourse with China can be created—if the free navigation, in some form, of her great rivers can be secured, without discoloring her waters by one drop of blood—if the scourge of piracy can be wrested from the outlaw hand that wields it—if the just claims of our citizens can be adjusted—if this or anything like this can be accomplished, I shall feel and hope you, my friends and neighbors, will feel with me that the ambition to whose temptation I have now yielded has not been an unworthy one.

I try to look at this new function of mine from an elevated point of view, and, though no diplomatic expert, to contemplate it from a statesmanlike platform; and this, too, with an intense impulse of selfish patriotism. I met in New-York, the other day, some most accomplished and intelligent gentlemen, professors of a peculiar geographical faith, who sought to convince me that the real centre of the world's commerce was the Mediterranean, and particularly that corner of it known as the Levant; that, by a proper application of the energies of man, and America was to contribute a full share, Tyre and Sidon were to rise from their graves in the sea, and Carthage was to be restored, and Venice become again a commercial queen, and the great route of the world's traffic was to be from China and India, across Persia and Asiatic Turkey; and that all this was far better than Pacific railroads across a dreary continent and long voyages in the Western seas. It was all very plausible and very captivating, but one element was wanting to accomplish my conversion. It wanted nationality. It measured lines of distance from New-York and Boston to the Levant and the Persian Gulf, and it showed how much shorter would be this line of commerce; but it ignored the great inland west of our country. It excluded that wonderful community of enterprise on the Pacific coast. It shut its eyes to the great hands of railway throughout this continent, and I turned from it, kindly and respectfully, to its projectors, to the more homelike theory that the true course of the world's commerce from the East must be across the Pacific—narrowing every day by the power of steam, and over our own territory—safer, surer, and more peaceful than the fragmentary barbarous power of Asia ever can be, and protected by the one great charter, the Constitution and the Union.

These are my visions, gentlemen. It is, I repeat, a high ambition to try to see them realized. If, on my errand, I fail, I am sure you will judge me kindly. If I succeed, how proudly and gratefully shall I bring my honors back, and lay them at the feet of the loving mother that has nurtured me and now sends me forth with her kind wishes for my welfare.

Again I thank you, and now, old you farewell.

THE THUNDER-STORM OF YESTERDAY.—About 1½ o'clock yesterday morning, the thunder-storm which had done such serious mischief at Washington on the previous afternoon, reaching Baltimore in the evening, and Philadelphia about 11 o'clock at night, broke in full force upon this City and its environs. It was, according to universal report, one of the most tremendous tempests that was ever witnessed in this latitude. The lightning certainly was the most vivid and incessant that we ever beheld. So continuous were the flashes, and so imperceptible the interval between them, that they seemed literally to run into one another, and kept the sky in one continual terrific blaze. Far brighter than the broadest glare of noon-day, they penetrated the remotest corners and crannies of houses, revealing secrets that the unsuspected spiders had carefully shrouded for years. The thunder was equally remarkable, one peal breaking upon another before it had died away, rolling and reverberating around the sky as if caught and repelled by a thousand angry echoes. So for nearly an hour the storm lasted, the rain meanwhile falling in torrents. And for a long time after the thunder and lightning had proceeded on their journey Northward, the rain continued to fall as if we had been strangers to it for many weeks past, and the country were suffering from drouth. Strange to say, we have not heard of any accidents.

NINTH WARD REPUBLICANS CONCERNING THE RIOT.—At a meeting of the Ninth Ward Republican Association, held on Thursday evening, the 18th inst., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Republican Association of the Ninth Ward heartily approve of the prompt and judicious action of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, in enforcing the laws against a violent and factious mob, led on by FERNANDO WOOD, in his rebellious opposition to the laws and the legal processes of the established judicial tribunals.

Resolved, That the Metropolitan Policemen and the citizens who so bravely, at the peril of their lives, engaged in enforcing legal process against the murderous attacks of the ruffians who took possession of the City Hall, are entitled to the thanks and gratitude of all law-abiding citizens.

Resolved, That we will sustain, by all lawful means, the Commissioners, in their commendable efforts to preserve the peace and protect the lives and property of the citizens of this great City.

DOGS' DEATHS.—During the week ending June 20th, 838 dogs, consisting of all grades and conditions, New-foundland, Scotch and Bull Terriers, Pointer, Blood-hounds, Spaniel, common cur and poodle, have been killed in accordance with City ordinances and sent to the dead animal contractor's dock at the foot of 45th street, and immediately transferred to Barren Island, with 31 dead horses, 4 cows and 11 hogs.

Frogs in Albany.

People in the vicinity of Utica are turning their attention to raising frogs, which, when fat and cooked, are devoured by the people who reside at the Capital of the State. The frequenters of a single restaurant in Albany consume two hundred per week. Those who have visited Albany say the effect is perceptible in the people there.

GOLD IN VIRGINIA.—We had the pleasure yesterday of meeting Mr. GEORGE W. FISHER, who showed us some specimens of gold ore, from the Norvell Mines, in Albemarle. One specimen was valued at $220, and another at $45.—Richmond Enquirer.

Crops in Eastern and Central Ohio.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NEWARK, Ohio, Friday, June 19, 1857.

During a week past I have gone over the route from Buffalo, along the Lake shore to Cleveland; thence across eastern Ohio through the counties of Portage, Stark, Columbiana, Carroll, Jefferson, and west through Harrison, Tuscarawas, Coshocton, Muskingum, into Licking, of which this place (Newark) is the capital town. The grass crop I find abundant everywhere, though of a less rank growth in Ohio than in New York State. Clover fields in Tuscarawas, Coshocton and the adjoining counties show well, and are now in full bloom. In northern and northeastern Ohio very little wheat was sown last Autumn, owing to the extensive ravages of the wheat midge during the previous two years. Further south there is nearly if not quite the usual surface, and, with a few exceptions, the present prospect is unusually good. I have, to-day, seen a number of fields fully headed out. Farmers are quite hopeful. They think the abundance of rain, already fallen, is a guarantee of dry weather at harvest time, and consequent freedom from rust. Nothing but future wet weather or the "insect" can now harm this crop. Oats are extensively sown this year, and look very promising

Corn, however, is the staple crop, and an unprecedentedly large area has been planted this year—probably twenty to thirty per cent. more than ever before in the regions I have visited. Though late, this crop looks finely; there are few fields which have not come up evenly. The leaves show a healthy green color, and now shoot forward rapidly under the influence of a warm temperature and an abundant watering by rain. The valleys of the Tuscarawas and Muskingum Rivers, varying in width from one fourth to four or five miles, are literally covered with growing corn, the most of which has received its first hoeing. I learn from several sources that an unusual degree of attention is being directed to raising and fattening beef cattle. The only fear is that the present high prices in the Eastern markets will tempt farmers to send off the young stock which will be needed at home to consume the forthcoming grass and corn crops. I shall next visit other parts of central Ohio, and especially the valleys of the two Miamis, and thence go to Kentucky, and through Indiana, Illinois, &c. J.

Stock Exchange Lloyds.

The practice of Bearing Stocks is abstractly one of the most pernicious and iniquitous that can be conceived. Selfish and unscrupulous in its very nature, the gainers thereby are the sharp-witted operators of Wall-street; the ultimate sufferers individuals who have neither means nor facilities to resist the powerful faction before whose wily schemes their property suffers a rapid and unmerited depreciation.

The Bear attacks a stock from a vantage ground, putting out bis contracts without securing interest; while the operator for a rise with his buyer's option has the interest always to contend with. Then, again, a fraud or disaster to one stock always operates more or less unfavorably upon the market for others, while a proportionate degree of success influences only the particular security to which it attaches. Mankind, too, is more powerfully influenced by fear than hope—consequently a panic depresses more than an equal degree of confidence elevates, men being always prompt to realise their property under a sense of mistrust, but, however sanguine they may be, it requires some degree of time and circumspection to arrange for an outlay. Combinations for the inflation of stocks are notoriously unsafe, from the temptation to break faith as soon as some can secure a profit to themselves without regard to their associates; but the Bear is in a better position with regard to his partners, as there can be no tempting profit to corrupt till a certain point of depression has been attained.

These are mere samples of the influences at work in the war of Bulls and Bears, but enough to show on what a precarious tenure we hold our property, when once it becomes a football of the Brokers.

To meet this, I have a Utopian idea of a Stock Exchange Lloyds, where bets can be opened to sustain the value of good sound stocks in danger from the Bruins of Wall-street, and where any responsible person can take a line for the protection of a security, in which he may be interested. The arrangement would be a very simple one: A has an interest in a certain stock which is being systematically depressed by time-contracts: off he goes to Lloyds, and the Broker opens a list for subscribers to a certain amount, limiting the price at which the security may be bought and the profit for which it is to be held. A takes a line, B and C do likewise, and when the requisite amount is subscribed, Lloyds proceeds to purchase, calls in such installments as may be required, and puts up or sustains the price according to circumstances. If a profit is realized, of course it would be shared pro rata, deducting the Broker's commission; and if no further benefit be obtained than the withdrawal of a certain number of shares from the market, to be divided at the average cost among the friends of the enterprise, that would be a great advantage to all, attained by a small outlay on the part of each one interested.

Such a scheme is doubtless open to abuse, and would probably be availed of, to some extent, to bolster up worthless stocks, but the only safe operations would be those based upon bona fide valuable considerations; stocks that are sought for investment, but liable to be realized when money is required.

Won't some good conservative Broker try the plan by way of experiment? Advertise the formation of a list, open to any responsible party interested in the stock to be sustained—fix a limit at which to buy and sell, but to secure this from being a matter of public notoriety, give also a discretionary power to the broker to vary therefrom to the extent of 10 per cent. either way, and let him operate to the best of his ability—with the secret known only to himself. Let the commission depend on the list being filled up, not upon actual operations, as in many cases the fact of such a combination may be sufficient to answer the required end. NO STOCKJOBBER.

Perilous Balloon Ascension—The Aeronaut in Lake Erie.

From the Detroit Tribune.

We received a call this morning from Mr. JOHN STEINER, of Philadelphia, a somewhat noted aeronaut, who has just made his fortieth ascension, which has proven quite a perilous adventure.

After several days' delay he finally succeeded in making the ascent from Erie about 8½ o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The weather was stormy, with squalls of wind, which rendered the voyage not entirely pleasant. The wind being in the right direction, however, it was determined, it being his purpose to sail across the lake and alight in Canada.

He arose to the height of about three miles, and started off at a slow but steady rate.

The outlook was very benutiful. The Lake could be seen from one end to the other nearly, save as clouds intercepted it occasionally from view. At one time Mr. STEINER counted 38 sail vessels, all in sight, and far below him. The hands on board several of the vessels saw him, and rightly apprehending that he was an aeronaut, cheered him heartily, and he states that their shouts could be heard by him quite distinctly.

The wind kept blowing steadily from the right quarter, and the voyage promised a very successful termination. He neared the Canada shore a little below Long Point, and was gradually coming in to shore. When about 10 miles from land, however, a counter current struck him, which was bearing directly down the lake. This was quite a squall, and more so than the one which had propelled him safely thus far, and he was accordingly driven towards Buffalo.

He was about two and a half miles above the surface of the water. Night was drawing on and it became apparent that he could not, with this current, get away from the water before dark, and after nightfall it would not be safe to come down. Seeing a propeller making her way up the Lake, he therefore resolved to descend, and, if possible, strike the water so as to be rescued by the steamer.

The propeller proved to be the Mary Stewart. Her officers discovered the balloon about the same time that they were described by its occupant. The American ensign was run up and her whistle sounded. Mr. STEINER responded by waving a small American flag from his car. He threw out a large anchor, attached to about 30 feet of strong rope, for the purpose of making fast to the vessel if he should cross above her before reaching the water. He then began to descend, and came down rapidly.

He first struck the water about 25 miles below Long Point, and three miles above the propeller, which was bound up. In seven minutes he passed her about twenty rods astern. During this time Mr. STEINER says he thinks his balloon bounded from the water at least twenty times. It would strike and then rebound, like a ball, going into the air from twenty to fifty feet, and still rushing down the lake at railroad speed. His anchor not catching to anything caused this not very agreeable episode.

A boat was immediately launched from the propeller, which went in pursuit of him. They got hold of a long rope which he had thrown out, and which was attached to the balloon, and began to haul in. Hints soon as the line was made taut the balloon took the boat in tow with a will. The sailors pulled the oar-locks off the boat, but could not stop their novel "tug." Mr. STEINER then abandoned the balloon, leaping into the water and swimming towards the boat, which speedily reached him. He was taken on board, hospitably entertained, and brought to this city, where he arrived last evening, none the worse for his adventurous voyage.

This is the third balloon Mr. STEINER has lost. It cost $500. He requests the Canada papers to state that any person who may pick up the balloon is requested to communicate with him at No. 286 Parish-street, Philadelphia. He goes down to Cleveland tonight. He desires us to return thanks to the captain and crew for their hospitality.

We have been permitted by Captain WOODWORTH to copy the following account of this singular meeting from the log book of the Mary Stewart:

"Sailed from Buffalo, June 19, at 56 minutes past 10. At 2¼ P. M., we had a heavy squall from W. N. W., with heavy rain, which lasted 40 minutes. At 5 P. M. wind at S. W. and equally as my mate and myself were standing forward, I saw an object bearing about S. S. W., and at an angle of about 45°, which, after considerable observation, made out to be a balloon.

We were heading directly towards it, and I instantly gave the American ensign, and sounded the steam-whistle, which was responded to by the balloonist displaying the American ensign. This was twenty-five miles below Long Point, and about in the centre of the lake. I ran up to leeward of him, and sent a boat to pick him up. As he passed close under our stern, I had a fine view of the balloon, as well as of the recklessness of the aeronaut. We were all astonished at his daring recklessness, striking the water and rising to the height of fifty to seventy-five feet, and descending suddenly again to the surface of the water with such force that we were very apprehensive for his safety. As the boat pulled up and men took hold of the balloon, and my friend Sinbad left his phantom ship, a sudden gust of wind swept away the balloon. My first mate being in the boat, used every endeavor to save it, but the wind was blowing so hard that his efforts were unavailing, and it soon disappeared before the gale. By this time my new passenger was on board, and I again shaped my course up the lake."

Mr. Peale's Washington.

I was one of a large number who had the pleasure of attending the lecture delivered by REMBRANDT PEALE, Esq., of Philadelphia, before the Hietorics Society in this City, on the evening of the 17th, and the attention given by the audience for two hours to the words as they fell from the mouth of the venerable artist showed with what interest and pleasure they were received. A lecture on WASHINGTON would be full of interest at all times, but in this case doubly so, as it was delivered on WASHINGTON and his Portraits, and that too, by the only artist living at the present time who painted the Father of his Country from Life.

In looking over your valuable journal the next morning after the lecture, I discovered, as I believe, some unintentional errors, and the object of this communication is to request you to publish the following in justice to the venerable lecturer.

The portrait of WASHINGTON which elicited the approbation of his relatives and friends was the result of an effort to combine the merits of his own original study and that of his father—both from the life in 1795. The small picture shown by Mr. PEALE was only the study for his large equestrian portrait, fourteen feet high, for the purchase of which the Senate passed a bill, not acted on in the other House of Congress for want of time in 1824; it has not been offered since, but remains in the artist's possession.

Yours respectfully, JAMES M. WEED.
NEW-YORK, Monday, June 22, 1857.

A Word in Behalf of the Little Ones.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Will you open your columns, Mr. Editor, to a remonstrance from a bachelor, but a friend of little children, against parents and guardians allowing their little ones to sit up so late at night. I am sure that it is owing to a want of proper consideration on the part of parents thus to allow the hours which rightfully belong to these growing nativities to lay them down to sleep, to be, as is often the case, spent in a social gathering or family party, at which even the sinews and muscles of older parties are strained and taxed till that which might contribute to a healthful and pleasant relaxation becomes wearisome and a burden. I protest most earnestly for my young friends, that the rights of their constitution be respected, and, if their parents and guardians do not put them to bed at proper hours, I hope the new Police Board, Mayor, Common Council, or Governor, will swear in enough nurses, clothed with di(aper)plomatic powers to do so. If this matter is attended to, these youngsters will rise up, in after years—no matter how much they may scream and rebel now—and call us blessed. If you, Messrs. Editors, will draw the attention of unthinking parents to this subject, I doubt not you will come in for your share.

HUMANITY.

The Proposed National Convention of Butchers.

From the Baltimore Sun.

The proposition to hold a National Convention of Butchers in this city on the 3d of September next, not only meets with universal approval from the fraternity, as well as the people generally, but is already having its effect upon speculators, who, seeing that they have forced prices up to such an exorbitant extent as to drive the butchers and the consumers to measures of self-defence, are now becoming frightened, and manifest a willingness to accede to more moderate prices. In Philadelphia last week the prices of beef cattle declined from $1 to $1 50 per hundred; and if the measures proposed by the butchers are adopted and strictly carried out, it is confidently anticipated that prices will further considerably decline, and probably entirely break up the whole business of speculation in beef cattle—an event that will be hailed with the utmost satisfaction by the entire body of the people, for in this case we do not consider speculators as of "the people."

In New-York so completely are the speculators said to have the control of the market, that many butchers, rather than longer submit to their demands, have refused altogether to purchase cattle for the present. The consequence has been that one of the largest speculators in the country failed last week.

The butchers of Philadelphia, a few evenings ago, elected their delegates to the Baltimore Convention, and have transmitted to the butchers of this city the following propositions, to be laid before the Convention, to form the basis of its action:

1. To consider the propriety of abolishing the scales as a medium of purchase.

2. To recommend the establishment in each city of a board of purchase, to act in concert in purchasing all cattle and sheep for their respective markets from the original grower and feeder.

3. To recommend on and after ——— the cash system be established.

4. The Convention to recommend the formation of associations in each city, and to that end they adopt a uniform constitution for their guidance, with the right of admission to any butcher hailing from any other association.

5. To constitute the presidents of each association a board of correspondence on the subject of stock and all matters of interest to the butchers; said presidents communicating from time to time to the committee of purchase the state of their respective markets.

6 Said Association so formed to elect delegatee to form the National Association of Butchers—said Association to meet when and where a majority of the delegates may decide: and all other propositions that may be submited by any city sending delegates will be proper subjects for consideration.

The Butchers of Philadelphia recommend the cities to be represented as follows:

New-York City 15 delegates; Philadelphia 10; Baltimore 8; Boston 8; Brooklyn 5; Cincinnati 5; Pittsburgh 5; Newark, N. J., 2; Wilmington, Del., 2; Camden, N. J., 2; Harrisburg, Pa., 2; Easton, Pa., 2; Buffalo, N. Y., 3; Dunkirk, Pa., 3; Albany 3; Allegheny, Pa., 2; Charlestown, Mass., 2; Washington, D. C., 2; Lancaster, Pa., 2; York, Pa., 2; Reading, Pa., 2; Pottsville, Pa., 2.

THE PUBLIC SURVEYS.—Returns have been received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office from the Surveyors-General of Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and California, exhibiting considerable progress in the public surveys. The surveys of six townships of land lying on the Platte River, in Nebraska Territory; two townships situated west of the Menomonee river, in Wisconsin; eight townships west of the Mississippi River, and northwest of the Falls of St. Anthony, in Minnesota, and thirteen townships in California, situated on the eastern boundary of the State, and in a northeasterly direction from San Bernardino mountain, have been completed, and the townships are ready for subdivision.—Washington Union.

WASHINGTON—THE WORK AT THE CAPITOL.—The foundations of the connecting corridors between the centre building and the new wings of the Capitol are nearly ready for the superstructure of marble. The cast iron brackets, for the support of the columns of the central dome, have been elevated to their place, and the brick-work between them is being formed.

The ceiling of the House and is nearly completed, and the scaffolding is being taken down. It shows to finer effect from the floor than from the scaffolding. The Tennessee marble, used in ornamentation for mantel-pieces, balustrades, &c., is susceptible of a very high polish, and its variegated beauty cannot be surpassed. The main corridors of the wings are being laid with encaustic tiles. Artists are engaged in painting and frescoing the walls and ceilings of the basement rooms. These are being turned, in the machine shop, immense marble columns for the new Post-Office building. These columns are twenty feet long and about three feet in diameter. They are placed on a steam lathe, proportioned to their magnitude, and revolve about once a minute. The chisels are stationary on the side, and are fed by an imperceptible longitudinal motion of the carriage on which the column is placed.

THE LYNCHING CASE IN VIRGINIA—CONFESSION OF MURDER.—The Charlottesville (Va.) Advocate has the following in relation to the crimes of RANDALL, who was hung by the "Vigilance Committee:"

"Since the hanging of JEFF. RANDALL by the Port Republic mob, his wife and daughter have confessed to a knowledge of many crimes which he perpetrated, including arson, rape, robbery and murder. They also implicate some of the SHIFFLETS, who, they say, aided RANDALL in some of his burnings and robberies. The only case of murder to which they have confessed any satisfactory knowledge was that of an old woman who lived upon the Shenandoah River, and has been missing for several years. This old lady had a son in California who forwarded her some money directed to the care of Gen. LEWIS. The money was paid over to the widow. RANDALL heard of it, met the old woman, murdered her for the gold, and brought the corpse to his own house, where he buried it in the ground beneath the floor of his own room.

The Committee have arrested JAMES SHIFFLET and handed him over to the authorities. JONES, the son-in-law of RANDALL, has also been handed over to the authorities for trial. It appears, however, lawlessness has not been checked in Rockingham County by the Vigilance Committee. A few nights since an attempt was made to assassinate Mr. HENRY HAMNER, near Elk Run, and Mr. CHAPMAN COLLIER, in the same vicinity, lost two valuable horses by poison."

ICE IN LAKE SUPERIOR.—They have had very extraordinary June weather up on the big lake, and the ice, instead of growing thinner, appears to grow the other way. The Lady Elgin, which has just returned from the lake, reports that she was embarrassed on the 11th to the 14th of June by immense fields of ice 12 or 14 inches thick, and was hemmed in at Graud Island for two days, unable to proceed, by the vast expanse which met her on every hand. We may well rejoice that the comet has taken its leave.—Toledo Blade.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Street Department Lottery—$500 Reward.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

It will be recollected that, several months ago, the Mayor sent into the Board of Aldermen the nomination of CHARLES FLETCHER, as Inspector of Vessels, and that the Board rejected the nomination, insisting upon the appointment of PETER DUFFY, the brother-in-law of Alderman WILSON, to the vacant post. This the Mayor refused to do. Matters remained in this amiable condition until the death of the late Street Commissioner, when it became of supreme importance that that office should be immediately filled, before CONOVER, the appointee of the Governor, could obtain possession. The Aldermeo determined that the Mayor should nominate CHAMBERS for Street Commissioner, and DUFFY for Inspector of Vessels, and that they would confirm no other nominations. The Mayor, having an eye to the Irish vote next Fall—doubly important to him since the defection of the German)—and knowing DEVLIN'S useful facility, swore that he would nominate nobody else. It was no time, however, for either party to hold out very long—time was important, and unless the office was soon filled, CONOVER would step in and take it. Under these circumstances, the high contracting parties entered into a bargain and sale for the settlement of these difficulties. The Mayor should nominate DUFFY for Inspector of Vessels and DEVLIN for Street Commissioner, and the latter should hand over the patronage of his office to the members of the Board of Aldermen voting for his confirmation. Fifteen votes were necessary, and fourteen of the most valuable places in the Department were placed at their disposal. These places were:

One Collector of Assessments.
Three Deputy Collectors of Assessments.
Three Assessors.
One Superintendent of Roads.
One Superintendent of Pavements.
One Superintendent of Wharves and Piers.
One Superintendent of Repairs and Supplies.
One Superintendent of Lamps and Gas.
Two Inspectors.

In order that there might be no cheating the Aldermen proceeded to ballot for these prizes, and HARRIS, the Alderman of the Third, drew the chief prize, the office of Collector of Assessments, now held by JOSEPH R. TAYLOR, and each of the other Aldermen drew a prize, minor in value, hnt each a plum. These preliminaries having been arranged and the booty fairly and satisfactorily divided, DUFFY was confirmed as Inspector of Vessels, and DEVELIN Street Commissioner; the other appointments will ha sent in and confirmed, from time to time, according to the programme. Long life to the chartered rights of the City, and these—its chartered guardians!

Of the facts thus stated, I have reliable information—but from a source which I am bound to consider confidential. I now offer a reward of Five Hundred Dollars to any person who will produce such evidence of the bargain and sale of these public offices as shall be deemed by the Grand Jury sufficient to indict the offenders, to be paid upon the finding of the indictments.

WASTED OPPORTUNITY FOR A POLICE FIGHT.—A curious incident occurred in the Fifteenth Ward on Saturday evening. Mr. THOMAS LEAVY, formerly Foreman of Niagara Engine Company No. 4, and still a member, had been to market, and having purchased a fine salmon, was taking it home to his family. On the way he stopped at the engine house in Mercer-street, near Amity, and having conversed awhile with those of his friends whom he found there, the party concluded, as the night was warm, to go out awhile and cool themselves. Mr. L. was unwilling to leave the salmon exposed in the engine house, and, therefore, went over to the Fifteenth Ward "Municipal" Station-house, immediately opposite, and requested permission to leave it there for awhile, for safety. The officer sitting at the desk readily gave consent, and told Mr. L. to hang it on a nail, which he pointed out.

After awhile Mr. L. returned and demanded his salmon, it being gone from the nail. Great was his surprise when every one in the Station-house denied all knowledge of it, and on his insisting that he left it there, the "Municipals" ordered him from the house. Mr. L. was, of course, indignant, and proceeded to the Metropolitan Station of the District, and requested a platoon of men so as to search the "thieves' den." This being refused, he requested the "Metropolitans" to see fair play, and he would raise men enough himself to turn out the Mayor's men, if the others would only keep outsiders away. But this also the Sergeant in charge could not promise, and Mr. L. had to go home, sore of heart, and obliged to dine on something else than salmon on Sunday.

LAYING A CORNER STONE.—The construction of the proposed new building for a Nursery and Child's Hospital, to be erected in Fifty-first-street, between Lexington and Third avennes, was laid yesterday by Mrs. CORNELIUS DUBOIS, the first directress of the Institution. Rev. Dr. ANTHON performed the religious exercises, and Hon. ERASTUS BROOAS delivered an address, in which he stated that the grant by the Legislature was only about one-third of the whole amount required for the building, and made an appeal in behalf of the charity. Forty children were present whose ages ranged from two to six years, and delighted the audience by the manner in which they sung a hymn. The following articles were deposited in the stone: A Bible and Prayer Book; the papers of the day; the coins now in use; copy of the Constitution and By-laws of the Institution; the annual reports; also a memento of Mrs. ALBERT MATTHEWS, an efficient manager, and one of the building committee, recently deceased, and a copy of the address delivered on the occasion by Hon. ERASTUS BROOAS. The building will be completed in about a year nnder the superintendence of JOHN W. RITCH, architect, and will be 129 by 70 feet front, 60 feet deep, and having two wings 27 by 40 feet. The ceremonies were very interesting.

The STREETS.—City Inspector MORTON has got a force of men in the Third Ward, and in the Sixth, in the neighborhood of the Five Points, who are doing their best to clear away the accumulations of filth which have so long abounded there. In the Third Ward, and in other parts of the City, the merchants are having the streets cleaned by subscription, and cobble-stones yesterday were brought to light, which have lain mnd-entombed for weeks.

We have already stated the opinion of Mr. MORTON, that as Mayor WOOD has refused to express his approval or disapproval of the resolntions of the Common Council, no authority is vested in the City Inspector to commence cleaning the streets until the 28th inst., when the ten days will have expired which are necessary to make the resolutions law. This opinion was yesterday sustained by an eminent legal gentleman of this City. It was intimated last evening, however, that the Corporation Counsel would give his opinion to-day in favor of Mr. MORTON'S proceeding with the work immediately, which the latter says he shall do, as he is all ready to proceed if he can have the shadow of authority for so doing. Meantime Mr. MORTON has sent a communication to the Board of Aldermen, stating his position and asking advice.

THE HOMŒOPATHISTS ON THE STIR.—A petition is in circulation asking that Homœopathic physicians be appointed over six wards in Bellevue Hospital. Some 4,500 names have been signed to it. The reasons urged are that this number is one-twelfth of the number of wards in the Hospital, and they allege that one-twentieth of the citizens of New-York are Homœopathists.

We have not been informed whether it is the intention to get the names of one-twelfth of the citizens of New-York to the petition before it is laid before the Ten Governors.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—Commissioner HASKETT called the meeting to order at 10 A. M., in the Common Pleas Court-room, Part I. Present, Commissioners WM. J. HASKETT and ROBERT D. HOLMES.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

An application for a storekeeper's license was received from B. M. & E. A. WHITLOCK, No. 13 Beekman-street. Messrs. JAMES F. O'ROURKE, No. 495 Broome-street, and CHARLES PLINTA, of No. 665 Broadway, applied for innkeepers' licenses.

The Board then adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning.

Miller vs. The Illinois Central Railroad Company and Robert and George L. Schuyler, &c.—New trial granted: costs to abide event. Judge Roosevelt dissenting.

SPECIAL TERM.
Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.
PRACTICE—APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIANS IN PARTITION SUITS.

James A. Disbrow vs. Benjamin H. Folger.—MITCHELL, J.—The order for the appointment of a guardian in partition may be made in this District by a Judge at Chambers, and it operates as an order of the Court.

The infant lived in California and was a married woman: there was no service of the summons upon her, and no advertisement ever commenced against her as a non-resident. Without such service or advertisement, the court could have jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for her against her will. But an infant, when a suit is pending wherein she is interested, may come in voluntarily to protect her own rights in the suit. This she did. The petition by the infant was not verified before a proper officer. It was enough that there was record evidence of the nature of the action, and that the guardian was thereupon duly appointed. The proofs did not show that the guardian had no interest adverse to the infant; that now appears by affidavit. It is only a rule of Court (not a statute) which requires such proof, and it is not essential to jurisdiction. This covers the formal objection.

It is not alleged that three years have not elapsed since the letters of administration were granted on the estate of the ancestor, who owned the lands; that an order may be obtained within that period from the Surrogate to sell the lands for payment of debts; and that it may also turn out that there is a will not yet discovered. These are questions of facts which must be established beyond any reasonable doubt against the purchaser, or he is not bound to take the title; but when they are so established, he must take it, although there may be a possibility that the result may prove to be different from what may now be established. The purchaser may, therefore, if he wishes, have a reference to ascertain whether there are any unpaid debts or liabilities of the testator, and whether there is any will left by him, and if either matter be found as he alleges, he may be discharged with his costs; but if the contrary be found, he must complete the purchase and pay the costs of the reference. He should hear those costs, as the affidavits now presented make it very probable that the finding must be against him.

As the proceedings of the plaintiffs were not strictly formal, no costs are allowed on the note.

The infant has only a contingent dower right in an undivided share; the principal of that may, if the purchaser so elect, be retained in the Trust Company, to accumulate there until she shall be twenty-one years of age, and is to be paid out after she shall come of age, (except the interest to her husband or his heirs,) until she shall release her claim to it or depart this life, and at no time to be paid out without notice to the purchaser or his assigns, owners of this land.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

James McGiven vs. Hannah McGiven.—Judgment of divorce granted.

Washington Kendrick vs. Osbert B. Loomis.—Order granted.

Osbert B. Loomis vs. Washington Kendrick.—Directions allowed.

Edward Willis vs. John V. Onderdonk et al—Motion granted, and order set aside on repayment and purchase of deposit, with interest and expenses actually incurred by him; $10 costs of this motion.

In re the application of the Mayor, &c., relative to the opening of a public place, &c.—Report of Referee confirmed.

MARINE COURT.
Before Judge Thompson.

John Andariese vs. Jonathan T. Johnson.—The plaintiff, by an agreement in writing, hearing date Feb. 11, 1852, let to the defendant the store No 317 Bowery, for one year, with the privilege of hiring it for four years more. The defendant covenanted to pay, and to quit and surrender the premises at the expiration of the term, and that he would not occupy them for any business deemed extra hazardous, without the written consent of the plaintiff, under the penalty of forfeiture and damage. The defendant had occupied the premises until May 1, 1857, and, it was alleged, had broken his covenant in occupying the premises for an extra-hazardous business, manufacturing fancy soap, in leaving them in an unclean condition, and in failing to pay his last quarter's rent, $75. Judgment for plaintiff, $75 51.

PROTECTION FROM LIGHTNING.

TO THE PUBLIC: The undersigned have been engaged for many years in perfecting a mode of protection from lightning, and, so far as they know and believe, their lightning rods have never failed to accomplish the desired purpose. The popular impression is that lightning rods should be insulated, while QUIMBY'S rods are not insulated, because the subscribers have found in the course of their experience, that insulation impairs the efficiency of the rod. Under these circumstances the vendors of rods with glass fastenings find it necessary to combat the reputation of QUIMBY'S rods, which they attempt by making statements that buildings with QUIMBY'S rods on, have been injured by lightning, and that these rods, not being insulated, are unreliable and do not conform to the requirements of science. Such statements are either the result of mistaks or are deliberate perversions of the truth. The subscribers are not aware of any case of failure of their rods; they could just as well insulate them as not, but as their business is to protect buildings from lightning, they adopt only those means which they know from experience and thorough investigation, to be the most effectual.

The undersigned have examined many buildings with insulated rods, which have been injured by lightning, and in some of which persons were killed. Besides being behind the age, insulated rods are of poor construction, and very awkwardly applied to buildings, so that they frequently disfigure them; on the contrary, no pains are spared to make QUIMBY'S rods as neat and substantial as possible, and they may be relied on as perfect safeguards from lightning.

LONG ISLAND.

The Long Island Railroad Company Requested to Stop the Use of Steam on Atlantic-street, Brooklyn.

Under the "Special Order," the Brooklyn Common Council last evening took up the reports relative to the use of steam on Atlantic-street, by the Long Island Railroad Company. Alderman LOWBER moved to adopt the following resolutions attached to minority report, No 1:—

"Resolved, That this Common Council hereby withdraws all and every consent given to the Long Island Railroad Company to use steam on Atlantic-street, and that all ordinances conflicting herewith are hereby rescinded.

Resolved, That the running of locomotives on said street is a nuisance, and that the said Company be notified to abate the same.

Signed by H. R. PIERSON.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH moved to lay the same on the table. Lost. Ayes, 15; Nays, 20.

The motion to adopt was then carried by the following vote:

Ayes—Aldermen McNamee, Lowber, Pierson, Dolan, Clarke, Del Vecchio, Rowe, Bogart, Oliver, Shaw, Fithian, McMahon, Woglan, Wilson, Snyder, Preston, Ralphs, Suydam, Schols, Jenkins—20.

Nays—Aldermen McNamee, Lowber, Pierson, Clarke, Del Vecchio, Hudson, Rowe, Bogart, Oliver, Shaw, Fithian, McMahon, Woglan, Wilson, Schols, Jenkins—16.

Alderman WALSH moved to lay over for one week.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH moved to lay on the table. Lost—Ayes, 16; Nays, 19.

Alderman MCMAHON moved to adopt minority report No. 1.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH called for the reading of all of the reports. They were read by the clerk.

Alderman COLOHAN moved to adopt minority report No. 2, signed by Alderman Runell.

Alderman CASHOW called for the reading of the contract entered into between the City and the Railroad Co.

The agreement was read. The reading of all the documents occupied one hour, and at the conclusion,

Alderman WALSH moved to adjourn for one week.

Alderman CASHOW seconded the motion. Lost. Ayes, 11; noes, 24.

Alderman PALMER asked for the reading of the law which passed the Legislature in 1853.

The Chair decided the same to be out of order—he might as well call for the reading of the Revised Statutes.

Aldermen MCMAHON and LOWBER urged that some definite action be taken immediately.

Aldermen WALTERS and PALMER urged the reading of the law—they did not wish to involve the city in a lawsuit.

Alderman PIERSON spoke at some length, urging immediate action.

Alderman WALSH moved to have an opinion read which he held in his hand.

Decided out of order.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH called for a division of the question.

The vote was then taken on the first resolution of the minority report, as given above. Carried.

Ayes 19; Noes 16.

Alderman WALSH moved to lay the second resolution upon the table.

Ayes 15; Nays 20.

Alderman NELSON moved to adjourn.

The Chair decided that the motion was out of order.

Aldarman KALBFLEISCH moved to amend the second resolution so as to read as follows:

"That the running of locomotives on said street is deemed by this Common Council a nuisance, and that the said Company be requested to abate the same." Accepted.

The resolution was then adopted by the following vote:

Ayes, 30; nays, 5.

The amendment of Alderman KALBFLEISCH to the original resolution is in italics.

The Board then adjourned.

SERIOUS RESULT OF AN AFFRAY BETWEEN TWO BOYS.—About two weeks ago two boys named FRANCIS DELAMORE and JAMES DUNN, got into a dispute on Atlantic-street, Brooklyn, about a horse, during which DUNN stabbed DELAMORE in the arm, inflicting a severe wound, mortification enpervened, and DELAMORE died at the German Dispensary, on Court-street, yesterday. DUNN cannot be found. Coroner REDDING will hold an inquest to-day on the body.

THE EXCISE LAW.—JOSEPH DENT, JAMES MCNULTY and CHARLES WAGNER were arrested in Brooklyn, on Sunday evening, by Officers BROKAN, CORWIN and DOHERTY, of the First Precinct, for violating the Excise law, by selling liquor on Sunday. They were brought before Justice CORNWELL yesterday morning, when their examination was set down for this morning.

LAUNCH.—On Saturday last, an iron steamship of 500 tons burden, was launched from the yard of MESSRS. BIRKBECK & HODGES, foot of North Fifth-street, Brooklyn. This vessel is to be sent to New-Orleans, and was built for "The Sound Company." Her dimensions are: keel, 230 feet; beam, 65 feet: depth of hold, 9½ feet.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—A German, named GOLLEIT WEITE, was knocked down and robbed Sunday night, on Hamilton-avenne, near Summit-street, Brooklyn, by two ruffians, who obtained $250. WEITE was found senseless by officer HANLON, of the Third Precinct, who took him to the Station and called in medical aid.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—JOHN TUOMEY, well known as the keeper of the Knickerbocker Shades, on Court near Warren-street, Brooklyn, about 11 o'clock, Sunday night, fell down a flight of stairs at the rear of his premises, by which his neck was dislocated, and death ensued within a few minutes.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—At the meeting of this Board, yesterday, permits were granted to land cargo of all vessels from healthy ports, except hides, and these were not prohibited if in good order.

A number of nuisances were ordered abated.

A dog, supposed to be mad, was killed on Fleet street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Charles G. Kellogg vs. E. J. Totten.—The Jury in this case rendered a verdict of $7,550 for plaintiff, when the Court adjourned for the term.

NEW-JERSEY.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT BY BURNING FLUID.—A girl, 17 years of age, named ROSE COLE, employed as a domestic in a family residing in Wayne-street, between Henderson and Grove streets, Jersey City, was fatally burned yesterday, at 11¼ o'clock, under the following circumstances. She was alone in charge of a child in the part of the house occupied by the family of her employer, and at 11¼ o'clock commenced kindling a fire in the stove. Having aronsed the wood, she threw upon it some burning fluid to ignite it more readily, and left the can containing fluid standing near by. When the fire was ignited the flames communicated to the can, which was found burst, and to her clothing, which soon enveloped her in flames. She ran to the lower part of the house and alarmed the inmates, and into the back yard. Assistance soon came, and water was thrown upon her and the flames extinguished, but not until she had been so frightfully burned that the skin nearly all came off her body. She was alive last evening, but with no probability that she could live through the night.

MILITARY EXCURSION.—The Tompkins' Blues of New-York, passed through Jersey City, yesterday, on their way by railroad to the city of Elizabeth, to celebrate the thirty-second anniversary of the formation of that Company. They went out with forty-five muskets, and were accompanied by Dodworth's Band.

RESCUED.—As one of the Jersey City ferry-boats was landing at Jersey City on Sunday evening, an elderly man named WILEY, residing in New-York, fell overboard. Notwithstanding the boat was near to the bridge, one of the employes at the ferry named SAMUEL COMFOAT, leaped in and rescued him.

ARREST.—A man named KAVANAH was arrested in the city of Hudson, N. J., on Saturday, on the charge of stealing $15 in money and a gold watch of one of his fellow boarders. The accused was committed for trial.

JERSEY CITY CENSUS.—An official census of Jersey City just taken shows its population to be: First Ward, 4,023; Second Ward, 4,479; Third Ward, 9,029; Fourth Ward, 7,174; total, 24,795. The increase during the past year has been 2,447. In 1851 the population of Jersey City was 13,613.

TO UTAH.—Three companies of United States soldiers passed through Jersey City, yesterday, on their way westward by the New-York and Erie Railroad, to join the forces detached for service in Utah.

DROWNED.—The young man reported as drowned at Long Dock, Jersey City, on Sunday evening, while bathing, was FRANCIS COX, 19 years of age. He resided in New-York.

APPOINTING A WOMAN TO OFFICE.—The Jersey City Common Council having appointed Mrs. EATON of that city a lamplighter, she has qualified for that office.

MONDAY, June 22—P. M.

The official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, June 20, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank separately, on another page of this paper, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous statement of Saturday, June 13.

Decrease in Loans	$292,347
Increase in Specie	815,576
Decrease in Circulation	103,913
Increase in Actual Deposits	570,122

The large increase in the Specie line is unexpected, as the heavy export of the week, The explanation, in part, is that the Banks held considerably over the average of the previous week on Monday last, and less than the present average on the opening of business this morning. But beyond this, there is the more substantial cause of a steady income from the interior, not in large, but in numerous small sums, aggregating $600,000 or $800,000 for the week. The other features of the report are also satisfactory. There is a fair accumulation of Deposits, and a moderate curtailment in Loans; thus manifesting not only a cautious policy, bnt a comfortable money market. In the latter there is no new feature to-day, while Foreign Bills are weak, and the London quotation reduced, in order to effect sales, to 109⅝@109¾. The whole range is 109¼@109¾ ₱ cent. The clearances last week between the Banks were not quite so heavy as the previous week. The daily average was $27,158,172. Including these and the Sub-Treasury statement, the following is the general comparison between the two weeks, and also with the week corresponding in June, 1856:

The Royal Mail Steamship Persia, from Liverpool about 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday, June 13, arrived here at 7 o'clock yesterday morning

The screw steamer Queen of the South arrived at Southampton on Wednesday the 10th.

The steamship City of Manchester, arrived at Liverpool on the morning of Thursday the 11th.

The Arago, which left here on the 30th ult., made an exceedingly good passage,—the best she ever made,—reaching Cowes early on the morning of Thursday the 11th inst. and Havre a little after noon on the same day. Nearly one-fourth of her passengers left at Cowes. Baron GAROLT, the Prussian Minister at Washington, went on to Havre en route for home, which he visits for the purpose of bringing his family to Washington in the Fall. Madame DE WILHORST proceeded immediately to Paris, where she intends to spend some time studying her art. The Count DE VARINUX, lately French Consul at Panama, who went home in the Arago, does not return to that arduous and uncomfortable post, his successor having been installed some weeks before his departure.

Among the notabilities who went out in the Arago, it will be remembered, was L. GERLET, the French fugitive from justice, who went out in charge of Police officer DE VOS, and, upon his arrival at Havre was immediately handed over to the French authorities. We learn by a note from the ship that he went back without the slightest reluctance, preferring a speedy trial even with the chances of conviction in France, to a longer confinement in Eldridge street, with the prospect of sharing his brother's melancholy fate. He thinks, however, that his services to the Railroad Company as a witness may avail to secure, if not his acquittal, of which he has little hope, at least a short sentence with light employment in the galleys; two or three years, he says, with work as a book-keeper, he would not mind. He expressed himself highly pleased with the treatment he experienced at the hands of the officer who had him in charge, and who extended to him every indulgence consistent with safety; and before leaving the ship he sent him the following note:

WEDNESDAY, June 10, 1857.

I thank Mr. DAVOE for the kindness which he had for me during the voyage from America to France. I make my compliments and promise after my release to go back to New York, and pay him my first visit, and to be grateful towards him according to my means.

His obedient servant, L. GERLET.

It is safe to predict that he will not pay officer DAVOE his first visit, unless he reaches New-York under different circumstances from those of his previous arrival there.

The screw steamship Circassian arrived at Liverpool at noon on the 12th, making the run from St Johns, Newfoundland, in 8 days.

The steamer Jason sailed from Southampton for New-York on the 11th with 490 passengers.

The proceedings in the British Parliament during the week possessed little more than local interest.

In the House of Lords a petition in the long-pending case of "SHEDDON vs. PATRICK," in which a large amount of property and the validity of a civil marriage according to the laws of the State of New York are involved, had been presented and attracted a considerable share of attention. The House refused to entertain the petition.

In the House of Commons Lord PALMERSTON announced that the French Government had given no opportunity for remonstrance in regard to the firing upon a British merchant vessel by a French war schooner at Belleisle, but had promptly expressed regret at the unjustifiable occurrence and dismissed the officer who ordered the shot to be fired.

The oaths bill of the Government for the admission of Jews into Parliament was read a second time without discussion, although Sir F. THESIGER announced his intention of moving in Committee that the existing objectionable sentence should be inserted. The Roman Catholic members of Parliament, headed by the Duke of Norfolk, had risen in opposition to the measure, and had waited upon Lord PALMERSTON and held a meeting for the purpose of securing relief for the Catholics from the objectionable passages in the oaths now taken by members of the Legislature. The interview with Lord PALMERSTON not being deemed satisfactory, it was resolved to support amendments to the bill in Committee embodying the views of the Catholics, and to memorialize Parliament to frame an oath for all classes without distinction of creed. It was feared that this movement would jeopardize the bill, and some of the Catholic pressee opposed the interference.

In the House of Lords the Princess Royal's Annuity bill had quietly passed through Committee.

A numerously-attended public meeting was held in the Liverpool Exchange, on Friday, June 11, for the purpose of helping on the movement to obtain an increased supply of Cotton. Numerous speeches were made by prominent cotton dealers.

Messrs. NEWALL & Co., of Birkenhead, completed their half of the Atlantic Submarine Telegraph Cable—twelve hundred and fifty miles—on Monday, the 8th of June, and on the following day they gave a banquet to about 600 of their workmen and families in celebration of the event. The process of spinning this portion of the cable occupied 60 days. The cable was being transferred into small vessels, whence it would be placed on board the Niagara as soon as she arrived in the Mersey, which it was expected would be in the course of a few days. Experiments with the cable demonstrated in the most satisfactory manner that telegraphic communication along the whole length of wire was perfect.

The shipment of the cable at Greenwich on board the Agamemnon had been unavoidably delayed, but would, it was expected, be commenced on Monday, the 15th of June.

A large number of men were at work upon the Niagara, at Portsmouth, where the vessel attracted much attention, and had been subjected to a great deal of critical inspection. The London Times is complimentary enough to remark that the critics "agree upon one point—the vessel's ugliness!"

DOUGLAS JERROLD died at his residence in London, on the 8th of June, after a very painful illness of only about ten days' duration. His disease was rheumatic gout, and his age 55 years.

It is intimated that Sir W. F. WILLIAMS (the hero of Kars) is about to be promoted from the command at Woolwich to the Governorship of Malta.

The American schooner Silver Key, from Boston, with hydraulic apparatus for raising the sunken ships at Sebastopol, arrived at Malta on the 26th of May, and sailed again on the following day for the scene of operations.

Genial rains in Ireland had largely benefited the crops, which gave promise of great abundance.

A Conference of clergymen, upon the Maine Liquor Law, had been held at Manchester, and a resolution was adopted declaring legislative prohibition of the liquor traffic to be the only effectual means for the suppression of drunkenness.

The suspension of Messrs. EVANS, HOARE & Co., of London, a firm largely engaged in the Australian export trade, is announced. The liabilities are estimated at from £150,000 to £200,000.

The extensive warehouses of Messrs. PICKFORD & Co., the great railroad carriers, at Camden Town, had been destroyed by fire. An immense amount of property, including 40,000 quarters of corn, was consumed. The estimated loss is about a quarter of a million pounds sterling.

A deputation headed by Lord SHAFTESBURY had had an interview with Lord PALMERSTON in regard to the increase in the Slave-trade and the means for its suppression.

Lord PALMERSTON had brought upon himself the indignation of the London press generally, for refusing to allow reporters to attend, as usual, at certain interviews between the Premier and deputations appointed to confer with him.

The London Shipping Gazette publishes the copy of a note dated April 28 from Gen. CASS to Lord NAPIER, in reply to a representation which the latter, under instructions from Lord CLARENDON, had made to the United States Government relative to the oppressive treatment to which seamen are subjected on board of American vessels. Mr. CASS gives it as his belief that the laws now in force are quite sufficient to check the evils complained of, and that where offenders have escaped punishment the fault altogether must be attributed to defective proof or other accident.

The election movement in France was the all-pervading topic in French politics.

Official influence in all shapes was being exerted in favor of the Government candidates; while the Opposition forces and their candidates were actively at work, but without having apparently arrived at any definite understanding as to the list for Paris and the oath question. Accounts, however, are quite contradictory, and according to some, the Opposition list has been completed, and includes the name of General CAVAIGNAC. Another statement is that the Red and White Republicans having found it impossible to coalesce, the Whites have united with the remnants of the old Constitutional parties, and a common list of candidates has been drawn up, CAVAIGNAC figuring at the head.

The Ultramontane party has, through the Univers, declared itself in favor of an active interference in the elections.

The accounts from the silk producing districts are still contradictory, but under the influence of fine weather, they had become more cheering.

The Patrie announces that M. DE GERMINY is certainly appointed Governor of the Bank of France. The returns of the Bank for the month show an increase of cash in hand of 15,725,000 francs in Paris, and 34,635,000 francs in the branch banks. A reduction in the rate of discount at the bank was looked for, but no intelligence of such a movement had reached England at the latest dates.

The departure of a large number of distinguished persons from Naples, including several members of the Royal family, attracted a good deal of attention. Some of the absentees were thought to be engaged in political missions to Vienna and elsewhere, and it was believed that the King himself contemplated a visit to the Austrian Capital.

The Paris correspondent of the London Globe telegraphed, on Friday, as follows: "At Floreace, last night, the scenery of the theatre caught fire, during the performance of the 'Siege of Sebastopol.' A panic arose, when forty-three persons were killed, and one hundred and thirty four wounded."

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times writes:

"The Police is understood to have obtained a clue to a wide-spread conspiracy among the working classes for the purpose of bringing about a general strike in all trades on the same day in Germany, Belgium and Switzerland. The instigation of this plan is traced to Belgium, while similar plans, which have lately been detected in France, were traced to have been broached in England. The police of Berlin have accordingly made a communication to the municipal magistracy, and the latter have made it further known to the heads of the various trades companies, with the additional injunction that the very first symptom of anything like a suspension of work by whole shops or any number of workmen shall at once be communicated direct to the police, who will then take the promptest steps. As yet no such symptom has exhibited itself."

The text of the treaty of peace between England and Persia is published. It is agreed, among other things, that the Shah of Persia recognizes the independence of Herat and of the whole of Afghanistan, and will never attempt to interfere with the independence of those States; and in case of differences arising between the Government of Persia and the countries of Herat and Afghanistan, they are to be referred for adjustment, to the British Government. It is likewise stipulated that the existing agreement between England and Persia for the suppression of the Slave-trade in the Persian Gulf shall continue in force for ten years after the expiration of the original treaty, which occurs in 1862, and until such time thereafter as it is annulled by a formal declaration on either side. Ample provision is made in the treaty for the satisfaction of British honor, and for the adjustment of British pecuniary claims.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday Night, June 12, 1857.

It was expected that, in consequence of the news received by the Arago this morning, one or more questions would be put in the Commons to-night to Lord PALMERSTON, respecting the condition of affairs in Central America. The only notice of question, however, on the books, was the following by Lord CLAUDE HAMILTON, a very fierce politician of the old Tory or Derbyite school, and brother of the Marquis of ABERCORN, who is groom of the Stole to Prince ALBERT, and is therefore supposed to represent certain Court views. The question was as to whether any steps had been taken to redress the wrongs of British sufferers at Greytown, and if the Premier would produce the correspondence that had taken place on the subject with the United States. No opportunity offered to put the question, and no answer accordingly had been elicited, up to 8 o'clock this evening, at all events. Perhaps, however, the notice that it was to have been put may justify a remark or two.

The files received by the Arago indicate a disposition on the part of Americans to regard Great Britain as displaying an undue desire for the acquisition of new territory in any and every quarter of the globe. The proper corrective of such mistake as to the policy and tendencies of the British Government may be found in the estimates for the civil service for the current year, issued on Wednesday. So far from desiring to acquire new possessions, there seems a disposition to abandon such as are not self-supporting, rather than incur any longer the expense of maintaining them. There are the Falkland Islands, for instance, the only spot of American soil possessed by Great Britain between the Equator and the Horn, and regarded as the key of the Pacific. Yet the Government of a country whose annual expenditure is between fifty and sixty millions sterling, and who have just carried a vote of £40,000 as a dowry for one of the Queen's daughters, besides an annuity of £8,000, reluctantly proposes a grant of £500 for the mail service between the Falklands and Montevideo, intimating that, if the Colony continues to languish and to be an annual burden upon the mother country of £3,831, it is not improbable that it may be abandoned. So again with regard to the little island of Labuan, off the north coast of Borneo and contiguous to Sir JAMES BROOKE'S rajahship of Sarawak. This place was occupied about ten years ago, in the hope that, as it contains an exceedingly fine harbor, and also mines of coal, the possession of it might prove beneficial to commerce, and especially to steam navigation in the China Seas. But coal-mining has not been a profitable speculation there as yet, owing to water getting into the pit, and to a landslip burying a large quantity of the coal and damaging the works. The anticipated royalty on the coal has, therefore, been very small in amount, and now that a grant of £5,700 is required—the first asked for during the last three years—more than half of which is for arrears of expenses, the Colonial-office authorities state that, "It may become a grave question whether this island should not hereafter be relinquished, rather than retained as a permanent burden on the Imperial Treasury." The vote is, therefore, to be asked for with a distinct understanding that, unless within a very few years the Colony should be rendered more productive and more useful to British commerce, the question of its abandonment will be brought under the consideration of the British Government. It is not thought expedient to relinquish it at present, as more powerful steam-engines, and a manager of skill and experience, have been sent out by the company working the coal, and it is hoped that the mines may be rendered more productive, while the drainage works to be undertaken will remedy the insalubrity of the place.

The important news brought by the Arago adds to the interest which American matters have lately possessed for British readers. Americans were never more lionized in London circles than they have been the last few weeks.

Mr. DALLAS was present on Monday at the annual dinner of the Royal Humane Society, and, on the Recorder of London proposing his health, which was drank with enthusiasm, returned thanks in a speech which was not only appropriate to the occasion, but full of personal interest. He related how about the year 1774, a young gentleman of family and fortune was strolling along the banks of the Thames, accompanied by a servant, when, the day being sultry and cool water inviting, he undressed and plunged in. He struck out boldly for the middle of the stream, but being seized with a violent cramp, he uttered a shriek and sank. His servant raised an alarm, and the appliances of the Humane Society having just then been organized, he was rescued and resuscitated. Afterwards he married in Devonshire, and went to reside upon his patrimony in the Island of Jamaica. Subsequently he went to the United States, where he applied himself to the study of the law, and became a distinguished barrister, author, and politician, and the associate of WASHINGTON, JEFFERSON, and MADISON. That young man was his father. He lived some thirty years afterwards, and his descendants are now well known throughout the United States. Mr. DALLAS said he mentioned this incident with the greatest pleasure, and hoped it might tend to encourage the Society in the pursuit of the noble object which they proposed to themselves to accomplish.

At another of the annual festive gatherings for which the London Tavern is so famous, that of the Royal Free Hospital, which was held on Wednesday, when Captain SANDS, of the Susquehanna, and several other American gentlemen, were among the guests. Lord JOHN RUSSELL, who occupied the chair, in proposing the health of these Transatlantic visitors, said he had always been of opinion that if there were any two States entitled to make a family compact, they were the United Kingdom and the United States of America. Englishmen, he said, not only admired the great qualities of the Americans, but felt flattered in reflecting that they had descended from the same stock as themselves. If their American relatives had some foibles, he believed they were the exact counterpart of their own. He would say further, that whenever, of late years, there had been any of those little jars which would happen among the nearest relatives and the best friends, he had always found that if a British and an American naval officer could talk the matter over, they always settled it better than the most skillful diplomatists. He remembered a gallant friend of his own, Sir G. SEYMOUR, and he had no doubt Captain SANDS could speak for his own commodore, who, when they came to talk over the disputed question of the fisheries, put it into such a train that it was not difficult for the representatives of the two States to make a treaty, which, he trusted, would confirm their amity. The oftener Americans came to England the better, and the oftener Englishmen paid America a visit the better, for he always found that his countrymen were received with the greatest hospitality and good will in the United States, and unless they belonged to an ill-disposed and ill-conditioned class whom he would not name, they always returned with the highest opinion of America. The health of Capt. SANDS and his officers having been drank with much enthusiasm, the gallant commander of the Susquehanna rose to return thanks. He said that he had the gratification of meeting, on a former occasion, one of England's greatest noblemen, who had then expressed himself in this wise: "Mother and daughter against the world." He then adverted to the important object of his visit to the British shores, and expressed a hope that the cable he had come to lay down might be a silver cord to unite the two nations in the bands of brotherhood and peace. The electric cable, however, while binding America and England together, would not oppose them to the rest of the world. He trusted their relationship to other countries would be of the kind which existed between the noble charities of London and the recipients of their bounty—binding the world in the bands of good feeling.

In connection with these matters it might be added that in a great forensic contest in our House of Peers, two Ex-Chancellors being opposed to two Ex-Chancellors, in the case of SHEDDON and PATRICK, the highest admiration was expressed for the American jurisprudence disclosed in the course of the arguments.

Passing from science to literature, there stands first for notice a sale of very interesting character which came off to-day at PUTTICK & SIMPSON'S, the eminent auctioneers of literary property in Piccadilly. The lots consisted chiefly of autograph letters and MSS., including ten letters of NAPOLEON I., twenty of Lord NELSON, many others of celebrities of the present day, including Lord PALMERSTON, JOSEPH HUME, &c., and a number addressed to M. G. LEWIS ("Monk" LEWIS, as he is more often called, from his romance of that title) by BYRON, MOORE, ROGERS, FOX, COLMAN and others. Among the Nelson letters was one hitherto unpublished; it is addressed to Lady HAMILTON, in reference to his "adopted" daughter HORATIA, and seems to have been written with the view of blinding the lady's husband as to the child's parentage. "Before we left Italy," he says, "I told you of the extraordinary circumstance of a child left to my care and protection. On my first coming to England, I presented you the child. You became, to my comfort, attached to it; so did Sir WILLIAM, thinking her the finest child he had ever seen. She is become of that age that it is necessary to think of removing her from a mere nurse, and educating her. My earnest wish is that you would take her to Merton, and if Miss CONNOR will become her tutoress, under your eye, I shall be made truly happy." The letter from BYRON to LEWIS, written from La Mira, near Venice, Aug. 9, 1817, is highly interesting, as going far to clear the noble poet's reputation from the cloud thrown upon it by his domestic troubles. "It has been intimated to me," he says, "that the persons understood to be the legal advisers of Lady BYRON have declared their lips to be sealed up on the causes of the separation between her and myself. If their lips are sealed up, they are not sealed by me, and the greatest favor they can confer upon me will be to open them. From the first hour in which I was apprised of the intentions of the NOEL family, to the last communication between Lady BYRON and myself in the character of wife and husband, (a period of some months,) I called repeatedly and in vain for a statement of their or her charges, and it was chiefly in consequence of Lady BYRON'S claiming (in a letter still existing) a promise on my part to consent to a separation, if such were really her wish, that I consented at all. This claim, and the exasperating manner in which their object was pursued, which rendered it next to impossible that two persons so divided could ever be reunited, induced me reluctantly then, and repentantly still, to sign the deeds which I shall be happy, most happy, to cancel, and go before any tribunal. Mr. HOBHAM made this proposition on my part the day before the separation was signed, and it was declined. This proposition I beg leave to repeat, and to call upon her and hers to say their worst, pledging myself to meet their allegations, whatever they may be, and only too happy to be informed at last of their real nature." An interesting lot in this portion of the collection was an unpublished MS. of LEWIS, a metrical Romance, called Oberon's Henchman, or the Legend of the Three Sisters, founded upon a story attached to three large stones in the neighborhood of Blantyre Priory, in Scotland. The manuscript appears to have been intended for an album, each page being surrounded by an ornamental embossed border, inclosing French mottoes. It has the name of M. G. LEWIS on the title-page, but is not in his own handwriting. It is embellished with eight drawings in colors by LEWIS himself, Lady MONTAGU, Hon. Miss WINFIELD, Hon. CAROLINE DOUGLAS, and WILLIAM BLAKE, the painter. Memoranda in the caligraphy of the author indicate the names of the artists, with the exception of the last-named, in which the hand of BLAKE is too clearly seen to need any other authentication. It is the largest of the drawings, and appears to have been intended for the frontispiece—the others, including a view of the ruins of Blantyre Priory, by Lady MONTAGU, being small vignettes. It is a weird and ghostly scene, representing the banks of a river, with the spirits of the water hovering over it, and four of them lifting, on a sheet of which they hold the corners, the corpse of a drowned person. The grouping is admirable, and the combination of the grotesque and the horrible in the figures of the water-spirits evinces that marvelous power of imagination which BLAKE possessed in no ordinary degree.

The interest which has been excited with regard to Miss BRONTE, better known during her life by her nom de plume of Currer Bell, has been availed of to issue a three-volume novel of hers, called the Professor, published to-day, though written before either Jane Eyre or Shirley. The authoress, in her preface, disclaims, however, the character of a first attempt for it, for though she had not published anything when the Professor was written, she had, by many a crude attempt, "got over any such taste as she might once have had for ornamented and redundant composition, and come to prefer what was plain and homely." What she proposed to herself in the present work is told, in the preface, with some remarks which may serve to show why the appearance of this work has been so long delayed. "I said to myself," she says, "that my hero should work his way through life as I had seen real living men work their's—that he should never get a shilling he had not earned—that no sudden turn of luck should lift him in a moment to wealth and high station; that whatever small competency he might gain should be won by the sweat of his brow; that before he could find as much as an arbor to sit down in, he should master at least half the ascent of the Hill of Difficulty; that he should not even marry a beautiful girl or a lady of rank; as Adam's son he should share Adam's doom, and drain throughout life a mixed and moderate cup of enjoyment. In the sequel, however, I found that publishers in general scarcely approved of this system; but would have liked something more imaginative and poetical—something more consonant with a highly-wrought fancy, with a taste for pathos, with sentiments more tender, elevated, unworldly. Indeed, until an author has tried to dispose of a manuscript of this kind, he can never know what stores of romance and sensibility lie hidden in breasts he would not have suspected of casketing such treasures." There is a lurking irony in this indication of the reception which the Professor received from publishers during the life of the authoress; for it can scarcely be supposed that she was serious in attributing such predilections to the trade, who, as a class, are apt to estimate the value of a manuscript by the probable amount of hard cash it is likely to be transmuted into in their crucible. Publishers, no more than other men, will buy a commodity which their knowledge of the public taste tells them is unsalable; not that their judgment is always correct, as many an instance has occurred in which the work of an unknown author, rejected by many, has eventually found a publisher, and attained a large circulation.

THE ELECTIONS IN FRANCE.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, June 11, 1857.

You will, no doubt, remark, with more or less of astonishment, the general opposition that has started up against the Government in the coming election for Deputies. On the occasion of the organization of the Empire, and the election of the Chamber, which has just expired, the souvenir of the coup d'état was too fresh in the minds of the people to permit any organized opposition to the candidates of the Government. But we are far from that epoch now; five years is a long time in France to recollect a revolution otherwise than as a page of history, and we have now the prospect of a serious opposition. The Presse, last evening, named its list of candidates for the ten election districts of Paris. It is a coalition ticket—a coalition with the Orleanists, for the Legitimiste proper are decided upon an abstention from the polls. But it is a coalition which embraces nine Democrats to one Orleanist. The following is La Presse's ticket, which may be regarded as the choice of the Democratic party:

Second District.—BETHMOUT, former Minister.
Third District.—General CAVAIGNAC.
Fourth District.—EMILE OLLIVIER, lawyer.
Fifth District.—CARNOT, former Minister.
Sixth District.—GOUDCHAUX, former Minister.
Seventh District.—DARIMON, one of the editors of La Presse.
Eighth District.—VARIN, former Representative of the People.
Ninth District.—F. DE LASTEYRIE, former Representative.
Tenth District.—REGNAULT, former under-Prefect of Sceaux.

With the exception of the first, these are all names familiar to republican ears. They are names, too, calculated to give the Government party uneasiness, for in Paris, at least, the vote will be, in a measure, independent. The pressure of the Police agents is not so much felt here, and it is pretended that there is a fair chance to elect a portion of this list of candidates.

But the Presse is the organ of what it affects to call the democratic section of the opposition. There remains yet the candidates of the Siècle and Estafette, the organs of the Republican party proper. Their Committee has been in session several days, and has at last issued a circular, signed by GARNIER-PAGES, CARNOT, ARMAND LE FRANCOIS, and HEROLD, well known Republicans, in which they call on the party to go to the polls and vote, but they do not yet name their candidates, and it is hoped that the ticket of La Presse will be adopted by this section of the party.

All of the last members for the nine districts of Paris, it is believed, will be maintained by the Government, for reelection with the addition of M. VARIN, for the new district.

The contest is acquiring every day more and more the character of a true election contest. The opposition candidates, in their addresses, are allowed and make use of a liberty of speech, for which we were not prepared, and this license, it is hoped, will be seized by the people as an example for a like liberty of action in presence of the ballot-box. It is tolerably evident that the Government does not view with pleasure the manifestations of opposition that are becoming general throughout the country. Thus, in several districts, we see the Prefects usurping power in repressing candidatures, which were certainly not guaranteed to them by the judgment of the Court of Cassation on this subject, and the Government does not interfere. Again, in Corsica, a court candidate (more than a Government candidate, for he belongs to the household of Her Majesty, by his family) offers, in his address to the people, a copy of a letter received from the Emperor, in which His Majesty tells him that he is glad to see him before the people as a candidate, and hopes he will be elected. The happy candidate displays this letter to his prospective constituency and tells them that if they oppose him they will be opposing the Emperor! The people, however, not seduced by this kind of reasoning, have put forward an opposition candidate.

Since the foregoing was written, the Siècle has adopted and published at the head of its columns the ticket of the Presse. The Republican Party in all its divisions, red, moderate and democratic, in coalition with the Parliamentary or Orleanist Party, have therefore agreed to unite on this ticket, and the Government thus far has signified no intention to suppress any of these candidacies. It is said that Gen. CAVAIGNAC will accept the nomination, and will conform to the Government requirements in the regularization of his candidacy. All the rest are quite willing to stand as candidates. The ticket, however, was not formed without a good deal of difficulty, nor without more or less of that maneuvring called at home "wire-pulling." GARNIER-PAGES, Minister under the Provisional Government, was a prominent candidate; but he made himself unpopular to the faubourgs, during his term of office, by the imposition of unpopular taxes, and the Committee of Nomination felt obliged to withdraw his name. The gentlemen nominated are infinitely superior in point of talent to the candidates of the Government, and aside from their political opinions, are entirely worthy the confidence and the sympathy of the electors of all classes or opinions.

In the departments the opposition candidates are slow in coming forward. In certain districts there will be no opposition at all; but this perhaps will be the exception. The most severely contested election in the country will be that between the Count DE MONTALEMBERT and the Marquis DE CONEGLIANO, Chamberlain of the Emperor, candidates for the department of Doubs.

In connection with the election, a singular report has gained credence with the inhabitants of the environs of the city. It is the habit when any great military fête is to take place in Paris, to march the soldiers from the surrounding country to the environs of the city the day before the fête, and there to lodge them over night with the people of these localities. The people who lodged the soldiers called to the city for the review in honor of the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, have been informed that they will soon be called upon to lodge a larger number than on that occasion. Naturally this fact excited the liveliest curiosity, and when they demanded why, they were told that an Eastern monarch was going to arrive at Paris. This announcement put the imaginations of Paris and the environs in movement, and soon we were to see defiling on the Boulevards—the Sultan of Turkey! Such a spectacle might well, indeed, excite emotion in Paris, always in the search of novelties. But all this concentration of troops has no doubt but one object in view, that of preserving peace during the coming election. It is true that an Eastern ruler, the Queen of Oude, is about to arrive in Paris, but there will be no parade over that one.

This habit of camping soldiers on the inhabitants of the environs, a service meanly paid for by the State, and considered onerous and unjust by those who have to bear the burden, has been seized upon by an independent candidate as a hobby to carry him into the Chamber. He declares, in his address to the constituency, that this servitude to the military power, which is weighing down the country, must be abolished! This would be great man is evidently one of the sufferers.

Another independent candidate declares himself in favor of the abolition of poverty, and, consequently, of charity! This is the same man, the Citizen PIONNIER, who was a candidate after the Revolution of '48, and who was then known by the name of L'Homme à la Loupe. MALAKOFF.

Death of Mr. Douglas Jerrold.

From the London Times.

The intelligence conveyed by the above heading will probably take the whole literary public of England completely by surprise. But a few days ago Mr. DOUGLAS JERROLD was a prominent figure in London life. An assembly of "wits" would hardly have been deemed complete without his presence, and his last bon mot was one of those items of news that everybody was glad to hear. To the special world in which he chiefly existed it is scarcely necessary to say that his illness was of short duration. On Sunday night he took leave of several of his intimate friends, and shortly after the noon of yesterday his earthly career had terminated.

Mr. DOUGLAS JERROLD was in a great measure what may be styled a "self educated" man, and the celebrity he attained with every class of his countrymen that is capable of appreciating intellectual worth may be cited among the many instances that show how distinct is the path to fame from any of those beaten tracks of instruction that time and usage have prescribed. He was born in London on the 3d of January, 1803, and to the fact that his father was manager of the Sheerness Theatre may be attributed that predilection for the stage which forms a leading characteristic of the greater portion of his life. However, his earliest expressed passion, fostered, no doubt, by the scene which Sheerness presented during the height of the war, was for a maritime life, and he obtained a midshipman's appointment through the good offices of Capt. AUSTEN, brother of Miss AUSTEN, the novelist. With the war ended his nautical career, and, on quitting the service, he was apprenticed to a printer in London. His leisure hours were now devoted to self-instruction, SHAKESPEARE being his chief author. An essay on the opera of "Der Freischütz," which he dropped into the editorial box of a newspaper on which he was employed as a compositor, is the reported beginning of his literary labors. To his infinite delight, his own anonymous "copy" was handed over to him to put in type, and shortly afterwards appeared an editorial notice soliciting other contributions from the unknown correspondent.

"Black eyed Susan," originally produced at the Surrey Theatre, under the management of Mr. ELLISTON, and afterwards transferred to Drury-lane, is generally considered the first of his dramatic works, but we believe it was preceded by a number of farces to which he did not affix his name, and which were certainly not worthy of the oblivion to which he consigned them. It was followed by the "Rent Day," and these two works now stand as the classics of their respective kinds. That tendency which was exhibited by Mr. JERROLD, through life to sympathize with the cause of the poor and lowly, and to launch his indignation against the oppressors in high places, was plainly manifested in these earlier productions.

We shall not go too far if we designate Mr. DOUGLAS JERROLD as the last of the truly English dramatists. Not only did he refrain from that practice of adaptation from the French that now constitutes the chief vocation of the playwright, but he was altogether free from that French influence which may be discovered even in those of our writers who still dare to be original. Let us add that his anti-Gallicism was carried to a fanatical extreme, and that, while his dialogue showed a command over the English language which no wit of ancient or modern times could have excelled, his construction was frequently marked by that English laxity which a greater respect for French models might have corrected. But the "literature" of the drama was everything in the eyes of DOUGLAS JERROLD, and all the mechanism by which "stage effect" is produced he regarded as mercenious and mischievous to the interests of dramatic art.

Latterly the greatest literary triumphs of Mr. JERROLD have been achieved in the periodical publications of the day. The papers which he collected under the title of "Cakes and Ale" are charming emblishions of the fancy, and the "Caudle Lectures," which so accelerated the rising popularity of Punch, stand as specimens of minute life-painting that can scarcely be surpassed. At the time when these famous lectures were in course of publication there was not a breakfast table in the united kingdom who did not snatch up Punch every week to contemplate his own misfortunes "result in spectacle."

For the last few years Mr. JERROLD was chiefly occupied as the editor of Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, and, by the custom of the English press, his own individuality could no longer be expressed as distinctly as in his earlier works. But there was one character in which Mr. DOUGLAS JERROLD was always preeminent, and that was as the social wit. MARMONTEL said of DIDEROT that those who had read his works only, and had never heard him speak, could not form an estimate of his merits, and the same may be said of DOUGLAS JERROLD. To conceive a brilliant and elaborate repartee when with him the work of a moment; but, we could, if we would, cite cases, in which the cue was barely pronounced before the retort was fired off. The most novel combinations of ideas were effected by him with electric rapidity, even an old pun could become new from his manner of uttering it, and, what was most wonderful of all, there was generally a deep truth couched at the bottom of his pleasantry, so that the joke, which had created a roar on its first utterance, actually appeared bitter when it became a subject of sober reflection.

The sharpness of Mr. JERROLD'S satire has caused many persons to attribute to him a character of misanthropic ill-nature; but never was a more egregious mistake committed. The large-hearted blue eye of DOUGLAS JERROLD beamed nothing but benevolence, and to this expression the feeling of his heart fully responded. Like all wits, he loved his joke, and if an opportunity for uttering a repartee presented itself he was not the man to let the firelock escape his grasp. Hence, some unfortunate personage who obtruded his egotism or his pedantry might chance to get an unlucky "hit" if DOUGLAS JERROLD was in company, and as the weapon was of first rate quality the mark of the wound might remain unobliterated for years. But, to suppose that DOUGLAS JERROLD ever deliberately intended to inflict pain proves a total ignorance of his large and philanthropic nature. Wrong and oppression he hated in the abstract, but he had a friendly grasp for all individuals, even among his adversaries.

The reading public, which knows and celebrated men in black and white only, has lost a writer who for epigrammatic brilliancy has never been excelled in our language. But far deeper has been the loss of the circle of friends who delighted to spend whole evenings in catching the stream of wit as it flowed unimpeded from JERROLD'S lips, and acquired for themselves a reflected glory by repeating "JERROLD'S last." The "wits" of London have lost their acknowledged chief.

Mr. DOUGLAS JERROLD died at Kilburn Priory in the arms of his eldest son, and retained his intellect till within a few minutes of his death.

Progress of the Atlantic Telegraph Enterprise.

COMPLETION OF THE LIVERPOOL HALF OF THE CABLE—FESTIVITIES—THE SHIPMENT.

From the London Times, June 11.

The completion of 1,250 miles (one-half) of the cable for the Submarine Atlantic Telegraph by Messrs. NEWALL & Co., was celebrated at their works, Birkenhead, yesterday, by a dinner given to about 600 of their workmen, with their wives and families. Messrs. NEWALL'S contract has been executed with great speed and punctuality. On the 19th of November last they tendered either for half or the whole of the cable, to be finished by the 30th of June. The tender for the half was accepted in the December following, and Messrs. NEWALL, who had taken one of the transit sheds attached to the Birkenhead Docks, at once set to work to provide the necessary machinery, all of which had to be created for the occasion. The wire was supplied to Messrs. NEWALL by their own wire-drawers, Messrs. RICHARD JOHNSON & Co., of Manchester, who completed their task by the 1st of June. Messrs. NEWALL commenced spinning the cable on the 18th of February, and proceeded without interruption until Monday last, the 8th of June, when 1,250 miles (one-half of the whole cable) were completed. The cable consists of a strand of copper wire covered three times with gutta percha. The gutta-percha is sewed from end to end with spun yarn, and covered with 18 strands of seven wires each. There are thus 15,000 miles of strand, composed of seven times that quantity of wire, being a total of 175,000 miles of wire. The process of spinning occupied 60 days, 2,500 miles of wire being used per day, and 350 hands being employed. The spun yarn was also made by Messrs. NEWALL upon the same premises, 100 machines for this purpose being ranged in one of the upper floors of the works. The cable is now lying in four huge coils (each 28 feet in diameter and 8 feet high,) all ready for being shipped. It will be transferred, probably to-day, into small vessels, and thence on board the Niagara, which is expected to arrive at the month of the river early next week. The weight of the cable averages one ton per mile; and it is to be laid by the process patented by Mr. NEWALL, and adopted in the Black Sea (passing the wire through a hollow cone) which prevents twisting.

The festivities yesterday were presided over by Mr. GORDON, the manager of the works, and were witnessed by a large number of gentlemen, including Messrs. NEWALL, PICKERING, C. LINDELL, WHITEHOUSE, R. GRIFFITH, R. S. MAXWELL, &c. Among the toasts were "the President and People of the United States," "the Atlantic Telegraph Company," "R. S. Newall & Co.," subjects, the ill-treatment and robbery of others; and these outrages are alleged to have been committed—at least in part—by the troops or armed bands of ALVAREZ. Now, if the question were limited to this it might perhaps be easily settled. The Spanish Government demands the punishment of the offenders, and compensation for the injured. The first point Mexico at once concedes—not within eight days, as was arrogantly and imprudently demanded by Señor SORELA, but within such reasonable period as may be needed for investigation and for the action of the tribunals. Upon the result of such investigation must depend the question of compensation. If it be proved that Mexican troops or Government officials are the authors of the excesses complained of, Mexico, as I am positively informed, admits that there is a claim for compensation. But if, on the contrary, it is shown that the crimes have been perpetrated by lawless ruffians and marauders, not in Government pay or employ, there is nothing in the law of nations to entitle Spain to insist on compensation for her injured subjects. It is certainly deplorable that, owing to the weakness of the Executive, or other causes, such outrages should have been perpetrated, and such bands of ruffians be suffered to infest the land, but foreigners resident there must take the consequences of the situation, and not expect a compensation which Mexican subjects would have no right to claim.

But, besides the question of the San Vicente and Chernavaca outrages, the Spanish Government brings forward all its other claims and causes of complaint against Mexico, and demands their settlement before diplomatic relations shall be resumed. This is, to say the least, an unwise course. The plain and prudent one would be, first to settle the most irritating point in dispute, that out of which the rupture of diplomatic intercourse arose, and then, when the present heat should be allayed, and Señor LAFRAGUA, now here as Mexican Minister Plenipotentiary, the elder questions in dispute might be discussed; and, with temper, moderation and fair play on both sides, might, doubtless, be amicably adjusted. This, however, is not the view taken by the Spanish Government, which insists on lumping its grievances, and, pending their settlement, makes warlike preparations, and suffers the press and opposition orators, stirred by various, and, there is reason to believe, in some cases, discreditable and unpatriotic incitements, to rouse a feeling of hatred and hostility to Mexico, and bring Spain to the brink of a war. The tone of some of the Madrid papers is most irritating and intemperate. In their columns one finds the terms "Caribs," "barbarians," "savages," &c., daily applied to the Mexicans. With the censorship that exists such offensive terms could not be employed without the consent of the Government, and the natural inference (although, perhaps, not a strictly correct one) is, that it approves this aggravating course, and is not disinclined to the appeal to arms to which it may probably lead.

The good offices, strenuously exerted, of the English and French Ministers at Madrid, have as yet been without effect; and, as I have already informed you, matters are for the moment at a standstill, both parties intending to wait the arrival of the next mail from Mexico with the rather vague hope that it may bring something or other that will facilitate the settlement of the question. It may very possibly bring news of the condemnation, and perhaps of the punishment, of some of the persons guilty of outrages on Spanish subjects; but it cannot be expected to bring the solution of the question of compensation, of that of the claims of Spanish creditors, and of the various other matters which Spain has thought proper to associate in her demands for satisfaction.

DANGERS TO SPAIN OF A WAR WITH MEXICO.

Madrid (June 3) Correspondence of the London Times.

Mexico, owing to its distance from her shores, would be to Spain a sort of Crimea on a small scale, with this difference that she is unable to support those expenses of war in the extreme West which were a heavy burden on England and France in their Eastern campaign. Her commerce would be ruined, for Mexico, would, immediately on the outbreak of war, send thousands of letters of marque to the United States. If, for want of means, she was obliged to desist from the contest; the fact of her having engaged in it would have annulled all treaties, and her claims on Mexico would be valueless. The Mexican Government is not without resources. There can be no doubt that if hostilities commenced it would immediately seize the church property and levy war taxes. Spain reckons on the operation of SANTA ANA'S partisans, and Mexico, if this expectation were realized, would be plunged into the horrors of a civil as well as a foreign war. In short, whichever way we view the question, we see nothing but certain disasters and damage for both countries, with scarcely a chance of benefit to either. It is difficult to conjecture what line of conduct the United States might observe in presence of a war between their neighbors and the Power that possesses Cuba; but one cannot but foresee the probability of peril to this prosperous Spanish colony. If England and France would avert complications that might become extremely serious, and involve them to an extent that perhaps at present is hardly foreseen, they will interpose their authority to prevent an unprofitable and unnecessary struggle. The matter might be submitted to arbitration, and settled without compromising the interests and honor of either party. The first thing to be done is to bind over Mexico and Spain (and especially the latter) to keep the peace.

Madrid (June 4) Correspondence of the London Times.

In the Mexican affair the Spanish Government has certainly suffered itself to be acted upon by the agitation that has been got up since the Cortes met, although that agitation had not its origin in any strong feeling of right or of wounded national dignity, but in the intrigues of fraudulent, or at least doubtful, creditors of Mexico, and in the desire to create embarrassment for the Government, whose fall would probably be the consequence of its allowing itself to be spurred into hostilities with the Mexican Republic. One can hardly imagine a serious and protracted war occurring between two countries so remote from each other, and, financially speaking at least, so unable to carry it on; but even brief and slight hostilities would have the effect of burdening the Spanish treasury, already in a critical position, and of imperilling the Spanish West Indian possessions.

The Slave Trade.

INTERVIEW BETWEEN A DEPUTATION AND LORD PALMERSTON.

A deputation of gentlemen connected with the West India interest, headed by Lord SHAFTESBURY, had an interview with Lord PALMERSTON, on the 10th inst., for the purpose of calling his attention to various circumstances tending to show the increase of Slavery, and to make suggestions calculated to suppress the traffic. The gentlemen who formed the deputation were Mr. S. W. TAYLOR, M. P., Mr. THOMAS HANKEY, M. P., and Messrs. JOHN CATER, L. R. VALPY, STAFFER CAVE, W. MACKESON and W. D. CHILD.

The points pressed upon Lord PALMERSTON'S attention were the violation by Spain of the treaties with Great Britain, the increase in the trade in Cuba, especially during the last three years, the further impetus to be dreaded from the high price of sugar, the depressing influence on the prospects of free labor, the serious obstruction to the progress of the negro population, the necessity for negro labor on the plantations, and for the influx of such labor in almost all the West India Islands, and, as a consequence, the supply of Slave labor to meet such demand, unless free labor of the same quality is provided.

The following are the suggestions made for abolishing Slavery by African emigration treaties:

"Suppression of Slavery itself, not the trade alone, through emigration treaties, by substituting the free black African for the slave.

Emigration must be universal; if restricted to British colonies Britain might be charged with interested motives. If France be not joined she will soon import the free black by herself. To Spain and Portugal it must be shown to be their interest to join.

Emigration must be accompanied or followed by emancipation. Free blacks must not be imported into a slave country, lest, like emancipados, they become slaves.

Emigration may be regulated by a mixed commission in Africa, the objects thereof to be—voluntary contracts, free passage and outfit, suitable vessels, return passages, or grants of land.

Emigration in lieu of Slavery is for the interest of Cuba. Compare cost of slave, $700, (£140,) with that of free black emigrant, £7 10s a head (adults). Slavery furnishes but a temporary supply of labor by individuals worked to death in 10 years, while emigration gives a permanent supply by colonization in families.

How emancipation is to be effected in Cuba. An immediate Spanish law for emancipation in a limited period for purchase of slaves through loans guaranteed as to interest by Britain, if necessary; the interest to be met by a poll-tax, and annual tax on emigrants, and tax on exports. Emigration to be the bonus for emancipation.

Colonization of the West Indies with free blacks will civilize Africa by constant communication, through an emigration highway between the African tribes and civilized nations. The Emigration and Missionary Boards will aid each other. Numerous emigration stations, with a mixed commission and open treaties, will instil confidence everywhere.

Emigration will tend to put down lotestine African wars. The normal state of Africa is war, followed by captivity. Commerce and civilization must root out war. Each new emigration depot will be a bond for peace. The emigrants will be selected from freemen, not captives."

Lord PALMERSTON listened most earnestly to the remarks made by those gentlemen who addressed him, and thanked them for the suggestions they had offered, and the practical form in which their views had been embodied. With reference to the wide subject of emigration, his Lordship expressed his doubts whether the time had arrived for such treaties, and alluded to various objections which might be raised. For the present, therefore, he could not testify to his approval of the plan. His Lordship then stated that her Majesty's Government were most anxious to do all in their power to repress, and, as far as possible, crush the Slave-trade. He admitted the force of much that had been urged as to the probable success of a squadron on the coast of Cuba, and was glad to be able to state that now there were vessels at liberty for such service, and proposed that one or two gentlemen should wait on the First Lord of the Admiralty to confer with him on the subject. His Lordship also admitted the advantage to accrue from a transfer of the mixed commission Court, and explained the position in which the Government were placed in connection with the treaties. He would, however, further examine into the subject, and assured the deputation that all their suggestions should receive full consideration.

Deficiency in the Supply of Cotton.

MEETING AT LIVERPOOL.

A public meeting was held, on the 12th inst., in the Cotton Salesroom at Liverpool, "to take into consideration the present deficient supply of Cotton."

The room was crowded, nearly 300 cotton merchants and brokers, and influential merchants, being present. Mr. JOHN TORR, President of the Chamber of Commerce, presided. A number of gentlemen attended from Manchester, as a deputation representing the Cotton Supply Association. Amongst those upon or near the platform were JOHN CHEETHAM, Esq., M. P., South Lancashire; T. B. HORSFALL, Esq., M. P., Liverpool; F. SHAND, Esq., Mayor; Mr. W. P. ANDREWS, Chairman, and General CHESNEY, Engineer of the Euphrates Valley Railway; Alderman HOLME; Mr. C. BUSHELL, Vice-President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, &c.

The Chairman commenced the business by reading letters of apology for non attendance from Mr. J. C. EWART, M. P., Sir J. POTTER, M. P., and Mr. J. A. TURNER, M. P., all of whom expressed their warm sympathy with the object of the meeting. He felt that no apology was needed on behalf of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce for calling them together. When they saw that the question of the supply of cotton had been discussed in Manchester and other places, the Chamber considered that Liverpool would have been remiss in her duty, as the great emporium of the cotton trade, if she had remained silent in a matter in which her own interests were so deeply involved. It has been objected that it was a question entirely for Manchester; but while the existence of Manchester no doubt depended upon the adequate supply of cotton, that article was the mainstay of Liverpool. The time might arrive when Americans would thank us for our efforts to extend the production of cotton; for they would, at no distant day, be able to consume in their own mills the greater part, if not the whole, of the quantity which they produced. So recently as last week, a purchase of Surat cotton was made in Liverpool for the spinners of Lowell—not that there was not sufficient cotton in America, but because it was necessary to obtain descriptions of a peculiar character.

T. B. HORSFALL, Esq., M. P., moved the first resolution:

That this meeting is deeply sensible of the inadequacy of the present supply of cotton to meet the requirements of manufacturing industry; that such supply being almost entirely derived from one source is uncertain and precarious in quantity, and unduly fluctuating in price, causing thereby loss and inconvenience to the consumer, and endangering the stability of our trade, as well as the future prosperity of this country.

The question of the adequate supply of cotton was one not of local but of national importance. The duty of solving the present difficulty devolved mainly upon British enterprise and British capital. [Applause.] At this moment we received four-fifths of our cotton from America. He did not anticipate any interruption of the good-feeling which now existed between England and that country, and even if such an interruption occurred he believed that the cotton would find its way to this market. But we could not lose sight of the fact that in America slaves were the principal cultivators of cotton; and what would be the result supposing the possible, he might even say the probable, event of their legalized emancipation, or of an insurrection among them? Look at our own colonies where the emancipation of slaves was legalised. Had there not been a great falling off in the productions of those countries; and was it too much to assume that there would also be a great diminution in the quantity of cotton produced in America? Bearing this in mind, we should endeavor to discover where the deficiency could be supplied. We received at present a large supply from India; and if improvements were made in the irrigation, in the means of transit, and in the tenure of land, in that country, the quantity could be materially increased. A large supply might also be procured from the West Indies if the Government would sanction arrangements for the admission of immigrants, which could be advantageously accomplished without any fear of establishing anything like slavery.

J. CHEETHAM, Esq., M. P., seconded the motion. After looking very deeply into this question, not only as a manufacturer, but as the representative of the great bulk of the cotton trade, he had come to the conclusion that there never was a period in the history of the cotton manufacture in which it stood on more doubtful or more difficult ground. [Hear, hear.] The late Governor of the Bank of England, who had recently visited the Art Treasures Exhibition, had stated in the House of Commons that there was the utmost buoyancy in the trade of the manufacturing districts around Manchester, and that the high price of money had in no way affected it. He (Mr. CHEETHAM) regretted that he was not present on that occasion to answer the honorable gentleman. It was true that the high price of money had not produced much effect; but there never was a period when the position of the manufacturers was more disastrous. The spinners certainly might be able to obtain a small profit; but the great bulk of the trade were working not only without profit, but, in many cases at a serious loss. Short time had been resorted to in many instances, and the result must be a curtailment of the comforts of the workpeople. This state of things might lead to an extensive emigration of these persons to the United States. [Hear, hear.] There were two modes by which the Cotton Supply Association proposed to work. One was, to look to the various parts of the world in which the article could be produced, and to afford encouragement by giving seed, machinery, and advice; the other was, to bring its combined efforts to bear upon the Government and the Legislature of the country. Already grave alarm was felt in the House of Commons. It was considered there that the adequate supply of Cotton was only next in importance to an adequate supply of food for the people. From private information which he (Mr. CHEETHAM) had received, he believed that the Government and the East India Directors were desirous of knowing what the Association wanted, and, if possible, to aid and assist them. He believed also that they were fully aware of the great difficulties under which this part of the country suffered; and the efforts of the Association would be directed towards procuring ameliorations which would result in the increased supply of Cotton from India. [Applause.]

Mr. W. BARBER (a member of the Dock Committee, and an American merchant) urged that, by the passing of the resolution, it should not go forth that a foregone conclusion had been affirmed, that there really was a difficulty from insufficient supply. From careful inquiry, he believed that in America, at the present time, there was the same relative position between the slave labor applicable to cotton cultivation and the general population, as existed in 1839, when there was a great scarcity; and while the number of slaves in the cotton-growing States had thus been increased, by their removal thither from other parts, the health of the slaves had gradually improved. A little cessation of work on the part of manufacturers would relieve any difficulties that might exist; and the energy of the United States was great enough to meet any real call for extended cultivation, although he did not mean to say that it was always to be depended upon.

Mr. G. BROOKS moved:

That, in the opinion of this meeting, the colonial dominions and other dependencies of Great Britain afford ample resources for the cultivation and development of the cotton plant; and that it is the duty as well as the interest of the British nation to aid in the promotion of those measures by which the growth of cotton may be established and extended not only in the British dominions but in all accessible countries.

Mr. W. P. ANDREWS seconded the motion. The supply of cotton (he said) was a subject of national importance; for the cotton fibre he considered to be identified with, and almost a part of, our institutions. He considered that in the efforts to increase the supply of cotton, we were practically confined to British India, if it was desired that the supply should be prompt, efficacious and permanent. The successful cultivation of cotton required suitable soil and climate, settled government, and a numerous and industrious population. All these ingredients were at hand in India; but there was one thing of paramount necessity that was wanted—easy and cheap communication. There were in India some of the finest works for irrigation to be found in the world. In the Punjaub, the existing fertility was oppressive; cultivation could not be extended for the people could not sell what they now produced. The railway now being carried out, from Calcutta to the northwestern frontier, was most judiciously planned for the district it would serve; but by leaving what was formally called the "garden of India," without some roads that should supply the means of cheap transit, those provinces would be injured; because the railway now being made would enable other provinces to undersell them in their own neighborhood. Gentlemen might express their surprise that we received so little cotton, and that of so bad a quality, from India. After what he had seen in that country, it was surprising to him that any worth sending here ever reached the port of shipment. [Hear, hear.] Nearly all that did come was from the maritime provinces; and an adequate supply never could be received until there were cheap and extensive means of transport from other provinces. In the great regions of Berar, there was cotton enough to supply Europe, if it could only be got at—[hear, hear;—and on the banks of the five rivers, in the Punjaub, there were regions capable of supplying a second Europe, if it existed. [Hear, hear.] Attention to other matters, and improvements in them—such as the land tenure and irrigation—were needed; but more important than anything else, stood out the want of communication. [Hear, hear.] The most tremendous blow ever struck at Slavery would be struck on the day when railways, on a cheap and extensive scale, were opened in India. [Applause.] Gen. CHESNEY dwelt upon the importance of the Euphrates Valley Railway and its prospects. A large quantity of cotton could be obtained from Mesopotamia: and the proposed railway would be the best and cheapest, if not the only possible mode of bringing it to this country. The motion was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. C. BRISTOPHER BUSHELL moved:

That this meeting has observed with satisfaction the formation in Manchester of a Cotton Supply Association, having for its object a more extended supply of cotton; that this meeting pledges itself to render to such Association every support; and that a Corresponding Committee, in conjunction with the Association, and to consist of five gentlemen, be and is hereby established in Liverpool, for the purpose of enrolling members, receiving subscriptions, and conducting all business connected therewith.

The motions were all unanimously agreed to, after which the meeting adjourned.

Treatment of Seamen on Board American Ships.

From the London Shipping Gazette.

We have been favored with the following copy of a note addressed by General Cass to Lord NAPIER, her Majesty's Minister at Washington, in reply to a representation which Lord NAPIER was instructed by the Earl of CLARENDON to address to the United States Government relative to the oppressive treatment to which seamen are subjected on board American vessels:

[Copy.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, April 28, 1857.

MY LORD: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's note of the 10th inst., stating that the attention of her Majesty's Government and of the British public has of late been awakened to the irregularities attending the enlistment of seamen on board the mercantile vessels of the United States, and the nature of their treatment when so employed. Your Lordship expresses a hope that some remedial measure may be suggested for their redress.

In reply I have the honor to state that it is believed the laws now in force upon the subject of seamen employed on board the merchant vessels of the United States are quite sufficient for their protection.

The execution of these laws in foreign countries for the most part devolves upon Consuls. It is possible that these officers may, in some instances, have been delinquent in the discharge of their duty in Her Majesty's ports. This department, however, is not aware of any such delinquencies; but, upon being satisfied of their existence, will not hesitate to apply the proper remedy. A copy of the United States Consular regulations is herewith transmitted, and your lordship is particularly referred to the 19th chapter, entitled "Duties of Consular officers in relation to seamen of the United States." From the great demand for sailors in our ports, in proportion to their supply, and the improvidence and credulity which usually characterize them, they are necessarily exposed to imposition to a degree which, probably, no laws could prevent. It is presumed that seamen required for the British mercantile marine in Her Majesty's own ports are more or less subject to the same grievance.

I should be glad to concur in any measures for the relief of this useful class of persons, but the laws of this country intended to prevent their ill-treatment are as effective, it is believed, as those of any other. Instances may have occurred where offenders have escaped punishment, but this, I am persuaded, should be imputed to defective proof or other accident, and not either to any inadequacy in the law itself, or to want of impartiality in its administration.

I avail myself, &c., LEWIS CASS.

The Dying Gladiator.

From the Madrid Correspondence of the London Times.

Madrid mourns and crape covers the Bullring, for DESPERDIGIOS is dying. DESPERDIGIOS is the nom de guerre of DOMINGUEZ, a famous toreador, who was expected here shortly to gladden the eyes and hearts of the lovers of tauromachian sports. But fate and a fierce bull have otherwise decided. On the 1st inst., in the Bullring of Puerto de Santa Maria, DESPERDIGIOS met with one of those grievous accidents which sometimes occur even to the most skilful of these modern gladiators. A bull, says the account which last night arrived and spread grief and consternation through Madrid, caught him on the right side with the left horn, threw him on the left with the right horn, tossed him, and as he fell caught him under the chin, splitting his jaw and driving the horn up to the right eye, which it forced out. The poor fellow displayed the pluck usual in members of his dangerous craft; he submitted with great fortitude to the necessary operations; but the loss of blood was so great that it was deemed impossible he could survive, and the last sacraments were administered. Nevertheless, on the following morning his state was somewhat better. Ten thousand persons were spectators of the horrible sight. On the same day, EL TATO, another well-known bull fighter, was wounded in the leg. In the south, in hot weather, bull fighting is particularly dangerous, owing to the furious excitement of the beasts. Some very serious accidents occurred the other day, near Madrid at a festival of Novillos, or young bulls, held at a village called Getafé. On such occasions the spectators and amateurs are apt to get in the way of the bulls, and to commit most extraordinary imprudences. This was probably the case at Getafé, where one person was killed on the spot, and upwards of a dozen went into the hospital; some of them, it is said, with small hopes of life. Spaniards are offended if they are placed second in civilization to any other European nation, but they will hardly be allowed a place on the first rank until they cease to take delight in these savage and cruel sports.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM CHINA.

Affairs at Canton Unchanged—Discontent among the People—Menacing Movements of the Rebels—Small Pox on board the United States Ship Levant—Execution of the Murderer of Mr. Cunningham—Movements of the American Squadron.

The dates from Hong Kong are to the 26th of April, and Canton River 22d April.

Nothing of importance had occurred since the last advices. At Canton it is reported that great discontent prevailed on account of the existing state of affairs and YEH'S inability to adopt any energetic measures against the British.

It was feared that the frigate Raleigh would prove a total loss.

Advices from Foo-Chow Foo to the 13th April state that the rebels were again making head in the districts in that neighborhood, and large amounts of money forwarded for operations in tea in the Kishow and other districts, had to be brought back, hence the first crop of Kishow teas would be lost, and the second and third crop would also be affected by the movement of the rebels. Trade was very quiet, and dealers held their stocks of teas for a further advance.

Shanghae dates to the 20th of April, report that the town of Hokow in the Keangree province, had been taken possession of by the rebels.

Exchange on England 7s. 4d.@7s. 5d.

In tea two chops of Congou had been settled at 15½@17 taels. Greens were unchanged. The total export of tea to Great Britain showed a deficiency as compared with the same date last year of 22,000,000 pounds.

At Hong Kong trade was quiet. Freights had improved, and vessels were wanted. Exchange on England, 6s. ½d.@6s. ½d. Rice had declined in price, but subsequently recovered, and was expected to rule high for some time. The long drouth is said to have affected the first crop of Canton silks, which will be a short one.

OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

UNITED STATES STEAMER SAN JACINTO,
HONG KONG, CHINA, Saturday, April 25, 1857.

With the exception of one or two brushes with the pirates, there has been no fighting between the barbarians and Chinese, and the distribution of the English naval and military force has been unchanged for the past few weeks.

The loss of Her Majesty's ship Raleigh, of fifty guns, has been the occasion of great rejoicing among the Celestials. This took place on the 14th of this month, a short distance from Macao. She was a fine ship, just arrived from England, in command of Commodore KEPPEL, R. N. She struck a sunken rock—not laid down on the charts—while going through the water at the rate of eight knots per hour, about three miles northwest from Chukwan. The damage sustained was so great that it was found necessary to beach her after six hours' hard pumping, at the mouth of the Type, near Macao. A portion of her guns have been saved; the ship is a total loss. The Chinese regard the loss of this ship as an omen of good luck, and ascribe it to the interference of Josh in their behalf.

The movements of the rebels are just now attracting more than ordinary attention. Dr. PARKER has recently received dispatches from the American Consul at Foo Chow-foo, advising the sending, forthwith, of an armed vessel to the place to protect and afford a refuge to our citizens and their property. The rebels are encamped within half a mile of the city walls, numbering some seventy-five thousand strong. A battle was fought recently near the city, resulting in the defeat of the Imperialists with a loss on their side of twelve hundred. Owing to the disturbances, the remittances from the tea district had been sent back, and it was feared that the trade in that article would be greatly injured.

The rebels still continue to menace Canton; as yet they have not attacked the city. There are two parties of them in the district of Cheng, (near Canton,) who are about uniting their forces and making a joint attack on the city. His Excellency Governor YEH is making all possible preparation for the defence of the "fourth city in the world." A large portion of his army had been disbanded, owing to the inability of the Government to pay and provide for them. His Excellency now finds the greatest difficulty in procuring troops, owing to the above-named causes. Famine prevails at Canton, and the people have difficulty to sustain life. Altogether affairs are in a most lamentable state; "outside barbarians," rebellion and famine are three enemies which are hard to contend with. Three hundred and fifty millions of people are suffering under these curses, yet who cries pity? Truly "when one gets to going down hill everybody gives him a kick."

Fear of disturbances has made many of the Missionaries resident there, quit Ningpo and take up their residence at Shanghae.

The United States storeship Celestial, with United States stores, arrived here to-day, being one hundred and twenty-nine days out from New York.

Late advices from Shanghae state that the small-pox had broken out on the United States ship Levant. Thirty-three cases had been reported. This ship has been very sickly since her arrival in the China Seas, and will doubtless be ordered home soon on account of the above.

Since writing the above, I have news from Foo-Chow per steamer Formosa, from Shanghae direct, to the effect that the Viceroy has addressed a letter to Dr. PARKER, assuring him that the murderer of Mr. CUNNINGHAM has been strangled for the offence. The duties which have been kept back by the United States Consul on that account, were about to be paid up. Everything was quiet, and no further fighting has been done.

The murderer of Mr. CHARLES MARQUIT, the Government auctioneer, spoken of in my last, (15th of April,) has been given up by his fellow villagers, and is now in custody here. The reward offered by the Governor of five hundred dollars for his arrest, was what brought him.

The disposition of the United States East India Squadron is the same as when I last wrote: the Portsmouth at Singapore, the Levant at Shanghae, which place she is to leave upon the completion of her repairs, and return to Hong Kong. We await documents from the magnates at home, ere we can shape our course. DANL.

NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTS.

THE PROJECTED CAMPAIGN IN CHINA.

From the London Times, June 10.

There is no likelihood of any important movement until the hot weather of 1857 has passed away. About the first anniversary of the Canton bombardment an immense armament will have assembled in the harbor of Hong Kong. The British and French and American Commissioners will have been at their posts long before, but these dignified personages will have had to pass a period of compulsory leisure, which they may devote to framing their list of demands or their several plans of procedure. We shall, during the next two or three months, hear now and then of our vessels at Cape Verde, at St. Helena, at the Cape, at Point de Galle, and, one by one, some in good condition, some broken down or leaky, they will make their way into the presence of the Admiral commanding. By August a fine fleet will be under the orders of Sir M. SEYMOUR. Another month will be sufficient to repair damages and make all straight for immediate operations. About that time, too, the less pretentious, but not less useful craft will slowly come to anchor in the Canton River—all the shot and shell, and clothing and medicines in their numbered transports, will come to hand, after pitching and rolling about on the ocean for some four or five months. A great firstrate, which a few years since would have taken its place in an experimental squadron will now descend to the rank of a hospital ship, and its huge hulk will be moored in some convenient spot as soon as it makes its appearance after such a voyage as its shape and weight will permit it to achieve. Then the fleet will be reported ready. But, though Chinese may not be very formidable enemies, and bluejackets, armed with cutlasses and pistols, are likely to be a match for any warriors they meet on shore, yet even CORTES or CLIVE would hardly think of invading the Celestial Empire with ships' crews only. The troops from England must be in readiness, and this readiness will depend on the performances of the Transit, the Urgent, the Assistance, and similar ironically named craft. Let us hope that the delay enforced by the heats of Summer may be sufficient for even these, and that by the time the steamers and ammunition are ready, and the Commissioner, the Admiral, and the General are anxious to begin, we may have our 5,000 or 6,000 Englishmen, in addition to a good muster of Asiatics, safely encamped in the neighborhood of Canton.

Though events may not keep pace with public impatience, and though the first news of the coming operations may fall on the ears of a public which has begun to tire of the subject, and a Parliament which is in the agonies of a new Reform bill, yet it cannot be doubted that, when all is ready, success, immediate, complete, and lasting, may be gained. But, whether we fight Russians or Chinese, there is equal need of resolution and promptness. We do not speak of that mere readiness for battle which every soldier possesses, but of the vigor of will, and the bold acceptance of responsibility, which are among the highest merits of a commander. Now, in China we have three chiefs; the Admiral and General are independent of each other, and we presume neither considers himself bound to obey, in a military question, the behests of the Commissioner. In these cases the difficulty of entire agreement may be considered to vary almost as the squares of the number of individuals concerned, and we cannot help feeling that the three authorities may fall into the same error of mutual expectation which has rendered famous the joint command of the Earl of CHATHAM and Sir RICHARD STRACHAN. It is therefore not unreasonable to ask that they will, in conjunction with the Home Government, improve the next few months in determining on a plan of operations which may be carried out without hesitation or delay. Lord ELGIN and the commanders should know what they are to do by the time that the season and the arrival of reinforcements give them liberty of action. It seems, certainly, that the best plan would be to punish a local outrage by local retribution. The Northern Ports are tracing with us, we are taking more tea than ever; we took immense quantities of silk last year, and, from the state of the European culture, we are likely to require a still larger quantity. It cannot be a good policy to bombard Shanghae and Foo-chow-foo, which know full well and apparently care nothing about the barrel at Canton. For harmonre, in a general war with the Chinese Empire we do not know with whom we are fighting. The Emperor is to us almost as mythical as Prester John. What his authority is, how far he has sanctioned the insolence of YEH, and how far he can prevent it, are matters on which we can form no judgment. We do not even know whether at this moment he wears his crown in security. The rebels occupy vast provinces in the very heart of the Empire. We learn that they are making head in the neighborhood of Foo chow-foo, and that the first crop of teas in certain districts would be lost because money could not be safely transmitted for purchase. The whole fabric of Chinese rule may even now be crumbling to ruin. It seems, therefore, a sensible policy for England to abstain for the present from any organized invasion of the Empire. But her resolution and severity may be well shown by the capture of Canton, the expulsion of the offending Governor, and the occupation of such points on the coast as may prove to the enemy that their country lies at our mercy. Should events require it, another campaign may carry our standards to the inland cities of the Empire.

PLAN OF FUTURE OPERATIONS.

From the Friend of China, April 15.

The great question of the day in China is that regarding our line of military operations. Of course—the first purpose for fulfilment is the capture of the City of Canton, and the destruction of so much of the suburbs as will enable us to hold the walls with safety throughout the Summer, and until weather and reinforcements are available for progress in the surrounding country—the subjugation of the whole of the ninety-six villages being step the second. If promptly entered on, we may reasonably expect to see these matters effected by the close of the Spring of 1858; but long before that period, indeed during the southwest monsoon's full strength, a larger force than will be requisite for the purposes mentioned must be on its way to that great artery of the Empire—the Yang-ize-kiang. Passing Chinkiang, and Nanking, we must proceed onwards to Tai ping-foo—to Tchi-tcheow foo and to Kigan king-foo. From thence, the capital of the province, we should go on, still following the course of the Yang ize-kiang to Hoang-tcheeu-foo, and to Ou-tchang foo, another provincial capital, and to Han yang-foo, an immense city, as also is Yo-tcheo foo, near Tong ting-hou, a lake, or inland sea, capacious enough to float the whole of the navies of Europe. Thence our ships of light draft might proceed to King-tcheou-foo and through the province of Sze-tchuen—from the Yang-tse, reaching the renowned Poo-ching Lake, and afterwards Yao chow foo and Nan tchan-foo, the capital. The places named are those at which we should have Consular establishments, and insist on a trade direct with the inhabitants—all too willing to welcome us in their midst. As for going to Peking, for which there has been so much clamor—Cui-bono? Futile promises are all we should obtain from HIENFUNG, even if we ever got speech of His Majesty. No—we must go direct to the places with which we wish to have commercial intercourse, and from them dictate a treaty with whomsoever may be de facto the ruler of the country—and that, if we read the times aright, will not be the effete Manchou.

NEWS FROM INDIA.

Calcutta dates are to the 2d, and Bombay to the 11th, of May.

Gen. ASHBURNHAM and staff had arrived at Madras, en route for China.

It was supposed that the bulk of the British army in Persia would remain there for some months to come. The general health of the troops had been good.

A telegraphic dispatch from Meerut, thought to be exaggerated, says that the third regiment of Bengal Cavalry were in open mutiny; that several officers and men had been killed and wounded, and that the line's and officers' bungalows had been burnt down.

A Madras paper had announced the death of the Nizam, but the statement lacked confirmation.

Exchange on Bombay on London 2s. 1 9-16d.

Freights had slightly fallen.

No change in either the import or export trade.

NEWS FROM AUSTRALIA.

Yield of Gold—Murder of the Inspector-General by Convicts—Great Excitement—Markets.

Advices from Melbourne, via England, are to April 16. The summary of the Melbourne Argus, April 14, states that the yield of the gold fields continues to be subject to the fluctuations with which the current year commenced. The mildness of the weather and the scarcity of water have been protracted over a longer season than usual, and the escort returns have not been maintained up to the average of the year 1856. It is, however, satisfactory to know that they have been considerably above the average of the years 1854-55.

The Melbourne Parliament was to reassemble on the 15th, when the "verdict upon the O'Shanassy Ministry" would be given. The Argus says that the country has unmistakably pronounced against the new ministry. Four out of the seven ministers had, however, been reelected.

On the 26th of March, the Inspector General of the Penal Department, Mr. PRICE, was brutally murdered by a number of convicts at Williamstown.

The excitement among the convicts, both in the stockades and on board the hulks, became exceedingly great after Mr. PRICE'S murder. The greatest insubordination prevailed, and on board the Success this reached such a height that the warders were unable to go among the prisoners, who maintained a continual uproar for several hours. It was deemed necessary to place the Victoria war steamer with shotted guns alongside of the Success, and had the mutiny among the convicts gone much further, orders would have been given to fire into the hulk. Since then quiet has been restored.

The state of the labor market was crusing some anxiety at Melbourne. In the Argus, of April 14, we read:

"When arrangements were made, a short time since, for establishing an immigration department, on a rather extensive scale, it was the general belief that there was not labor enough in the country to carry out the projected public works. At that time we were in the middle of harvest, and there certainly was no labor to spare for new undertakings; but the question has since assumed a very different aspect. For several weeks past there have been many men seeking employment in vain, and people are beginning to ask the reason why."

The trade of the past month has not been marked by an extraordinary excitement, but although stagnation is complained of in some branches of business, in commercial affairs generally there has been a sensible improvement. The aspect of dulness which characterizes some departments of trade is owing, in a great degree, to the machinery of mercantile operations compared with the actual business to be transacted. Trade is still considerably overdone in Sydney, and commercial establishments exist to a greater extent than they can find profitable employment. Still credit is good.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

London Markets.

Per Persia.] LONDON, Friday, June 12, 1857.—5 P. M.

WITH FIFTY ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS,
From Designs by that Eminent Humorist,
JOHN McLENNAN.
Edited by PIERCE PENGENT.

In one elegant limo. volume, neatly bound in muslin, gilt,
Price $1 25

From the Syracuse Standard.

Here is an array of wit, humor, anecdote, fun, facts, and fancies, such as was never gathered together before within the two lids of a volume. It is a perfect avalanche of good things. The author must be "some punkins," if not more. If the reader is going a journey, or about spending a few days "out of town," let him call and get a copy.

From the Baltimore Clipper.

This is simply a collection of bon mots, spicy paragraphs, anecdotes, &c., which, nevertheless, are like "Orient pearls at random strung," none the less valuable on that account. Lovers of fun will buy this book, and so should sedentary persons of every class, as a preventive of the "blues," or hypochondria.

From the Springfield Republican.

The compilation is very comprehensive, and, so far as we have examined it, is drawn from the best sources. We propose to show our appreciation of its contents by placing selections from them among our "pleasant paragraphs."

Published by STRINGER & TOWNSEND, No. 222 Broadway, New-York, and for sale by all Booksellers and Newspaper Agents everywhere.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Persia, with one week's later news from Europe, arrivad at this port yesterday morning. It is annonnced that the half of the Atlantic Telegraph cabls mannfactured by Messrs. R. S. NEWELL & Co., at Birkenhead, was completed on the 10th inst. This is the portion which will be taken by the Niagara. The other half of the cable, contracted for by Messrs. GLASS, ELLIOTT & Co., at Greenwich, was nearly completed when the Persia sailed.

We receive little political intelligence hy this arrival. The Spanish-Mexican dispnte remains in statu quo, and, according to latest accounts, a war between the two conntries was believed to be imminent. In France, ths electlon movement occnpied public attentlon to the exclusion of other matters. Our Paris Correspon lent gives the latest information on this snbject. From Berne it is reported that, on the 8th inst., the National Council nnanimously ratified the Nsufchatel treaty.

Our London Correspondent, in a letter which we pnblish elsewhere, gives reports of two intsrestiag speeches: one delivered by Mr. DALLAS, at the dinner of ths Royal Hnmane Society, and the other by Lord JOHN RUSSELL, at the anniversary of the Metropolitan Free Hospital, whils proposing "the health of our American Visitors." To this ssntiment Capt. SANDES, of the Susquehanna, responded.

At Florence, on the night of the 7th of June, a deplorable calamity occnrred at ths Theatre dei Acquedotti. Ths scenery snddenly caught fire, and snch a panic ensued among ths audience, that, in ths attempt to escape, two hnndred persons were killed and wonnded.

Among the interesting items of miscellaneous foreign news with which our columns are, this morning, filled, will be fonnd a report of the meeting in Liverpool, to take into consideration the deficiency in the supply of Cotton, and also a report of a meeting between Lord PALMERSTON and a deputation, which waited npon him on the 10th inst., to protest against the great and increasing prevalence of the Slave-trade.

Our correspondent, writing on board the San Jacinto, now at Hong Kong, furnishes us with an interesting summary of the latest Chinese news. From this source we learn that the murderer of Mr. CUNNINGHAM, our conntryman, has snffered death by strangnlation, the extreme penalty of Celestial law, and that ths dnties which have been hitherto kept back by the U. S. Cousul on this account are now about to be paid np. It is reported that great discontent prevails at Canton owing to the existing state of affairs nnd YEH's inability to adopt any energetic measures against the British. There had been no change in ths positions of the vessels belonging to ths United States squadron. Small pox, in an aggravated form, had broken out on board the Levant at Shanghai.

We have received, by way of England, advices from Melbourne, Australia, to the 16th of April. Ths Inspector-General of the Penal Department had been brntally murdered by a number of convicts at Williamstown, and the event had been followed by great excitement and mntiny among the prisoners on the hulks. A war-steamer, with shotted guns, was brought aloog side, hnt quiet was restored without a resort to extreme measures. The escort returns of gold have not been maintained this year, so far, up to ths returns of 1856. They have, nevertheless, been above the average of the years 1854-55.

We find in the New-Orleans papers further particulars of late Mexican news. The men implicated in the conspiracy to overthrow the existing Government composed a formidable organization, and the discovery of the crime was considered a most fortunate event. It was doubtless set on foot, or at least authorized, by SANTA ANA. Defensive preparations at Vera Cruz, Tampico, and other parts of the Republic, are constantly going on. Mr. FORSYTH has already opened a correspondence with the Mexican anthorities in relation to the execntion of HENRY A. CRABBE and his party of Americans in Sonora.

The decision in the Metropolitan Police case, contrary to expectation, was not given yesterday, and it is now considered a matter of uncertainty when the pnblic mind will be satisfied on the snbject.

In the Snperior Court the case of CONOVER vs. FERNANDO WOOD and others, came up on an order to show cause why the defendant WOOD should not be punished for contempt in resisting the service or process of that Court npon him. It will be remembered that on the day of the late riot, Coroner PERRY was sent to arrest the Mayor. When he reached the outside of the Mayor's office, he was stopped by the doorkeeper, Mr. DUTCHER. Coroner PERRY did not succeed in making the arrest, and on giving up the attempt, made an affidavit, in substance, that on being met by DUTCHER, he told him that he had process or order from the Snperior Court, which he wished to serve on the Mayor. On information and belief, he stated that the doorkeeper went to the Mayor and informed him that he was present, and wished to serve upon him an order from the Superior Court. The Mayor refused to see him, and as he alleges, had him turned out of the office. On this affidavit an order was granted by Judge HOFFMAN, to show canse why FERNANDO WOOD should not be punished for contempt in thus resisting the officer. The writ was returnable yesterday, and Judge DEAN, for the Mayor, read several affidavits. The first was Mayor WOOD's, in which he stated that on the day in question, he was busily engaged in his office, "endeavoring to prevent any public disturbance," and that until after the Coroner called and left, had no knowledge of any suit having been commenced against him; and that he received no intimation that the Coroner had any process of any kind to serve upon him. As soon he heard that the Coroner had the order, he sent for him, and voluntarily offered to have the process served; thnt he gave no orders to DUTCHER, ACKERMAN or other persons, to eject Coroner PERRY from the office; deponent denied that PERRY was obliged to and did invoke the aid of the military to aid him to serve the process, but on the contrary he submitted to be arrested and gave bail npon the spot; that at all honrs of the day it was cnstomary for persons to be refused admittance to the inner office of deponent. The affidavit of DUTCHER stated that he merely informed the Mayor that the Coroner wished to see him, bnt he did not tell his business. The Sheriff (Mr. WILLET) swore that the Mayor sent for the Coroner, as above stated, and that he did not resist the process of the Court, but merely refnsed to recognize the Metropolitan Police. Affidavits of some twenty-four policemen, and others, were read, to show that no force was nsed to eject Mr. PERRY. Mr. FIELD, Counsel for Mr. CONOVER, stated that as there was such a flat contradiction between the two affidavits, (of PERRY and WOOD,) he must request an order for the examinatlon of Mr. WOOD and the other deponents, under oath; he wished the case referred, either to a referee or to a jury. This was opposed by Mr. DEAN. After considerable discussion his Honor concluded to postpone his decision on this second motion (for a reference) until Thursday. His Honor remarked that unless Mr. WOOD knew that the Coroner had an order of the Court, he, of course, could not be guilty of the attempt to violate that order. Then the question arose whether the affidavits presented by the Mayor presumptively presented a clear case of perjury of the alleged contempt, and if so, whether it was within the province of the Court to direct a further inquiry. These questions he promised to answer on Thursday next.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, the application of Mr. CONOVER was brought up for a writ of mandamus to compel Mr. DEVELIN to deliver np the books and papers of the Street Commissioner's Office. The affidavits of Messrs. CONOVER and DEVELIN were read, each stating the facts as they appeared from their point of vision. The most of the time, however, was occupied by Messrs. FIELD and BRADY in discussing whether they should first argne the point of law in regard to the authority of the Court to declare Mr. CONOVER the bona fide Street Commissioner; or whether the question of fact, as to who first had actual possession of the office, should be tried. The case was adjourned until to-day at 12 o'clock, to allow new affidavits to be introduced.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners made thirty removals and forty appointments yesterday. The shields to be worn by the new force, instead of stars, were distribnted last evening to the men of the various precincts. The old Commissioners, it is understood, made a number of appointments yesterday, hut, as usual, the names and number of the appointees are withheld. The failure of later advices from Albany to corroborate the rumor of Saturday, has given new heart to the Municipal men, many of whom seem yet sanguine that the Court of last resort will decide in their favor.

The Board of Excise Commissioners met yesterday as usual. Storekeepers' licenses were granted to Messrs. Thomas McMullen, Samuel G. Smith, Philip Gordon, B. M. & E. A. Whitlock, W. E. & F. B. Pitman, and William H. Jackson. An inkeeper's license was granted to Mr. Charles Plinta, No. 665 Broadway. On motion of Mr. HOLMES, it was resolved that a storekeepers' license be granted to Thomas Hope & Co., No. 132 Chambers street. Mr. HOLMES moved that the license fee charged Hope & Co. be $50. Carried. Mr. HASKETT voting in the negative. An innkeeper's license was granted to Lorenzo Delmonico, Esq., No. 3 William-street, and on motion of Mr. HOLMES, it was resolved, by the same vote, that his license fee be $50. An inkeeper's license was granted to Siro Delmonico, Esq., Broadway, corner of Chambers-street, and on motion of Mr. HOLMES it was resolved that the fee to be charged him be $100. Mr. HASKETT voting in the negative. Inkeepers' licenses were granted to Charles A. Stetson, of the Astor House, with a fee of $75; Hawley D. Clapp, of the Everett House, fee $50; Hirsm Cranston, of the New-York Hotel, fee $60; ths majority voting for the increased price of the several licenses, and Mr. HASKETT protesting. Commissioner KERR was elected the permanent Chairman of the Board. It was resolved that the Board hereafter receive no application, unless accompanied by a bond, duly executed as required by statnte.

WHEAT, the American candidate for the Chief Justiceship of Kentucky, has probably been elected by a small majority.

Barnegat Light-house is in danger of being wholly nndermined and destroyed by the washing away of the embankment, the tide having cnt a channel at its very base. The late heavy storms carried away more land than is now left between it and the sea, and the presumption is that another northeasterly storm will tumble it down; there will then be no light house on the most dangerous part of the New-Jersey coast nntil another can be built.

The City Inspector will put a double force of men and carts on to-day, or as soon as he can get them, to clean np the dirtiest parts of ths City. Corporation Counsel BUSTERD having advised him that he can legally go on with the work under the late resolutions of the Common Council.

The Board of Governors had a protracted session on Tuesday, it being requisition day, but the business transacted was of little public importance. The Lunatic Asylum is unusually crowded, having 640 inmates at present, with accommodations for only 450. The weekly returns present no important variation.

The Randall's Island children have had $150 appropriated by the Governors, to enable them to do justice to the Fourth of July.

The Young Men's Christian Association gave a parting breakfast (an imported but likely to prove a highly popular institntion,) to Rev. THEODORE CUYLER, yesterday morning—a good-bye to him as he starts for Europe to-day. President ROBERT BLISS, Mr. GRAFTON of the Montreal Association, Drs. MAGOON, ASA D. SMITH and GRISCOM, Rev. Mr. PORTER, of the Intelligencer, and Mr. GOUGH united in the pleasant speech-makings of the novel occasion.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning, the large range of cow stables on the block bounded by Flushing, Park and Franklin avenues and Skillman-street, Brooklyn, were burnt down—the result of carelessness, as is supposed. The stalls, capable of holding 1,800 cows, were recently purchased by Messrs. PETER CLARK and JOHN MCGOWAN, of EX-Alderman HEUSTED for $9,000. Six hundred of the stalls were destroyed by fire, and the loss thereon is estimated at $3,000. The Police and Firemen succeeded in rescuing all of the cows. These buildings were erected about twenty years ago, and have frequently been complained of as a nuisance. A City ordinance prevents their being rebuilt.

In the Kings County Court of Sessions, yesterday, Judge MORRIS charged the Grand Jnry to find indictments under the new Excise Law, only under sections 15, 20, 21 and 29; that the penalties under the other sections were to be recovered by civil process, and also not to consider any complaints against the old Police force, for alleged offences committed by them, except as policemen.

The girl, ROSE COLE, who was so badly burned in Jersey City on Monday, while using burning fluid to kindle a fire, died during Monday night of her injuries.

On Sunday last the trains of the New-York and Erie Railroad passed again over that part of the road at Corning which was submerged. Trains have arrived regularly since that time.

A letter from Troy says: You will be surprised and alarmed to learn that Major-General WOOL lies in a very precarious state at his residence in this city, laboring under a sudden and severe fit of illness, so severe that his recovery is a matter of doubt. The General during the past week has been suffering from a bad cold, produced by exposure during the recent inclement and damp weather, but was well enough to indulge on Saturday evening last in a game of billiards at the house of a friend. On Sunday, the cold increased and resolved itself into pneumonia or inflammation of the lungs, which continued until yesterday, when the symptoms took a dangerous turn, and a new silly, bronchitis, set in, stronger than all the Mexicans who were leagued against the old veteran at Buena Vista. This complication of diseases has rendered the General very low and feeble, and his life is really in very great danger. General WOOL has an attending physician, Dr. THORN, of this City; as consulting physicians, Dr. JAMES MCNAUGHTON, of Albany, and Dr. WATKYNS, of Troy. Their responsibility is indeed a heavy one.

General WALKER spent most of yesterday at General HENNINGSEN'S, in Twelfth-street; many called as naual at his hotel, bnt went away disappointed. In the evening there was a levee and a gathering of choice spirits who affiliate with the leaders; they were splendidly entertained by Mrs. General H., and the festivities were kept up to a late hour.

The annual Sermon before the Alumni of the General Theological Seminary was preached last evening by Rev. Dr. SMEDES, of North Carolina, a large number of clergymen and others being present. Other exercises will take place to-day at 1 and at 6 o'clock P. M.

A New Era in Shipping.

The merchants of New-York had better take heed that the days of our maritime supremacy be not numbered. Until lately our progress in ship-building and in the carrying trade astonished the world. England was the only nation on the globe which even pretended to compete with us, and even she had begun to tremble lest she should be ousted from the throne of Neptune. A change has recently come over the spirit of our dream, which furnishes at once a lesson and a warning.

Amongst the fiercest opponents of the Free-Trade movement, during the agitation of the question in England, were the ship-builders and shipowners of London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, Sunderland and Newcastle. Many of the most important of the boroughs sided, in the struggle, with the landed interest. If the cheaply constructed vessels of the Baltic, and the fast-sailing clippers of America were to be "imported" for sale, they declared it would give a death-blow to the ship-building trade in England, and what guarantee would she then have, for her boasted mastery of the sea? English ships would not sell in the market for the value of the materials of which they were built, and the sun of England, whose disappearance from the political horizon had been so often falsely prophesied, would really and truly set forever. The public, however, refused to recognize the right of the home ship-builders to a monopoly of dear and slow craft. The interests of the whole people were decided to be paramount to the interests of a class, and the Free-Trade principle trinmphed. There was a panic at first, bnt it soon turned ont that in reality the public interest and that of the ship-builders were identical. If it suited a traveler better to make his voyage, or a merchant better to forward his cargo in a month than in six weeks, it assuredly suited a shipowner to have the trip shortened, just as well as either of them. The voyage shortened, the expenses are diminished, and the fare and freight increased, and returns quickened. The result of the abolition of the navigation laws was accordingly the importation of large numbers of American clippers and cheap Baltic craft, to carry on the English carrying trade. The most humiliating chapter in the whole history of English protection is to be found in the prophesies of ruin and disaster which followed the change. No vaticinations, since augury first became a profession, were ever so completely falsified. And not simply were the prophets put to confusion, but the fact was established beyond all question or cavil, that any trade or interest which is of sufficient importance to need protection, has vitality enough to live without it. Protection was demanded for the English farmers; they have not only survived its overthrow but flourish without it. Protection was maintained for the benefit of the British shipping interest, but no sooner was it withdrawn than the ship-builders proved what they could do, if put on their mettle. They built as fast clippers as ourselves, and succeeded in the face of free competition in keeping the hulk of the China trade to themselves. At the same time the Colonial shipwrights woke up as well. With abundance of timber and youthful enterprise and activity, the builders of the St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy, had annually sent a fleet of both large and small vessels for sale to the mother country. But they had then only the old-fashioned, oak-built craft of the English builders to compete with, and the combination of the old heavy model with the new light wood produced but a poor result. As soon as the new régime brought them into direct rivalry with the United States, they found they would either have to change their ways or starve; they chose the former.

The general result is that while the oak-built ships of Great Britain are preferred by the merchants of the old world for the more valuable Eastern cargoes, the British colonial ships are preferred by those who seek lightness and cheapness. But to have the command of the market of the world, a shipowner cannot live in the United States. If he does he is confined in his choice to American built ships. We say this without in the least intending to depreciate the splendid specimens of naval architecture which we produce. But we wish to call attention to the fact that while the British shipowner has the four markets—his own, the colonial, the Baltic and the American to buy in, the American shipowner has only ours. This, we must confess, entails on our merchants a very formidable disadvantage in competing with their rivals in London and Liverpool, and is of itself sufficient to check our maritime progress as compared with that of Great Britain.

So much for sailing ships, which after all are only one of our weak points. The following extract from an English pamphlet recently published, will suggest another:

"The indications are too distinct to be misconceived, that a new era in ocean navigation is rapidly approaching. The proofs have become convincing, to investigating minds, that iron and steam are to supersede wood and canvas, in the movement of the products and passengers between the two hemispheres. The greater size, strength and security in every respect—to say nothing of durability of wear—which may be imparted to iron steamships, combine to render such a result positively certain. Before the end of this century there will not, probably, be a wooden hull navigating the Atlantic under canvas."

Now, if "iron and steam are to supersede wood and canvas" on the ocean,—which position do we find ourselves placed in? Why in such a position, that if iron and iron ships are not admitted to our ports without charge or impost, we may as well make up our minds to be driven ere long from the carrying trade. The present state of our mercantile marine is thus described in the Journal of Commerce on Wednesday:

"Such a depression as now exists in the mercantile marine, has been seldom experienced. Wharves, far up town, usually vacant, are fully occupied by ships laid up in idleness; other vessels, taking their chance in trade, sail in ballast, or otherwise earn an uncomfortable loss to the owners. Profitable voyages are the exceptions. Prominent among the causes tending to this result, is the great increase of ocean steamers. Certainly their abundance aggravates the evil, if it is not an occasion of it. Their influence has been more perceptible since the close of the Eastern war, by which quite a number of them were released from the transport service. Now, it is distinctly recognized; and predictions are already made that we only see the beginning of the end; that sailing vessels must gradually yet inevitably disappear from the Atlantic, before the omnipotent power of steam."

While many of our finest ships are lying idle, there are stated to be upwards of eighty steamers being built in the ports of Great Britain alone, all but two or three being screw propellers; and many of them intended for the Atlantic trade. In other words, they are intended to beat our sailing ships out of the market, and they do beat them.

What is to be done? If any one still believes that we can build steamers to compete with the iron-built steamers of England, we can only refer him to the experience of every company who have navigated the Atlantic. It has been long admitted on all hands that paddle steamers cannot be employed at a profit without a Government subsidy. Screw-propellers can; and hence the phenomenon now witnessed in England of the all but universal adoption of the screw. But wooden vessels are too heavy for rapid screw propulsion. An experiment made by one company of building half their screw steamers of wood has proved a failure, and was abandoned after one or two vessels had been constructed, and iron is now the only material used.

There is not a single screw propeller on the stocks in this country for the European trade; there are upwards of eighty in England. The obvious and unavoidable conclusion is that we cannot build them without loss. But screw steamers are absorbing the whole foreign trade, and unless we are prepared to supply ourselves, as the rest of the world does, with iron ships where we can get them cheapest, we may as well abandon the carrying trade at once. We need, therefore, feel no surprise at the fact, that France, Belgium, Germany, and even Spain and Italy are getting up companies which will traverse the Atlantic with innumerable steamers, bring us the goods we consume, and depart laden with our produce, and thus, not simply deprive our merchants of the profits of our carrying trade, but the country of the glory of standing first among maritime nations.

The Reward of Impartiality.

Mr. Pickwick, between the rival Editors of the Eatonsville Gazette and the Eatonsville Independent, affords a permanent type of the impartial man in this world of petty passion and paltry views.

Mr. Slurk and Mr. Pott propose to accomplish an act of mutual annihilation. They have met in the kitchen of the inn. Pott rises from his seat and grasps the shovel from the fireside. Slurk pauses at the door and clutches more firmly the handle of his carpet-bag. Pickwick, prescient of a collision, rushes between the foes with outstretched arms, and pathetic imprecations of forbearance, just in time to receive the full weight of Slurk's carpet-bag upon his back and the passionate force of Pott's fire-shovel upon his breast. In fact, nothing but the chivalric devotion of Mr. Samnel Weller, and the spontaneous gallantry of Mr. Robert Sawyer, rescue the Quixotic "perpetual chairman" from instant death.

Governor WALKER, in Kansas, in attempting to play the part of this benevolent champion of harmony upon a grander scale, is menaced now with a fate analogous to his—not, indeed, it would appear at the hands of the actual belligerents, between whom he is mediating, bnt, by the volunteer enthusiasm of the friends of either party outside of the Territory. We have already alluded in these columns to the terms in which the Governor has been described by some of the more impracticable Northern "friends of freedom," and we beg the present attention of our readers to the following complimentary observations which have just been bestowed upon him by the Richmond "South."

"We have confidence in Mr. BUCHANAN, and we utterly refuse to believe that his countenances WALKER's outrageous proceedings in Kansas. On the contrary, we predict that the South will yet have reason to be satisfied with the course of the Administration. It is utterly impossible that Mr. BUCHANAN can be guilty of the enormous ingratitude to the South, to say nothing of the apostacy from principle, which would be involved in his approval of WALKER's intrigues with the Black Republicans and his efforts to abolitionize Kansas. The Administration would not dare, even were they so disposed, to defy the utmost resentment and indignation of the Southern Democracy."

The reader will remark that the Southern definition of the word "abolitionism" is even more elastic than we had supposed it to be. To "abolitionize" Kansas, according to the South, is to carry ont in that Territory, the principle of equal rights for free-born citizens of the United States,—it is to object to the despotism of the howie-knife and to maintain the supremacy of the ballot-box. It will be worth while for Northern men to remember this definition—and for the Northern Democracy to lay to heart the flattering assurance flaunted in their faces by this Richmond "power behind the throne," of the absolute supremacy of the Southern Democracy, in the counsels of the party and in the "control" of the Administration.

Nor should it be uninteresting to Northern citizens not of the Democratic faith, to consider the probable issue of our national affairs, should the direction of them be confided absolutely to the will of a party so avowedly sectional in its aims, and so boldly insolent in its tone, as that of which the Richmond South is the appropriate organ.

PREPARING FOR THE WORST.—The Mayor has summoned all the Captains of his guard to meet at his office in the City Hall, to-day, on business of importance. Probably the cause which has impelled him to summon his Captains is the anticipated decision of the Court of Appeals on the Metropolitan Police bill. Though he professes still to believe that the Court will decide in his favor, he is prudently preparing for the worst, and will, probably, give his men timely warning of a possible change which will inevitably alter his relation towards them. He is now laboring under the hallucination that he derives his powers from the Dongan Charter, which has about as much vitality as the leaden statue of GEORGE III., which once stood in the Bowling-green. His recent appointments have all been made under the Dongan Charter; and, as that instrument did not make any mention of a City Judge, this Mayor has denied the right of Judge RUSSELL to any exercise of authority in making appointments, to the great astonishment and indignation of his confederate Commissioner.

Death of Douglas Jerrold.

Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, in announcing the death of DOUGLAS JERROLD, of which paper he was editor, says:

"This sad event took place on Monday last, at his residence, Kilburn Priory, St. John's-wood, after a very painful illness of about a week or ten days. On Saturday and Sunday all hope of his recovery was abandoned, as the disease had shown unmistakeable symptoms of attacking the heart. Medical attendance could only elleviate, in a very slight degree, the agony he endured, and on Monday morning the worst fears of his friends became unfortunately verified. He continued very feeble during the morning, and about 12¾ o'clock he expired in the arms of his eldest son, and surrounded by relatives and friends."

"The London Times publishes a generous tribute to the personal and literary qualities of JERROLD, and assigns him a higher rank, both socially and as an author, than we had supposed he held in England. His writings were all intended for home consumption, and they were so purely local in their allusions, that they have never enjoyed that degree of popularity in this country which the productions of some of his cotemporaries have done who were not half so well known, or so much talked about. Neither of the novels of JERROLD ever had a great popularity here, and his plays, with the exception of the "Rent Day," have not kept a place upon the American stage. His brief stories and essays have had a circulation in the class of periodicals which republish indiscriminately almost everything that appears in the current light literature of Great Britain; but his political writings have little in them to interest American readers. He was the author of one piece of capital domestic satire, which has done more to make him known on this side of the Atlantic than anything else he has published. The "Caudle Lectures," published in Punch, were full of telling humor, and the satire was of a kind which all human beings could comprehend and relish. Wherever there are husbands Job Caudle is sure of a sympathetic admirer. But this happy success was an exception to all of Mr. JERROLD's other productions. His efforts were all intended for Englishmen, and he never put pen to paper without seeming to regard the little instrument in his hand as a catspult to demolish some obstacle to the happiness of the people around him. He tried his hand at almost every species of literary composition—plays, novels, essays, epigrams, and apologues; but his true sphere was that of a journalist; his epigrammatic turn of thought, his personal experiences, his sympathies, and his force of language, all eminently fitted him for the post of a writer for the Press; and it was in this employment where he found himself most at home, and achieved his greatest successes.

Of his social qualities, his brilliant sarcasms in conversation, and his unpremeditated utterances, those who knew him best speak in the highest terms, and the tributes paid to his memory by the English Press, are in the highest degree complimentary to his character. But, it is only as an author that we know him, and in that character he ranks next below the great men who were his cotemporaries. He had been a midshipman, and a player, but he appears to have had small qualifications for either the quarter-deck or the stage. He had a hearty and honest contempt for all shams and for every form of oppression, and was bitter in his denunciations of the oppression of the poor. He has been represented as grossly given to drink, but a man who worked so well and so long, and who supported himself and his family by the exercise of his pen up to the hour of his death, could not have been a man of grossly intemperate habits. He had edited a great number of literary journals, all of which were successful while under his charge. His son, BLANCHARD JERROLD, succeeds him as the Editor of Lloyd's Weekly, a paper which he had placed at the head of periodicals of its class.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 23.

Governor CUMMING will take his family with him to Utah, intending to make that Territory his permanent home. Col. JACK HAYS, of TEXAS celebrity, now Surveyor-General of California, will probably be transferred to Utah in a similar capacity.

BRIGHAM YOUNG has never recognized the United States surveys, but claims possession of all the soil in Utah. Not one of the inhabitants there holds lands derived by Government title, and hence even Salt Lake City is open to preemption. This is one of the perplexities with which the Federal Courts in the Territory will have to deal, together with establishing or confirming titles to lands which may be derived in pursuance of United States laws.

It is expected that the troops and civil officers will leave for Utah in the middle of July, or on the 1st of August.

Colonel RICHARDSON having declined the Governorship of Nebraska, Governor IZARD will return to the Territory and resume his duties.

T. H. O'NEILL has been removed as District Attorney for the Southern District of Ohio, and probably STANLEY MATTHEWS will be appointed in this place.

Mr. RENCHER, of North Carolina, has returned home with the assurance of his appointment to the Governorship of New-Mexico, vice MERIWETHER, who has tendered his resignation, to take effect in October.

Contrary to public expectation, there has been no definite action to-day by the Administration on the California Overland Mail Contract service. The various bidders, or their friends, continue to vigorously press their respective interests. In consequence of their wishing to be heard, it is probable an Official Decision will not be made before the close of the week.

The Appointments for Utah Completed—Position of the Mormons—The Only Remedy for the Abuses of Mormonism.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 22, 1857.

The Government has probably completed the appointments for Utah, both Executive and Judicial, and the instructions for the Governor are no doubt ready. The spirit of these is simply what has been declared by Mr. BUCHANAN, to wit: that the laws of the United States must be obeyed in the Territory. The body of troops who, if need be, are to aid in the enforcement of the laws, are already detailed for this service, but will not reach the Territory before the 1st of September.

The Mormons, generally, as we are advised, deride the idea of the exertion of military force against them. They have among them shrewd lawyers and diplomatists, who will contrive to keep all Mormondom within the pale of constitutional law. Over the consciences of the Mormons the Federal authorities can exercise no control, and their morals cannot be improved by force of arms. It is probable that they will be careful to commit no overt act of treason, but their Juries will be so constructed that a due and impartial administration of Justice will be impracticable.

A remedy for the abuses of Mormonism will be found only in the repeal of the act establishing the Territory, and this we have no moral right to do, unless it shall be justified by their persistence in such a treasonable course as shall render the Territory unfit to come into the Federal Union. Before such an act will be resorted to by Congress they will take care to inform themselves, from disinterested and impartial sources, of the actual state of facts which will justify it. Perhaps they will send a Commission to Utah, as they did to Kansas, to inquire into the past and present condition of the Mormon community.

Meanwhile, the Mormons, receiving daily accessions to their ranks from foreign countries, are spreading through the central regions of the continent, and instead of one community at Salt Lake, will, before long, have many organized and thriving communities. It is a new fanaticism, and commends itself to the licentiousness of the times. The Gentiles themselves, including some of the Federal officers, [illegible] disposed, it is said, to fall in with it, but in an irregular manner. It is to be hoped that the new appointees, and also the officers of the troops who may be sent out there, will set a better moral example to the Mormons than has been done in some cases heretofore.

Allegheny County (Penn.) Tax Convention.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Tuesday, June 23.

The Allegheny Tax Convention assembled here to-day. The County was generally represented.

The Committee of Investigation reported the following resolutions:

First, that while we declare our conviction that the County of Allegheny and cities of Pittsburg and Allegheny are able and willing to pay every dollar of their honest and legal indebtedness, it is the duty of the people to avail themselves of the legal investigation challenged by the County Commissioners and Railroad Directors, and thoroughly investigate the conduct of these officials in their issues of Railroad bonds, and warrants for the payment of Railroad interest and for the recent newspaper publications, and as to the legality of the taxes now proposed to be assessed for the purpose above specified.

The second recommends that measures be taken to bring about a transfer of the stock held by the County, in all the railroad companies to which she has subscribed, to all the holders of bonds issued in payment of said stock, or to their trustees, for the benefit of said holders; and that, until the same be effected, the right to control said stocks, and vote upon the same, be taken from the Commissioners, and vested in the Judges of the several Courts of the County.

The third recommends an entire divorce between the County Commissioners and Railroad Companies, and that no Commissioner or others in their employ be made a director or hold an office under a railroad company.

The fourth recommends the Legislature to pass an act to prohibit the Commissioners from drawing on the Treasurer, or accepting or paying warrants except for legitimate purposes, or for funds actually in the treasury, unless the Commissioners give security for the performance of their duties.

The fifth recommends reform in the offices of the County Commissioners and Treasurer; declares the right of the people to look into their own affairs, and says that we will support no one who holds opinions contrary to the security of property.

The sixth recommends a Standing Committee of citizens, whose duty it shall be to direct and supervise such measures as are necessary; to address the people; and to devise the means to carry the views of the Convention into effect.

The seventh says that in case it should be held that taxes are leviable for railroad purposes, that it be requested by law, and that the same be separately and specifically assessed, and a separate account kept at the Treasury.

The eighth demands if it shall be found that money has heretofore been paid without authority of law upon time-warrants drawn by the Commissioners or Treasurer, that proper measures be taken to hold the parties concerned to a strict accountability.

The ninth demands, if bonds given by the county have been disposed of at any time at a loss to the people, without their consent, or in violation of the terms upon which they were issued, that measures be taken for repairing the loss by a suit against the parties offending.

After the reading of the minority report, to the effect that Messrs. MCCLINTOCK, BAILY and BINGHAM, of the Committee, were prevented from giving their views to the Convention for want of time, and expressing a desire for the maintenance of the public faith inviolate, the above resolutions of the majority were adopted, by 65 against 9.

There was considerable discussion and excitement in the interval; during which a resolution protesting against paying any such tax, and a substitute protesting against repudiation and asserting that the County was bound in honor and good faith to meet all the responsibilities incurred for the legal acts of the Commissioners, were laid upon the table.

The Convention was not altogether harmonious in its proceedings. Some of the members withdrew. Many of the delegates from the country if not in favor of repudiation, were opposed to paying interest on any bonds of illegal issue, while the city delegates, with few exceptions, were in favor of paying the bonds.

The Public Works of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, June 23.

In the Supreme Court this morning Judge LEWIS gave a decision in the injunction case relative to the sale of the main line of Public Works. The decision declares that the State had a right to order the sale, and that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company or any other body had a right to purchase; but the Legislature had no right to exempt the purchasers from tonnage tax. This decision will probably prevent the sale.

No Decision in the Metropolitan Police Case.

ALBANY, Tuesday, June 23.

No decision in regard to the Metropolitan bill case, has yet been arrived at, and there is no certainty as to when it will be given. The rumors that the constitutionality of the law will be upheld are utterly without foundation, as there is not the slightest ground upon which to base a report as to the decision of the Court one way or the other.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.
Before Hon. Justice Hoffman.

Daniel D. Conover vs. Fernando Wood, et al.—It will be remembered that the order requiring Mayor Wood and others, to show cause why they should not be punished for contampt in rasisting the process of the Superior Court, was returnable yesterday at 10 o'clock.

The attendance of spectators was rather small, considering the excitement which the matter has occasioned. The diminntive Special Term room, however, was quite crowded.

Mr. Field appeared for the plsintiff, and expressed himself prepared to proceed.

Ex-Judge Dean stated that he appeared for Mr. Wood, and inquired if it were necessary for his client to be personally present. If so, he would come immediately, but if not, as he was particularly engaged he should like to have his appearance waived.

His Honor remarked that in a mere motion to show cause, the personal appearance of the defendant was not necessary.

Judge DEAN then read the following affidavits:

AFFIDAVIT OF MAYOR WOOD.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Fernando Wood, the above-named defendant, being duly sworn, says, that he is the Mayor of the City of New-York, and was such Mayor on the 16th day of June inst. That from early in the morning of said 16th June, until after dark, he was engaged in the Mayor's office of said City in the transaction of official business.

Deponent further says that on account of certain occurrences on the 16th day of June instant, deponent and others feared that there might be a conflict between certain parties and organized bodies of men; that very many persons in said City were excited, and large crowds of people had assembled around the City Hall; that deponent was actively engaged in the said Mayor's office in endeavoring to prevent any public disturbance, and until after the said Frederick W. Perry, Coronsr, had been at the City Hall, on the 16th June instant, and had left, deponent had no knowledge or intimation either that this suit had been commenced, or that said Perry had any process of any kin d to serve on deponent.

Deponent further saith, that it is not true that he has either willfully or designedly resisted the service on him of any lawful order, or of any order or process of this Court, bnt, on the contrary, that deponent did, on the said 16th day of June, instant, and before there had been any breach of the public peace, and as soon as he heard that said Perry had process to serve on him, send for said Perry, and voluntarily offer to have said process served.

Deponent further says that the circumstances attending the first visit of said Perry to the Mayor's office on the said 16th June, inst., so far as they come to deponent's knowledge, were as follows, viz: Said Perry called at the outer office, and informed the messenger, Wm. St. Dutcher, that he desired to see deponent; that Dutcher opened the door of the Mayor's private office, and announced the name of Mr. Perry, but did not say anything about the nature of the business on which said Perry desired to see deponent; that deponent was at the fime engaged, and replied to the said Dutcher, and told him to say to Mr. Perry, "I am engaged, and cannot see any person now." Deponent says, had he known the nature of Coroner Perry's business, he would have called him in the said private office, and afforded him a very possible facility.

Deponent says that he gave no orders to said Dutcher, to Capt. Ackerman, or to any other person or persons, to turn said Perry out of the said outer office of the Mayor of New-York; and deponent says that if the said Perry was either forcibly or violently ejected from the said office by said Ackerman, or by any other person or persons, it was done without the order, knowledge or assent of deponent, and that said Ackerman was not in said private office on that day, nor did deponent see said Ackerman on that day; deponent says it is not true that said Perry was obliged to, and did invoke the aid of the military, and that by means of such assistance he was enabled to make the service which he could not otherwise do on account of the resistance of this deponent and the said Ackerman to the execution of the said process; that, on the contrary, deponent, as Mayor of New York had, at about 11 o'clock A. M, on the 16th of June, and prior to the commencement of the said action, made a requisition on Major-General SANDFORN for the military to preserve the public peace, and long before the arrival of any military company or companies at the Park, had sent for said Perry to come and serve the said process; and said Perry did come, alone and unaccompanied by any military aid or assistance whatever, and did, in the private office of the said Mayor, serve the said order of arrest; and deponent gave bail thereon on the said 16th day of June, inst. Deponent says that it is a matter of usual and almost hourly occurrence to refuse admittance to persons to the Mayor's private office when deponent is engaged in business, and that it is an absolute necessity to have persons stationed at the door to prevent the admission of persons to said private office except at such times as they can be seen without interfering with other business. That persons have been so stationed for the entire time that deponent has occupied the office of Mayor, and that Mr. Dutcher, the Messenger, who was so stationed at the door on the 16th, has acted as Messenger for deponent for nearly a year last past.

FERNANDO WOOD.

SHERIFF WILLET'S AFFIDAVIT.

James C. Willet, of said City, being duly sworn, says that he is Sheriff of said County, and that on the 16th day of June instant he, in the discharge of his duty, called upon Fernand Wood, at the Mayor's office, at about 3 to 3½ o'clock. That after an interview with said Mayor on business having no reference to the process in this action, and prior to the collision that occured at the rear steps of the City Hall, said Fernando Wood requested deponent to send for Coroner Perry and say to him that he, said Wood, was informed that said PERRY had an order of arrest to serve on him; that deponent immediately repaired to the Sheriff's office, and sent Deputy-Sheriff Stewart over to the Coroner's office to find said Perry. Deponent further says that he was in and around said City Hall during the entire day of the 16th of June, and at no time heard or understood that there was any opposition made by said Wood to the service of the process in this action, but that he supposed at the time and understood that the opposition of toe Mayor was only to the right of the Metropolitan Police officers to serve criminal process.

JAMES C. WILLET.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEPUTY MCKIBBEN.

City and County of New York, ss.—John McKibben of said City being duly sworn, says he is one of the Deputies of the Sheriff of said City and County, and was on the 16th day of June inst; that he was in the outer office of the Mayor of said City on the afternoon of that day, prior to 3 o'clock, P. M., where it was announced to the Mayor, Fernando Wood, that Coroner Perry had on that day been at the outer office of said Mayor for the purpose of serving process, and had been denied admission; deponent says that immediately on said announcement being made, said Wood called for the messenger at the door and ordered him to send for Coroner Perry.

Deponent says that he himself did, at the request of said Fernando Wood, go to the sheriff's office and outside the City Hall, and inquired for said Perry for the purpose of informing him that the Mayor wanted to see him, and he made diligent inquiries for said Perry, but that he was unable to find him; deponent, while at the Mayor's office on the said 16th of June, heard said Fernando Wood direct the messenger to admit Coroner Perry whenever he should call.

Deponent further says that all he has stated occurred at least one hour prior to any collision on that day between the Metropolitan and Municipal police, and that it was understood by deponent, so far as deponent knows by every person who had any interview with said Fernando Wood prior to the collision between the persons at or near the rear steps of the City Hall on the said 16th day of June inst., that said Wood not only did not seek to avoid the service of the process in the hands of the said Perry, but was anxious to have the said Perry found and admitted to said Wood's office. JOHN MCKIBBEN, Ja.

DEPUTY SHERIFF STEWART'S AFFIDAVIT.

City and County of New York, ss.—John T. Stewart of said City, being sworn, says that he is one of the deputies of James C. Willet, Sheriff, and that on the afternoon of the 16th of June, inst., said Willet requested deponent to go to the Coroner's office, and find Coroner Perry, and request him to come to the Sheriff's office in said city; and inquired for said Perry; that said Perry was not in, and deponent not knowing the business on which said Willet wanted to see said Perry, brought another Coroner with him to the Sheriff's office. JOHN T. STEWART.

AFFIDAVIT OF WILSON M. DUTCHER.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Wilson M. Dutcher, of said City and County, being sworn, says, that for several months last past he has been a member of the police of the City of New York, and stationed at the outside of the door to the Mayor's private office, and was on duty at the place on the 16th of June inst. That the outer office of said Mayor is occupied by the City Marshal and his clerk, by the first and second assistant Marshals, by the Mayor's Chief Clerk, by the Police Clerk, by the Mayor's Complaint Book Clerk, by the Clerk of the Health Physician, and by other persons, all of whom have and occupy desks in said office, and all of whom have persons constantly calling during the day to transact official business. That the Mayor occupies a small room adjoining, and that the usual course for persons having business with the Mayor, is to inquire of deponent; for deponent to take the names and announce it to the Mayor, and for the Mayor to answer whether he can see the person so calling, and for deponent to communicate the answer. That it is an ordinary occurrence for the Mayor to reply that he is engaged and can't see the person calling. That from one to five hundred persons call during the day at said office to see the said Mayor, and that his official engagements require him to refuse to see many at the time they call. That owing to a difficulty growing out of the attempt of the plaintiff, Daniel D. Conover, to take forcible possession of this office of Street Commissioner, there was an excitement around the City Hall, and that more than doubles the ordinary number of persons were in the outer office of the Mayor on the said sixteenth, and seeking interviews with him. That some time after noon of the said 16th, Coroner Perry called at said outer office, and informed deponent that he wanted to see the Mayor. That deponent in the usual manner announced the name of said Perry. That the Mayor replied, "I am engaged, and cannot see any person now." That deponent did not know that said Perry had any process of this Court to serve, and did not inform said Wood that he had any process, nor did said Perry inform deponent that he had any such process. Deponent further says, that the same answer given to said Perry had been given to others during the day, and that he knows the fact that said Wood was at the time that the said Perry called, actually engaged in the transaction of important official business.

Deponent further says, that he used no violence towards said Perry on said 16th June, nor did he see any one else use violence toward him. That in a short time after said Perry had left, some person was admitted to see said Wood. That almost immediately was called and was told by said Wood that if said Perry came again to admit him, and to send some messenger to find him. That this order was given by said Wood at least an hour prior to the collision between the police at the rear steps of the City Hall.

Deponent further saith, that about 5 o'clock P. M. of the same day, said Perry again announced his name, and he was forthwith admitted to the Mayor's private office, and that said Perry came in alone, unassisted and unaccompanied by a military or other officer or person. WILSON M. DUTCHER.

SECOND-MARSHAL HINCHMAN'S AFFIDAVIT

City and County of New-York, ss.—George W. Hinchman being duly sworn says, that he is the Second-Marshal, and that his desk and place of business is in the Mayor's outer office in said City; that he saw Coroner Perry in the out office on the 16th June instant; that his attention was called to the fact of his presence by some loud talk, and that he saw said Perry walk out of said office, and that there was no violence or force used toward or upon said Perry in said office. G. W. HINCHMAN.

Sworn before me this 22d June, 1857. WILLIAM MCKELLAR, Commissioner of Deeds.

CAPTAIN ACKERMAN'S AFFIDAVIT.

City and County of New York, ss.—Abraham Ackerman, of said City, being duly sworn, says that he is a Police Captain, and is the person referred to in the affidavit of Frederick W. Perry; that he was present on the 16th of June inst. in the outer office of the Mayor, when said Perry called; that deponent shook hands with said Perry, and they each spoke to the other in a friendly manner; that he did not hear said Perry mention the word warrant, order of arrest, or anything relating to any action or any process in any action. Deponent further says, that the only time during this day on the 16th of June when he or any person in his presence touched the said Perry was when they, in a friendly manner, shook each other by the hand; and that it is not true that deponent, or any one in deponent's presence told said Perry that the Mayor's orders were that deponent should be turned out of the room—or that he seized said Perry and forcibly and violently ejected said Perry from said apartment or from any apartment. Deponent further says that within fifteen minutes or a half hour after said Perry left the office of said Mayor, he heard the Mayor's messenger, Mr. Dutcher, send a person to find said Perry, by, as he said, the order of the Mayor.

ABRAHAM ACKERMAN.

AFFIDAVIT OF NINETEEN POLICEMEN.

City and County of New York, ss.—Wm. Murray, Carpenter Brown, Wm. B. Pentecost, Isaac S. Sharp, James A. De Clark, John Noon, Patrick Reilly, Jos. Garnison, Isaac T. Redfield, Michael Coggins, Peter Muldoon, Andrew Jackson, Joseph Wills James T. Downing, Peter D. Demarest, Robert Miller, George Weeks, Edward Scammell and Henry Harrison, being each severally sworn, doth for himself severally depose and say, that he has heard read the affidavit of Abraham Ackerman, and that he was present in the Mayor's outer office, in the City Hall, on the 16th inst., at the time that Coroner Perry applied for admission to the Mayor's private office, and that he knows that the facts stated in said affidavit of said Ackerman are true so far as relates to the interview between said Ackerman and said Perry, and so far as relates to the fact that said Perry left the said outer office of said Mayor voluntarily and without any force or violence being used by said Ackerman, or by any other person, toward said Perry.

A REFERENCE TO EXAMINE MAYOR WOOD.

On the reading of the affidavits being concluded, Mr. Field remarked that the affidavits did not corroborate each other. Coroner Perry was a reliable man, and his affidavit, upon which the order to show cause was granted, was entitled to as much respect as that of any person. These affidavits just read flatly contradicted his, and there must be perjury somewhere, and it must be looked into. He thought that the Mayor went a little too far in stating that all these interviews were peaceable, and he should like an order of reference to examine Mr. Wood, and the other deponents, personally, upon the facts in the case. He thought that the Court clearly possessed the power to issue such an order, and cited the importance of the case as warranting it. He referred the Court to 2 R. S., 626, sec. 19 and sec. 271 of the code for a definition of their powers.

Judge Dean opposed the motion for a reference, on the ground that the affidavit upon which the order to show cause had been granted was insufficient. The Coroner did not claim to have seen the Mayor, and did not even know that he was within his office at the time. The Mayor, he thought, had been misunderstood, if not misrepresented by the press. So far from resisting the process of any court he would be the first one to submit to legal process.

Judge Dean read and commented on Coroner Perry's affidavit in support of this view. Mr. Perry, he continued, does not name the person who announced the order that the Coroner should be turned out. The Mayor swears positively that the business the Coroner came upon was not announced to him; and the Messenger says that he did not announce to the Mayor the business of the Coroner. Another answer to the affidavit are the affidavits of persons to be relied upon—Sheriff Willet and his two Deputies. The question is not whether a police officer or a Coroner has committed perjury—there is not much difference between them, (laughter;) but the question is whether Fernando Wood has been guilty of contempt in resisting the process of this Court. Sheriff Willet says that Mayor Wood requested him to send for the Coroner, as he had heard that he wished to serve a process upon him. The messenger returned, and brought another Coroner along, supposing probably that some ordinary Coroner's business was to be done—holding an inquest—

Mr. Field—Upon Mayor Wood?

Mr. Dean—No, Sir; upon a metropolitan police officer—prospectively, as we have lately seen to be the case. [Laughter.]

Judge Dean went on to say that Mr. Wood did not desire to avoid investigation; but he insisted that, under the statute, the Mayor was not guilty of contempt, which was defined very clearly by the statute. (2 R. S 278.) There must be willful resistance to the order or process of the court, not mere resistance to the service of the order or process, to constitute contempt. Even the anti-renters were permitted to ride away to avoid arrest, without being adjudged guilty of contempt. If Coroner Perry wanted a remedy, he could find it in a civil action, and he was not sure but he had already commenced one. So many had been commenced that he had not yet read all their titles. The Mayor was responsible for any damages the coroner had sustained by his orders, and under the new Code both he and the Mayor could be witnesses. But the power of the Court to punish for contempt should not be invoked to aid him.

A JURY TRIAL PROPOSED BY WAY OF VARIETY.

Mr. Field then proposed that the Court should order it to go before a Jury. He would be ready with a case to-morrow morning. The proceeding was both for a civil and criminal contempt, and the affidavit upon which the order was granted was sufficient. The Mayor could not release himself from his responsibility by alleging that he was ignorant. Criminal force had been used to prevent the service of the process, and the Mayor, if he authorized such resistance, must be punished the same as any other individual who ignorantly or willfully violates the law. The Sheriff and Coroner Perry are both credible men, and the affidavit of one is as worthy of credence as the other. The Coroner distinctly stated that after twice making known his errand he was forcibly ejected from the office. If the Mayor was sincere in his answer why should he desire to avoid an investigation? All they wanted was a reference, either to a referee or to a Jury, and an opportunity to cross examine the Mayor and the others, and bring further proof.

THE DECISION RESERVED.

His Honor then made the following remarks:

I feel it necessary to say a word here, though I shall not decide this motion at the present time. I congratulate myself—(and, indeed, I believe it is the good fortune of most of the Judges in this City)—that applications of this kind are so rare as to make at least myself destitute, from inexperience, of the necessary information, immediately to decide questions of contempt or any other questions which arise on motions of this nature. This application arises under an order to show cause, mainly drafted by myself after an examination of the law. It is founded upon a provision of the statute which has been referred to by Judge Dean—(2 R. S., page 278, section 10, and subdivision 4.) It being founded upon that, an order to show cause appeared to me to be the proper as well as the legal course to be pursued—the direction of the statute being that the party shall have notice of the accusation against him for a reasonable time to prepare for his defence. The affidavits which are now produced presumptively make out a case exonerating this defendant from the charge of intentional resistance to the service of the process ordered by this Court. It is not to be denied that the scienter (so to speak) of that intended resistance—the criminality of contumacy in regard to an order of the Court—consists in the intention; and the existence of that intention must be deduced upon knowledge or reasonable information. In other words, unless Mr. Wood knew, at the time Coroner Perry attempted to serve this order, that he had an order, to which the defendant was bound to pay obeisance—unless he had that knowledge, or some information that Coroner Perry came there to serve such order, he could not be guilty of the attempt to violate or resist the process of this Court. His own affidavit is explicit that no information was given to him by Coroner Perry that he had such a process—that the communication which was made to him was made through Mr. Dutcher, his ordinary messenger; and that the only information communicated to him was that the Coroner wished to see him. Mr. Dutcher corroborates this fully. He did not communicate to the Mayor that Coroner Perry was there with a process for the purpose of serving it on the Mayor. He is thus placed in a position in which it appears to me difficult to imagine that the foundation upon which the alleged intention of violating or resisting the process can be sustained; in other words, how any testimony can be adduced which will tend to convict Mayor Wood and Mr. Dutcher of such falsehood—such absolute falsehood and perjury as they must have been guilty of in these affidavits, if Coroner Perry did communicate to Dutcher, and Dutcher did communicate to the Mayor a knowledge of the process or order which was in his possession, and his desire to see the Mayor for the purpose of serving it. Yet that is not impossible, because there may be proof of declaration made by Dutcher, or of admissions made by the Mayor which would tend to neutralize or contradict their positive statements. I am then brought to the question, whether, under this section of the statute, when the affidavits to meet the order to show cause, present a strong case to the Judge's mind of freedom from any contumacy done or intended, it is within the province of the Court, and the practice that has been observed in similar cases, to direct a further inquiry; and it appears to me that that is the only question; but, at any rate, it is the only question which, as at present advised, I should take time to consider. I think at present that the order to show cause had sufficient foundation; and again I am strongly inclined to the opinion that the provision of the Revised Statutes, to which reference has been made by the defendant's counsel (subdivision 4, sec. 10) can properly bear any interpretation which would embrace a case of intended resistance to a process or order known or to be issued by a Court, although no actual service is made upon the party. Upon these two points, I see no reason to change the opinion which induced me to grant the order to show cause, although I shall give them further consideration. The main question is the one alluded to—whether in the case and upon an order to show cause (being equivalent to the notice of the accusations against the party) under this mode of proceedings—and when the defendant makes a case sufficient to exempt him, it is the course of practice in similar instances to give an opportunity to the party making the accusations for further inquiry, and to adduce testimony, and, if that be the case, whether a reference of the matter to a referee would be the proper mode. I will, therefore, adjourn the case for decision on the application until Thursday, at 10 o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—JUNE 23.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE—APPLICATION FOR ORDER FOR DELIVERY OF BOOKS, ETC.

In the matter of the application of Daniel D. Conover to procure delivery of books, &c., of Street Department.—This case was commenced yesterday. Messrs. Conover and Develin were present with their counsel. Mr. Sickles and Richard C. Connolly were also in attendance as spectators. The room was passably filled, though no excitement was manifest.

Mr. Field arose and read the facts of the controversy, contained in the affidavit of Mr. Conover, which has before been published in the TIMES.

Mr. Busteed, for Mr. Develin, then read the following

AFFIDAVIT.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Charles Develin, of said City, being duly sworn, saith, that he is in possession of the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, and was so in possession of said office and its books, records, maps and documents, and performing the duty when he received the order to show cause in the proceedings above entitled.

And this deponent further saith, that he is advised and believes that he is, in law and in fact, Street Commissioner of said City, and entitled to hold that office.

That deponent was duly appointed to such office on the 19th day of June, A. D. 1857, by the Mayor of the City of New-York, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen of said City.

That he has accepted the said appointment, and has duly taken and filed his oath as such Street Commissioner, and given the requisite security as such, according to law.

Deponent further saith that at the time he was so appointed, Charles Turner was, as he has been informed and believes, performing the duties of Street Commissioner aforesaid, claiming and having, as deponent is informed and believes, the right to do so, in virtue of his holding the office of Deputy Street Commissioner for the City of New-York.

Deponent lastly saith that he has been advised and believes that Daniel D. Conover has no right or title whatever to the office of Street Commissioner for the said City. (Signed) CHARLES DEVELIN.

Sworn this 22d day of June, 1857.
JAMES SANDFORD, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Brady stated that the case was one of great importance, and as he was associated with Mr. Develin, he would ask if there was any objection to his appearing with the Corporation Counsel.

Mr. Field—O, certainly not.

Mr. Brady thought the case was in the nature of a replevin, rather than a suit to obtain the franchise. He wished to know if all the points of the case would now be discussed. He contended that it would be improper to have the question of the title to the office decided on such a motion. He thought it should only be decided by a quo warranto.

Mr. Field stated that they should discuss the case on all the questions directly appertaining thereto which appeared, and all those questions should be disposed of together. This proceeding was the proper one, and the only way in which the question of title could be tested. He referred to 1 R. S., 336, where it provided the manner in which the demand should be made for the books and papers of the office.

Mr. Brady thought it was only a question of the order of the argument. It was expressly decided that the statute just referred to had no application where the title of the claimant to the office was denied.

His Honor remarked that he thought this was not the place to decide the title to the office.

After some discussion, the Court decided that the case would proceed as it stood.

Mr. Field proposed to show, 1st, that the Court should inquire into the circumstances of the case; and 2d, that it should declare that Mr. Conover was entitled to the office of Street Commissioner.

The Court—Is there any dispute as to the facts?

Mr. Brady—No, Sir.

Mr. Field—Yes, Sir. I propose to show that the applicant is entitled to the office, and then I shall call on you to see if he has had possession of the office, and has been turned out of it by force.

Mr. Brady asked the Court to inform him what the gentleman was proceeding upon. The facts had been submitted on affidavits, and yet a question of facts was being raised.

Mr. Field—I am proceeding to show to the Court, that the power of appointment is in the hands of the Governor, and the Mayor and Common Council have no more power than any other respectable persons to appoint a Street Commissioner. He claimed that no inquiry should be made into the facts of the expulsion.

Mr. Brady claimed that the counsel should elect on which point he was to argue the question; whether first on the point of law, or question of fact.

Mr. Field proceeded by claiming that the Court should inquire into all the circumstances. He proposed that the Court should inquire into the question of the ejectment, and he preferred to have the argument on the questions of law previous to those of fact.

Mr. Brady objected. He thought that the Court should strictly confine itself to the position defined by the law. He thought that the preliminary question should be disposed of previous to touching the questions of law.

Considerable discussion here followed as to what was the preliminary question. Mr. Brady spoke at some length in regard to the nature of the proceeding before the Court, and the propriety of introducing further proof.

Mr. Field replied that no fact stated in the petition was denied, but it averred that Mr. Develin now held possession by force of the office and its appurtenances. He only wanted to show that, at the time Mr. Develin took possession of the office, Mr. Conover was in full legal possession, but was driven out by a mob, at the head of which was the Mayor of the City. This he was prepared to show in five minutes, by the evidence of Mayor Wood, Deputy Sheriff McKibben, Mr. Develin, and others, and asked his Honor to allow him to subpœna those gentlemen forthwith.

Mr. Brady objected to any testimony in relation as to who now had possession of the office. It was wholly irrelevant to the issue before the Court. He cited numerous authorities to sustain his view.

The Court remarked that Mr. Brady was assuming that his client was in the legal possession of the office.

Mr. Brady said the proper remedy, when there was a dispute as to the possession of a public office, was by a writ of quo warranto.

Mr. Field proposed to put in an affidavit from Mr. Conover denying the assertion of Mr. Develin that he, (Conover) was not in possession of the office when he was forcibly ejected.

The Court ruled that the affidavit could be admitted.

Mr. Field then read the affidavit as follows:

City and County of New York, ss.—Daniel D. Conover, the above-named applicant, being duly sworn, saith, that he took possession of the office of Street Commissioner on Ssturday, June 13, 1857, and remained in possession thereof during the day. That on Monday, June 15, he retained possession thereof, and remained in the rooms appropriated to the Street Commissioner in the Hall of Records during the whole of that day till four o'clock P. M., the time of closing said office. That on Tuesday, June 16, he returned in the morning to his said rooms and transacted business pertaining to his said office, and was proceeding in the discharge of his duties when a party of policemen, headed by John W. Bennett, who stated that he was acting by command of the Mayor, finally ejected deponent from the said rooms and kept him out of them all day.

That on Wednesday morning, June 17, deponent returned to his said rooms, and was there met by Charles Develin, who refused to allow deponent to go to deponent's desk, and said that he had force enough to keep deponent out, and intended to do so, and deponent further saith that the said Develin had with him a large force of policemen and other persons to assist him in keeping deponent away, and did so keep him away. And this deponent further saith that, as he is advised and believes, the said Charles Develin has not been in any way in possession of the said office, except by retaining the rooms aforesaid, and the books and papers of the office, since the forcible expulsion of deponent; and further, that as deponent is informed and believes, Charles Turner has never had any possession of said rooms or the office of Street Commissioner, except as Deputy under deponent or some other person.

D. D. CONOVER.

Sworn, June 23d, 1857, before me, C. A. PEABODY.

Mr. Busteed objected to the reception of the affidavit, because it raised the very question which the Court had intimated it would not try here—the question as to who was entitled to the office of Street-Commissioner. It did not raise the question contemplated by the Revised Statutes—the only one which the Court had any authority to determine. He then read from the Revised Statutes the section under which the order of the Court in this proceeding was issued, and under which the claim of Mr. Conover was based—the proceedings to compel a public officer to deliver the books and papers of the office to his successor.

The Court interrupted Mr. Busteed, by remarking that the counsel might set up any claim which they pleased, but that claiming a point would not establish it.

Mr. Busteed replied that there was another point of objection in the affidavit. It presented an entirely new state of facts to those presented in the original petition. It involved both a question of law and of fact, and his and his associates required time for consultation as to their next course of proceeding. After consultation with his associates, he said they would be prepared to answer the affidavit at 12 o'clock tomorrow, if a copy of it should be given to them immediately.

The Court then adjourned to 12 o'clock to-day.

We append the points upon which Mr. Conover base his claim to the relief demanded:

MR. FIELD'S POINTS.

First Point.—Mr. Conover has been duly appointed to perform the duties of the office made vacant by the death of Mr. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner.

1. The Constitution of the State (article 10, section 5) has made it the duty of the Legislature to provide for filling the vacancy occasioned by the death of the late incumbent, by declaring that "the Legislature shall provide for filling vacancies in office."

2. The Legislature by the act of February 3, 1849, provided that "whenever vacancies shall exist or shall occur in any of the offices of this State, where no provision is now made by law for filling the same, the Governor shall appoint some suitable person, who may be eligible to the office so vacant, or to become vacant, until the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy at which such officer could be by law elected." At the time of the passage of this act, no provision had been made by law for filling a vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner. Indeed the office itself was not known to the laws of the State. It then existed only by the by-laws or ordinances of the City. Since then it has been established by law. Unless therefore there be a subsequent law, providing another means of filling a vacancy in the office, and to that extent repealing the law of February 3, 1849, the Governor must fill it. And in determining the question of such repeal, we must bear in mind the well known rule, that repeals are to be clearly made out, and not admitted by implication, except in a clear case.

3. There have been, it is true, several subsequent statutes providing for filling a vacancy in this office, viz: the act of April 2, 1849, the act of July 11, 1851, the act of April 12, 1853, and the act of June 14, 1853; but these statutes were all repealed by the present Charter. The only law, therefore, remaining to be considered is that passed April 14, 1857, and unless that gives the power of filling this vacancy to another officer, the power of the Governor remains in force.

4. The act of April 14, 1857, (the present Charter,) does not provide for filling a vacancy occurring in June, 1857, in the office in question. There are two parts of the Charter which have been supposed by some to have that effect.

1. One of them is the 32d section, which declares that, until the Common Council otherwise direct, the existing ordinances shall apply to the departments so far as the same are applicable, and are not inconsistent with the Charter. But it is clear that this section cannot apply, unless the Common Council would have power by ordinance to direct how the vacancy should be filled, which is begging the question.

2. The only other part of the Charter which is supposed by any one to give the power, is that which—after providing that the Mayor, Comptroller and Counsel shall be elected by the people—declares that "the other heads of departments shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen." But this provision does not attach to the Mayor till the 1st of January, 1858, nor to the office of Street Commissioner till the 1st of January, 1860. This limitation to the 19th section is given by the 51st section, which is in these words: "The Mayor, Aldermen and Councilmen provided for in this act, shall be elected at the first election for charter officers to be held after the passage hereof, which election shall take place on the first Tuesday of December, 1857. All persons who shall have been elected under former laws regulating or affecting the election of charter officers, and shall be in office at the time of the passage of this act, shall continue in office until the officers elected under this act shall take office and no longer, except that the offices of Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies and of Commissioner of Streets and Lamps are hereby abolished, and except that the persons now filling the several offices of Comptroller, Counsel to the Corporation, Street Commissioner and City Inspector, and the officers in the Croton Aqueduct Department, shall continue in office until the expiration of their several terms, and shall not be removed from office during such continuance, except for the cause and in the manner provided for in sections 20 and 49 of this act, and all other charter officers, and all school officers, and each Governor of the Almshouse, whose terms of office may expire with the present municipal year, shall also be elected on the day before provided for by this section.

Second Point.—Mr. Conover, having been duly appointed to the office, is antitled to an order for the delivery to him of the office books and papers, under the following section of the revised statutes. 1. R. S., 336, (4th ed.)

Sec. 60. "If any person appointed or elected to any office shall die, or his office shall in any way become vacant, and any books or papers belonging or appertaining to such office shall come to the hands of any person, the successor to such office may in like manner as hereinbefore prescribed demand such books or papers from the person having the same in his possession; and on the same being withheld an order may be obtained, and the person charged may in like manner make oath of the delivery of all such books and papers that ever came to his possession; and in case of omission to make such oath and to deliver up the books and papers so demanded, such person may be committed to jail, and a search warrant may be issued, and the property seized by virtue thereof may be delivered to the complainant as hereinbefore prescribed." (Matter of Whiting, 2 Barb. 518.)

Third Point—The objection that Mr. Conover has not filed his oath of office and official bond is not tenable. He has taken the oath, and, not being able to see the Mayor, filed it in his office with his clerk. He has executed a proper bond, with the requisite sureties, which the Mayor refused to see, and it was, therefore, filed with the Comptroller, without the Mayor's approval. The Mayor could not defeat the execution of the office by refusing to decide upon the sufficiency of the sureties. Mr. Conover performed all the acts which it was his duty to perform. A dereliction of duty by the Mayor can not deprive him of his office, nor the public of his services.

Fourth Point—Nor is it a tenable objection, that the Constitution (art. 10, sec. 2) requires that such City officers as were then known to the law, should be elected by City electors, or appointed by City authorities.

1. This was not an office established by law at the formation of the Constitution. Its first creation by law was in June, 1849.

2. This section of the Constitution applies only to permanent officers, and not to persons appointed to exercise the functions of an office, 'till it can be regularly filled.

2. The 2d section of the 10th article, and the 5th section of the same article must stand and be construed together. While one provides that City officers shall be elected or appointed by City electors or authorities, the other provides that the Legislature shall provide for filling vacancies in office.

The construction which the Constitution has heretofore received, accords with these views. In 1847, a law was passed authorizing the Governor to appoint a successor to Samuel Jones, in the Superior Court, although the Constitution requires judicial officers in cities to be elected by the city electors. Laws of 1847, ch. 291. So the law provides that persons to fill the offices of Sheriffs, Coroners, County Clerks, and District-Attorneys, shall be appointed by the Governor, in case of vacancy, though the Constitution provides that all these officers shall be elected by the people of the counties. Laws of 1847, ch. 360; Laws of 1848, ch. 4, and Laws of 1849, ch. 28. 9 Paige, 507. Tappan vs. Gray, Shedeker's case, lately decided in the Court of Appeals.

Messrs. D. and D. D. Field, for petitioner; Messrs. Jas. T. Brady, A. J. Willard and Richard Busteed, for respondent.

A POLICEMAN MISSING.—Policeman WM. STINSON, of the Seventh Ward, has been missing since last Saturday evening. He was on special detail duty along the docks. He was last seen on the corner of Clinton and South streets. He was a man of regular and temperate habits. His friends fear that he has been thrown overboard by dock-thieves, or accidentally fallen into the river.

THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

More Appointments and Dismissals—The Case of Mulligan, &c.

At the meeting of the Metropolitan Commissioners, yesterday, thirty removals and forty-seven appointments were made. The names of those appointed are:

James Hanley,	H. A. Bliss,
Henry Ottee,	D. C. Smith,
Henry Foot,	J. H. Turner,
Peter Bogart,	W. J. Williams,
Jacob C. Busteed,	J. R. Weed,
John Howe,	M. Brien,
J. H. Bradley,	J. F. Brooks,
C. H. H. Taylor,	C. W. Little,
J. Ackerman,	F. McIntire,
R. Stephens,	J. Rockwell,
Henry Brayton,	J. Jenness,
A. B. Stoddea,	J. C. Barker,
John R. Perkins,	Russell Myers,
J. Gallaird,	J. G. Fitch,
C. R. Jump,	A. T. Hunt,
A. B. Marston,	J. Romains,
George W. Church,	Thomas Wilson,
Oscar Van Tassell,	Robert Smith,
Henry Wolfort,	B. Lamsen,
Benjamin Lawrence,	Jaremiah Petty,
F. Van Hagen,	Alexander Lynchback,
Benjamin Burrell,	P. H Sickle,
Robert Brown,	J. Z. Chutkoroski,
	Patrick Ryan.

This first-named was detailed for duty at Saguine's Point.

The shields, which the new force are to wear, instead of stars, were distributed last evening to the men of the different precincts.

The office of the old Commissioners was besieged yesterday, as usual, with applicants for place on the "City Watch." A number, it was understood, were sworn in, but, as usual, their names and the Wards to which they were assigned were withheld.

General quiet has succeeded the late storm in Police circles. The great subject of discussion now is the probable decision of the Court of Appeals. The failure of late advices from Albany to corroborate the rumors of Monday has given new heart to the Municipal men, who now express themselves with more confidence, and some of them were even sanguine enough to offer and accept large bets as to the final result.

The case of Policeman ANDREW MULLIGAN, of the Seventeenth Ward, charged with assault and battery and inciting to riot, was brought before Recorder SMITH at 10½ o'clock yesterday morning, at his office in Chambers-street. The accused was accompanied to the office by Corporation Counsel BUSTEED, who said to the Recorder:

"May it please your Honor: I appear with my client, for whom a warrant was issued yesterday. We called at your office in the afternoon, but not finding you in, I left word that I would call this morning. I am, therefore, now ready to give bonds for his appearance at the Court of Sessions."

The Recorder answered: "Very well, Sir. I shall hold him to answer in the sum of $1,000.

Mr. EDWARD BONNELL, of No. 28 Second street, then stepped forward and entered into recognizances, in the sum mentioned, for the appearance of MULLIGAN, who was thereupon permitted to depart.

AUCTION SALES.

E. H. LUDLOW, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF "CLERMONT," THE ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT OF THE LATE MONTGOMERY LIVINGSTON AT CLERMONT, COLUMBIA COUNTY, N. Y., AT AUCTION.—E. H. LUDLOW & CO. will sell at auction on WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1857, at 3 o'clock, P. M., at the Mansion House (on the premises,) in pursuance of a judgment in partition

The property consists of about 300 acres of land. On it is a mansion house built of brick and stone in the chateau style of architecture. The rooms are celebrated for their beauty and proportion. The property is so well and favorably known, having been the residence of Chancellor Livingston, and afterwards of Mr. ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON, that a particular description is unnecessary. The lawn is bounded on its eastern side for a distance of nearly half a mile by the Hudson river. Along the river bank climbs of fine old forest trees break the river into a variety of picturesque landscapes. On the opposite side of the river, and in the back ground of several directly opposite, Catskill Mountains. The view of these mountains from this place is surpassingly beautiful. The location is perfectly healthy.

The lawns, (for it has three,) avenues and trees (it is believed) are unequaled in this country.

The soil is of the very best. The garden excellent; a gardener is now working it.

There are large orchards with great varieties of fruit trees.

It lies about 1¾ miles north of the railroad station at Tivoli, Dutchess County, to which the trains run in about three hours, and where the trains stop.

Persons can leave New-York by one or more trains in the A. M., and attend the sale or inspect the premises, and return in the afternoon.

The library, consisting of some 2,000 volumes of choice works, will be sold at 10 o'clock, A. M. The celebrated Gobelin Tapestry hanging in the drawing-room, will be sold immediately after the property.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 198 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to which end, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association

GEORGE I. BENEY, Cashier.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fond du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured on their entire Road and Line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon 2 million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within three years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 13 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

CHARLES BUTLER, Treasurer, &c.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $3,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject, in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 16th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, as not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 16th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

W. T. HOOKER, President.

B. F. WARNER, Cashier.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF TAXES AND ASSESSMENTS.—April 20, 1857.

TAX-PAYERS, TAKE NOTICE.—NOTICE is hereby given to all parties interested, that the Assessment Rolls of the several Wards of the City of New-York have been delivered to the

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE STREETS TO BE CLEANED AT LAST.—After much cogitation, Corporation Counsel BUSTEED has concluded that the City Inspector can proceed to clean the streets without further delay, under the late resolutions of the Common Council. Mr. MERTON yesterday received Mr. BUSTEED's written opinion to that effect, and he promises that he will act upon it immediately. In the dirtiest Wards—the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 8th, 9th, 14th, 15th, 17th, 20th, and 22d—double gangs of men and carts (it is promised) will be put to work to day, if they can be had, or as soon after to-day as possible—for it is a hard matter to procure carts now, the owners preferring to remove rubbish from new buildings, which pays better, and there is plenty of such work to be had. The joint committee of the two Boards of the Common Council are to draw the specifications for the new street-cleaning contracts, and when that is done proposals will be advertised for. In the present disgusting state of the streets it is well that citizens should know where to apply when they want dead animals or any thing else removed which is detrimental to health. It is the duty of the Health Officers of the several Wards to have all such nuisances attended to. We give the names and residences of these officials:

Books have also lately been opened at the office of the City Inspector to enter complaints in. These are under the care of Mr. J. M. BAKER, whose time is exclusively devoted to them. Any complaint of nuisance is placed in the hands of the proper officer to be looked after.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE ALPHA DELTA PHI SOCIETY.—The twenty-fifth anniversary and annual convention of this fraternity commences this evening, and continues through Thursday. DONALD G. MITCHELL, Esq., ("Ik Marvel,") delivers the oration, and WM. C. WILLIAMSON, Esq., of Boston, is the poet of the occasion. The oration and poem are given to-night at Dr. CHAPIN's church. The business convention sits upon its session Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, and assembles with the Manhattan Chapter of the Free Academy. In the evening the members sit down to a dinner at the Metropolitan Hotel. This is one of the oldest of the College secret societies, it has chapters in 15 colleges, as follows: Hamilton, Amherst, Geneva, Yale, Bowdoin, Dartmouth, and Williams Colleges, the New-York Free Academy, Harvard, Miami, Brown, Michigan, Rochester, Alabama and Wesleyan Universities.

SALE OF POWERS' GREEK SLAVE.—This world-famous statue was sold at noon yesterday, at the Merchant's Exchange, by Mr. H. H. LEEDS. The bidding commenced with $1,000, which speedily run up till it reached $6,000, at which sum the statue was knocked down to its original owners, the Cosmopolitan Art Association. There were only five bidders, but they competed warmly for the possession of the treasure. One gentleman, named BOWLER, came from Cincinnati on purpose to purchase it, but he declined to go beyond $5,500, and so lost it. A large crowd attended the sale.

UNION COURSE, L. I.—Trotting, Monday, June 22. Purse 75, mile heats, best 3 in 5, to wagons.

H. WOODRUFF, br. m. Queen Dido.....	1	2	1
W. WHELAN, b. m. Deception.....	2	1	2

Time: 2:40½; 2:41; 2:39; 2:39.

The above was one of the best contested trots that ever took place. The fourth heat was the most exciting, from the fact that the horses' heads were together, without the slightest perceptible variation, to the quarter-pole, when Dido broke up several times down the back stretch and around the lower turn. Betting at this part of the race was $1,000 to $10 against her, as she fell off too great a distance to be made up, unless an accident to Deception, who broke, however, on the home stretch, tired, and would not strike a trot. Dido became more settled and came home a winner of the heat and race a couple of lengths in 2:39.

Coroner's Inquests.

DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man, about 50 years of age, was found yesterday morning at the foot of Stanton-street. An inquest was held upon the body by Coroner GAMBLE. No information could be obtained concerning the deceased. The Jury rendered a verdict of "Death by Drowning."

A SINGULAR DEATH.—Coroner CONNERY held an inquest yesterday, at No. 243 Elizabeth-street, upon the body of JOHN O'SHEA, a native of New-York City, and aged fifteen years, who came to his death from violence. The verdict rendered was: "That the said John O'Shea came to his death by falling from the first story of the building, which is being altered, in Broadway, between Spring and Prince streets, on Saturday June 20 1857, while gathering broken pieces of wood; and We believe that the said fall was occasioned by John Nicholson, a laborer, having very unjustifiably thrown a brick at deceased when he deceased stooping to avoid being hit by said brick, fell through the well hole of first story into the lower cellar, thereby receiving such severe injuries of the head as to cause his subsequent death on Sunday evening, June 21, 1857."

Upon the rendition of the verdict NICHOLSON was committed to the Tombs in default of bail.

KILLED ON THE RAILROAD.—ELIZA TENBROOK, a colored child, aged 7 years, was run over by one of the City Railroad cars, at 8 o'clock, Monday evening, at the corner of West Broadway and Franklin-street. She was conveyed to the New-York Hospital, where she soon afterwards died. An inquest will be held upon the body to-day.

"WHO LOOKED THE BEST IN BOSTON?"—This may seem an extraordinary question and difficult to answer, but it has been put a thousand times since the recent celebration in our sister city, and has met with only one reply—that has been, "The gentlemen who wore KNOX's Hats." There can be no mistake in the business. We were present in Boston, and to KNOX we are obliged to refer a considerable portion of the glory attendant on the national festivities. American skill was thus acknowledged along with American patriotism.

ADDITIONAL FROM MEXICO.

From the New-Orleans Picayune.

Advices from Vera Cruz are to the 6th instant. The papers are filled with the most exciting accounts of the recent arrests at the capital. There is no essential fact, however, to add to our previous intelligence, except the statement of many papers that the conspirators were found with arms in their hands. It is also stated that most of them are Spaniards by birth. They were dealt with very summarily, thrown into the chain-gang with common malefactors, and sent to the public works in the Callejon de Santa Clara, where, at last accounts, they were engaged in cleaning the public sewers. The Extraordinary says:

"The contrast between patent leather boots and shackles was striking from their unpleasant juxtaposition, and the more so from a back ground of black mud peculiar to the city, and very redolent of sulphuretted hydrogen. The promptitude and novelty of the essligation caused a general surprise and excitement, as well as much comment, and some sympathy, which last we cannot help thinking superfluous, as we remember that hanging and quartering was, until recently, the punishment for treason."

The conspirators were all educated men, highly connected in the City of Mexico, and held offices of honor and confidence in the civil Government or in the army. The excitement was very great, and though there was no doubt of their guilt, the extreme disgrace of their punishment had begun to react on the public mind. Crowds of the common people, however, flocked daily to the Callejon de Santa Clara to witness, no doubt, with satisfaction, the novel spectacle there presented. Yielding probably to a reactionary feeling, by no means unnatural, considering the social standing and high connections of the Santa Ana conspirators, arrested on the 20th ult., COMONFORT had ordered them to be withdrawn from the chain-gang and placed in solitary confinement.

As an incident of this remarkable arrest, it is stated that the morning before the conspirators were surprised, they had all but one left the City by the Acapulco road, ostensibly on an excursion to Lower California. It is very possible that this singular movement was the very means of their detection.

As to the documents found on the persons of the conspirators, when surprised, only their titles have generally been given to the public. We have one, however, and that from the celebrated SANTA ANA. entire. It is dated Carthagena, April 10, and addressed to MANUEL FLORES ALATORRE, who seems to have escaped. It shows the style of the old chieftain's correspondence with his friends:

"MY ESTEEMED NEPHEW AND FRIEND: I have received yours of Feb. 28, as well as that of my friend, Gen. ORTEGA, the reply to which I send in closed. I am well advised of the most important events of our unhappy country, and I pray Heaven daily to have compassion on it. May an end be put to the calamities which have fallen upon it, as if for chastisement. The service of my country has always been dear to me, and to-day, when in the midst of great conflicts, it is my desire to serve her still. The only thing I desire is that my efforts be not fruitless, as they have been in times gone by, when I not only found my coadjutors wanting in energy, but had to contend with the obstinacy of some and the infidelity of others.

"My salutations to your estimable wife, and to all the members of your family, with whom be peace and happiness. Your affectionate uncle and friend.

There is nothing in this letter, no more than in the published fragments of others, that could possibly compromise the recipient, and yet it shows plainly enough the intimate relations which the restless old chieftain manages still to maintain with his former political and personal friends at home. Our intelligence is still imperfect, but a revolution on a grand scale, and a long time maturing, has evidently been nipped in the bud. We can only await the next development in this unhappy country, of political and ecclesiastical dissension.

In connection with this revolutionary movement, and doubtless for the purpose of preparing the minds of the people for it, we observe that the country has been flooded with SANTA ANA's manifesto of April 1, before alluded to.

The works of defence at Vera Cruz, Tampico and other parts of the Republic proceed with activity. Among other movements of troops, 3,000 men have recently been cantoned at Jalapa, says the Progreso, to be at once transferred to Vera Cruz in case of necessity. It is stated by the Eco National that, in case of war with Spain, the President will put himself at the head of the Mexican army. Other papers record evidences of the greatest enthusiasm in defence of the soil, throughout the Republic. The National Guards of Cordova and Tlalpam, in offering their services to COMONFORT, beg, as a great favor, to be permitted to march as an advanced guard against the enemies of their country. Other equally patriotic and chivalric offers of services are constantly being made.

Certain Spanish citizens in Mexico having expressed apprehensions as to their treatment in case of a war with Spain, the Extraordinary, doubtless by authority, counsels them to dismiss their fears. If they take no part in the quarrel, the laws of Mexico as well as the generous feelings of the people will protect them.

From the Northern States we have but little news of interest. The Monterey papers publish a correspondence between Gen. VIDAURRI and D. MARIA CALVO, in reference to a statement in the Puebla Constitucional, that the General had been bribed in the sum of $25,000 to pronounce against the Government. CALVO declares the statement false, and without foundation or excuse of any kind.

The people of Tamaulipas had protested in the strongest terms against the appointment of ex-Governor CANALES to the command of the Federal forces in that State. It is stated that the populace were scarcely restrained from mobbing their old enemy outright. It is not likely he will be allowed to exercise any authority.

TUESDAY, June 23—P. M.

The favorite steamer Persia, of the Cunard line, arrived at this port at an early hour this morning, making the voyage short of ten days, and bringing advices a week later than the previous arrival from all parts of Europe. The English market accounts are to Saturday, June 13, and the French to June 12; and financially they are by far the most favorable we have had for several months. The Funds are now quoted ex July dividend, both in London and Paris, and each had improved ⅜@½ ₰ cent. Consols left off equal to 94¾ or 93¼ half-yearly dividend, and the Rente 68.40. The English Bank had gained the further sum of $1,290,000 in Bullion on the weekly report of June 6, and the Bank of France $10,250,000 on the monthly report to June 10. The arrivals of Bullion in England for the week were equal to $4,865,000, and for the three weeks $18,150,000. The Bank rate of interest had not been reduced, but disconnts were easier, and an early change in the market value of money not improbable. The production of Gold in Australia goes on at the rate of about sixty millions of dollars a year. The export from Melbourne for January, February and March amounted to $15,000,000. The Cotton market at Liverpool and trade at Manchester had both improved. The advance in Cotton is equal to ¼ cent, and the sales of the week nearly double the late average, say 74,000 bales, speculators and exporters participating in the purchases to the extent of 20,000 bales. The Grain trade was also firm, although the prospects for the English harvest were looking well. Wheat is quoted 3d.@4d. dearer, and Corn 1s. the quarter higher, on White parcels. Provisions were dull. Sugar, Teas and Coffee are all quoted higher. Of American Stocks, Mr. SATTERTHWAITE writes:

"The demand for American Railroad Securities, which we noticed in our last, still continues to a moderate extent, buyers being indnced to invest by the low prices. The large fall in Erie Shares, reported from New-York, has brought out many buyers at anything like a corresponding price. Illinois Central Bonds are strong at 90⅝, buyers; and Shares ex all at 20 premium."

MESSRS. ROBERT BENSON & CO., on the same subject write:

"The market for American Securities has been very inactive. Michigan Central Railroad Bonds of 1870 have changed hands at 91, Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Sinking Fund Bonds at 71¾, Erie Bonds of 1871 at 70⅝, Illinois Central 7 ₰ cent. Construction Bonds at 90½@90¾, and the shares of the Company at 19½@20 premium on interest and new allotment."

Other private authorities write from London that the low price of Erie shares had attracted attention, and would lead to orders, unless something less unfavorable than the mere market ruling of the Stock should appear from this side.

In our own market, to-day, Sterling Bills were difficult of sale, even on the very best signatures, over 109¼ ₰ cent., and the comparatively dull demand has reduced the engagements of Bullion for the Canada to-morrow to about one-half the sum sent forward by the last direct Cunarder a fortnight since. The four principal shippers, thus far named, send $1,100,000. The Continental Exchanges were also dull to-day, and the amount of business altogether for this opportunity is below the usual average of May and June. The Street demand for Money shows little variation; but with the Discount Brokers the rates are firmer this week, and there is a partially increased offering of mercantile paper in anticipation of the wants of business in July. First-class names, 8@9 ₰ cent.; fair or second choice, 10@12 ₰ cent. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $219,757; disbursed $262,336, and held at the close $11,366,739.

The Stock market was made, by a bold and concentrated effort, to counteract the news from abroad, and the bank statement of the morning, at home, as discouraging for buyers as possible. The Bears having proved the winning party of late—and that heavily—and being still largely short, were eager sellers through the whole list, and, although the prices of yesterday were partially sustained on the first call at the early Board, the market was completely broken down at the Second Board, and made to assume all the appearances of a panic. Reading left off at 71 ₰ cent.; Erie, 29¼; Southern Michigan, 40; New-York Central, 80⅝; Toledo, 54; Galena, 88½; Milwaukee, 54; La Crosse, 55. Illinois Central improved to 129 for the opening of transfers, July 1. Convertible Bonds were again put out at 95 ₰ cent. Of course the additional fall was accompanied by the usual and (in every instance) false rumors, on the Street, of impending difficulties in the finances, or fares, or receipts, of the different Roads, which were made the subject of attack, and prognostics were ventured, that this, that, or the other concern, would fall short of their dividend, or fail to pay their bills, or be compelled to borrow the maturing interest on their bonds, or probably go to protest. In all the experience of the past five or six months, in the fierce Bearing of prices, and the new and unprecedented, as well as bold and shameless, gambling against Railway credit, and the values of the country generally, which the Street has witnessed, the incidents of the past day or two have surely excelled. The parties rampant have, of course, a motive to extra efforts in this way, in their position as heavy shorts in nearly all the active stocks on the list and in the disappointment experienced in the comfortable condition of the Money Market under the export of Bullion, and the present turn in the exchanges, and the financial news from abroad. As the country, however, has not yet been convulsed, nor the banks broken, nor the leading railways driven to protest, under all these efforts of Wall-street speculation, it is fair to presume that the ontside public will continue to hold on, as they have heretofore done, to seven-eighths of the property which has the misfortune to be under the ban of the Stock Exchange, if not gradually to relieve the brokers of the few thousand shares of each stock yet remaining in that street, as these worthy gentlemen drive prices down to unusually low and tempting figures. Meanwhile it may not be out of the way to report, authentically, that neither the New-York Central nor Reading will fall short of their usual Summer dividends, nor the New-York and Erie fail to pay promptly their July, August, September, and all other interest dividends, nor are we apprised that the bills payable of either Company stand less current in the Money Market, as they certainly do not stand in more danger of protest than at any time these three years past. We may further add that neither the Harlem nor the Michigan Southern, nor any other Company included in the catalogue, against the solvency of which wagers are offered in the Street, have been or are likely to be protested.

The following half-yearly dividends for July have been announced: Broadway Bank 5 ₰ cent.; Bank of America 4 ₰ cent.; Tradesmen's Bank 5 ₰ cent.; Metropolitan Bank 4 ₰ cent.; Cleveland and Columbus Road 5 ₰ cent.; Great Western Insurance Company at the usual rate of of interest on the subscribed capital.

The value of the exports, hence, of the leading articles of domestic produce and miscellaneous goods, during the week, was $940,076, against $1,226,230 the week ending June 27th, last year.

The Money Circulars for Europe.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, June 23, 1857.

Since our last advices of 15th inst. we have had a general decline in all the speculative stocks dealt in at the Stock Exchange. This falling off can only be attributed to the lack of confidence in railroad shares, as the money market continues easy in spite of the heavy shipments of specie for the week. Stocks of a more permanent character have varied but little in price. Trade generally is spoken of as being exceedingly dull in every branch. State Stocks: The transactions have been chiefly in Missouri, Virginia and Tennessee 6s; but little done and without much change in prices. City and County Bonds have been rather more active. We have to mention sales of Brooklyn 6s, Milwaukee 7s, St. Louis 6s and Cincinnati 6s; also, some Henry County 8s, Muskingum 7s, and Fayette County 6s, without material change in price. Railroad Bonds: At the Board the most important sales were of Illinois Central Constructions, Galena and Chicago 2d mortgage, and Michigan Southern Sinking Fund Bonds. At private sale some Burlington and Mississippi 1st mortgage, Milwaukee and Mississippi 3d section, and Peoria and Quawka 1st mortgage, all at a trifling decline in price. Railroad Shares: The sales have been large and the decline general in Reading, Erie, New-York Central, Cleveland and Toledo, Illinois Central and Michigan Central. The last two are quoted dividend off. The prices of all shares at the close were tending downward. Money continues abundant on good securities, but lenders are timid and scrutinize closely the character of collaterals. We quote money on call at 7, business paper 8 to 12, according to class and length.

DE COPPET & CO.

By our last Circular of the 15th inst. we reported an almost general decline in our Stock Market. The same remarks we can repeat almost for the week since elapsed, perhaps with the one exception that the decline in some of the Western Railroad Stocks has been larger than before. The decreased traffic in a great part of our Railroads, for details of which we refer to our monthly table below—the fear of many that the Money Market will rule with more stringency during the next month, and the general indisposition of the public to buy Railroad Stocks just now, created by the late continued decline, seems to prevent for the present any lasting reaction. Money has again been more active, and rates have slightly risen. State Stocks—Transactions limited with few variations. Virginia advanced 1 ₰ cent., Missouri without change, Tennessee declined ¾, California 1875, 1¼; do. 1870, remained at 64; Indiana 5 ₰ Cent. sold at 83. City and County Bonds—No transactions of any amount. Railroad Bonds—Erie 1st mortgage sold at 99 ex int.; do. 2d mortgage, 95; 1871 Bonds at 71, 72 and 70—2 ₰ cent. decline; and 1862 Bonds at 81; New-York Central 7 ₰ Cent. declined ½; Illinois Central Construction Bonds, 2; Hudson River 2d mortgage, without change; do. 3d mortgage advanced 2; Terre Haute, Alton & St. Louis 2d mortgage declined 5½; some Michigan Southern Sinking Fund sold at 70. Railroad Shares—Have been active, the principal sales being in Reading, with a strong and general decline, one or two stocks excepted. Erie declined 2⅞; Reading 3⅝; New-York Central 2; Michigan Central 1⅛; Michigan Southern 3¼; do. Preferred 1⅝; Illinois Central 4; Cleveland and Toledo 4; Chicago and Rock Island 5; Galena and Chicago 2¼; Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati 1; Cleveland and Pittsburg 2¾; La Crosse and Milwaukee at first 6s, and since the dividend of 6 ₰ cent. at 56@10½ decline; Milwaukee and Mississippi 3½; Hudson River has advanced ½; Harlem has been in demand at a decline, selling at 9⅝@9¾, and the preferred stock at 21@22; Wisconsin and Lake Shore sold at 57—a decline of 2 ₰ cent.

Money in London—Bank of France.

From the London Times, June 13.

FRIDAY EVENING.

The funds have been firm to day at the improvement which occurred last evening after regular hours, Consols for the 9th of July have stood at 93¼ to ⅜, ex dividend. Bank Stock left off at 212 to 214; Reduced, 92⅛ to ¾; New Three per Cents, 92¾ to ⅞; and India Bonds, 3s, to 3s. discount. Exchequer-bills were heavy in consequence of an increase in the demand for money, and the knowledge that only a small amount of the June bills has been sent in to be paid off and withdrawn from the market.

In the Stock Exchange, as well as in the discount-market and at the Bank of England, there was a considerable pressure for money throughout the day, 6½ ₰ cent. being the lowest rate.

In the Foreign Exchanges this afternoon the rates for Hamburg and Paris were a shade higher, but Amsterdam remained the same as last post.

The corn-market was firm this morning at the rates of Monday.

The report of the Liverpool cotton market for the week shows an active demand, and a tendency to higher prices.

The final quotations of the French Three per Cents. on the Paris Bourse this evening, were 68f. 40c. for money and 68f. 65c. for the end of the month, showing an improvement of a half per cent.

A further sum of about £32,000 in Australian gold was sold to the Bank to day, raising the total of Australian gold taken there during the week to £355,000.

The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 6th of June, gives the following results, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits.....	£7 (36,896....	Increase....	£773,450
Other deposits.....	9,767,386....	Increase....	570,337
Rest.....	3,321,818....	Increase....	19,461

On the other side of the account:

Government securities	£10,326,131....	Unchanged.
Other securities.....	19,066,740....	Increase.... 754,165
Notes unemployed.....	5,277,990....	Increase.... 553,050

The amount of notes in circulation is £18,755,980, being a decrease of £291,495, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £10,290,649, showing an increase of £258,247, when compared with the preceding return.

The following table will show the fluctuations in Consols since the 5th inst.:

	FOR MONEY.			FOR ACCOUNT.
June.	Lowest.	Highest.	Closing.	Lowest.	Highest.	Closing.
Saturday, 6..	93⅞	94⅛	93	93	94⅜	93⅛
Monday, 8..	93⅜	93¾	93¾	94	94⅜	94⅛
Tuesday, 9..	93⅜	94	93⅞	93	93⅞	93⅛
Wed, 10..	93¾	94	94	93	93⅞	93⅛
Thursday, 11..	93¾	94⅛	94⅛	93	93⅞	93⅛
Friday, 12..	94⅛	93⅞	93⅝	93	93⅛	93⅛

The monthly return of the Bank of France, published this morning, produced a very favorable affect. The advices received a few days back as to the extent of the increase in the stock of bullion are fully confirmed, and the total now held is £11,490,000, showing an augmentation during the month of £2,050,000. At the same time the position of the establishment has been improved by a contraction of £554,000 in the note circulation. The Government balance has increased £1,289,000, while in the deposits of the public there is a diminution of £160,000. The discounts show a decrease of £1,338 000, and the prospect of a lowering of the rate is proportionately strengthened. The advances on Rentes and shares have experienced a further reduction of £210,000, and the whole of the latter do not exceed £700,000. The amount of premiums paid for the purchase of gold has been large. Last month it was only £10,000, and on the present occasion it is £17,000. About a million and a half of the increase in the stock held may, therefore, be attributed to artificial operations. These, however, are of no real importance, since they merely anticipate by two or three weeks the influx that would otherwise take place from natural causes. The Bank pays a heavy price for the temporary advantage, but, having once entered upon the system, they cannot discontinue it while the exchanges are in their present state, without the risk of their returns presenting suddenly an unfavorable appearance, and thus causing discouragement to the speculators.

Australian Market.

From the Melbourne Letter of London Times, April 4.

I am sorry to say there is a good deal of depression in commercial affairs. Many descriptions of goods have been imported in excess of the immediate demand, and there is a general indisposition among the dealers to increase their stocks. This, of course, embarrasses the importers. The Customs

THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

Mayor Wood on the Stand.

MR. DEVELIN'S AFFIDAVIT.

Argument on the Motion for a Mandamus,

NO DECISION YET.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

ARGUMENT ON THE MOTION FOR A MANDAMUS—[illegible] COMMISSIONER'S POSITION.

In the matter of the Application of Daniel D. Conover to compel the delivery to him of the Books, Papers, &c., of the Street Commissioner's Office.—Pursuant to adjournment, this case was again brought up yesterday. The room was well filled. Mr. Busteed first offered to read an affidavit of Mr. Turner. Mr. Field wished to know for what purpose it was presented. [illegible] discussion ensued as to its admissibility, [illegible] it was admitted. Mr. Busteed then read

AFFIDAVIT OF MR. DEVELIN.

Charles Develin being duly sworn, says: that he is [illegible] this proceeding; that he was duly appointed Street Commissioner on Tuesday, the 16th [illegible] inst. by the Mayor, and by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, and that he took the oath of office and filed his official bond in due form of law, and entered upon the duties of his office the same day aforesaid; that his immediate predecessor was Charles Turner, who entered upon the duties of the office of Street Commissioner on the 9th day of June inst., under and by virtue of the ordinances of the Common Council; he having been for a [illegible] time theretofore the Deputy Street Commissioner; that on the said 9th day of June, Charles Taylor, who was the predecessor of Turner, and each Deputy, Turner, under the ordinances aforesaid, entered [illegible] the office, and continued to hold charge all the other duties there [illegible] ment of deponent, when the said [illegible] the office to deponent.

[illegible] this deponent entered upon the duties of the said office, to wit on the 19th day of June inst., he has held undisturbed and peaceable possession of the same, has transacted all the business thereof, and has been recognized as the Street Commissioner of every Department of the City Government, and by all persons having business with the office.

That, while deponent has been in office, he has, at no time, nor upon any occasion whatever, expelled the said Conover from the office, or threatened to do so; that, upon two occasions, the said Conover called at the Street Commissioner's office and demanded possession of the same from deponent; which this deponent declined to give him; that the first time said Conover called was on Wednesday, June 17, when, after deponent's refusal as aforesaid, Conover left, saying he would procure another office; and deponent denies that he said that he had force enough to keep deponent out, and intended to do so; and deponent further denies that he had with him any policemen or other persons to assist him in keeping said Conover away, or that he (deponent) did keep said Conover away except as aforesaid, by refusing to surrender to his possession, of the office as aforesaid.

And deponent further says that on the following day, Thursday, the 18th of June, inst., the said Conover came again to deponent's office and demanded possession of the books and papers of the office; deponent told him there was no use of those repeated applications, for he (Conover) would always get the same answer, Conover then said to deponent: "I only want to make a formal demand, and have you refuse me, so that I can go to the Courts for my remedy." Thereupon deponent did again refuse Conover's demand, who immediately left of his own accord, and deponent has not seen Conover since, at the office, and, as this deponent is informed by his Clerks, and verily believes, Conover has not since been there.

This deponent is informed and believes that the Mayor of said City has never administered the official oath to said Conover, and that the said Mayor has not approved any bond or sureties given by said Conover, nor has any such bond been presented to the Mayor, or such sureties offered to him for his approval.

And deponent further says that he is informed by his Deputy Street-Commissioner, the said Charles Turner, and verily believes, that while he, the said Turner, was acting Street-Commissioner, as aforesaid, to wit: on the morning of Tuesday, the 16th inst., the said Conover came to the Street-Commissioner's office, and was ejected therefrom by the Sheriff's posse, who were then present, and in possession of the books and papers and furniture of the office by direction of the Sheriff, who had levied upon the same under the several judgments recovered in the Court of Common Pleas, executions issued thereon, to wit: George Allen against the Mayor, Aldermen, &c., execution for $441 22, issued June 18, 1857, levy made the same day upon the books, papers, &c., in the Comptroller's and Street-Commissioner's office: Peter Conolly against the same defendants; execution for $534 31, issued July, 30, 1856, levied same day upon same property. The People, &c., against Thomas M. C. Ginn, &c; execution issued June 13, 1857, for $41 81, levied same day upon same property; that this is the same ejection complained of and set forth in the plaintiff's affidavit of the 23d inst.

And this deponent is informed by his said Deputy, Charles Turner, and deponent verily believes that at no time while the said Turner was acting Street Commissioner as aforesaid, to wit, from the 9th until the 16th of June inst., did he, the said acting Street Commissioner, use, direct or employ any force whatever to eject the said Conover from the office aforesaid, nor did he, the said Turner, in any way eject the said Conover therefrom; and that all the force, and the only force employed upon any occasion to eject said Conover from the rooms occupied by the Street Commissioner as aforesaid, was used and directed by the Sheriff and his posse, who held possession of the books, papers and furniture of the office, under and by virtue of the levy aforesaid; and that said Conover was not at any time ejected from the office except by the Sheriff, and persons acting under his directing, in defence of the Sheriff's possession, under the levy aforesaid.

And deponent further says the said judgments still remain unsatisfied, that the levy made upon the books, papers and furniture of the office still continues as aforesaid, and that the same are in the lawful custody of the Sheriff, and have so continued; the said Sheriff permitting deponent, as Street Commissioner, to use the same in the discharge of the duties of the office. (Signed,)

CHARLES DEVELIN.

Sworn before me, this 24th day of June, 1857.

JAMES SANFORD, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Field asked if that was all they presented.

Mr. Busteed—All that we read, Sir.

Mr. Field asked that either the affidavit be rejected, or that the Court should go into an inquiry of the facts of the expulsion by means of depositions taken from certain persons whom he would designate. He should prefer, however, to have the affidavit dismissed.

Mr. Brady stated that it was not legitimate to go into the inquiry as to who had the first possession of the office, or who held it now. It was not in this form that the title to an office could be determined. The relevance of the affidavit was obvious. He commented upon the substance of the two affidavits, and claimed that his affidavit was necessary and proper. If the Court went into an investigation of the question of fact, it would be the first time that it had been done except before a jury. He would like to have his Honor think of what was the question of fact to be inquired into. Mr. Conover was not obliged to use the room held by Mr. Develin, but could procure any place to conduct his business. The judiciary had no authority to decide to whom the City should rent its rooms. In regard to the books, &c., the Court had the right to order their transfer if they were illegally detained. The title to the office of Street Commissioner did not depend upon who first got possession of the room, or who was first turned out of it. Mr. Conover, if duly appointed, was just as much the Street Commissioner if expelled from the room as if he never went into it. He objected to the introduction of the testimony on the question of fact, but if it must be admitted, he was prepared to meet it.

Mr. Field thought the only inquiry was whether the affidavit should be admitted. He was surprised that Mr. Develin should to-day swear that the books were in the hands of the Sheriff, and had been ever since he came into possession of the office, while yesterday he swore that he had the possession of them. Mr. Field then proceeded to discuss the question of the admission of the affidavit. He objected to its being received, but if it was, he should send a very polite note to Messrs. Fernando Wood, Samuel C. Willet, John W. Bennett, John McKibben, and Hugh Masterson, requesting their immediate attendance, and if they should refuse, he would ask the Court, under 2 R. S. 554, to issue a commission that they might be examined under oath.

Mr. Brady thought that the section only referred to an action before the Supreme Court, whereas this was merely before a single Judge.

The Court—We have not come to that yet, don't get on too fast.

The Court overruled the motion to dismiss the affidavit, and Mr. Field moved for the commission.

The question as to the power of the Court to summon witnesses was then discussed,—notes having been dispatched to the above-mentioned witnesses requesting their voluntary attendance. The Court was inclined to think that he had the power to take testimony, but desired to hear the suggestions of counsel.

Mr. Field thought that, as a single Judge had a right to decide questions of fact, he had a right to take testimony, even without any special statute to that effect.

Mr. Brady took a different view of the case, and denied this authority of a single Judge.

Mr. Field declined to admit that Mr. Conover had not filed his bond with the Mayor. He had tried to see the Mayor, but failing, had filed the bond with the Clerk, which was the same thing.

Mr. Busteed requested leave to amend Mr. Develin's affidavit by adding that he is informed and believes that the Mayor had not administered the oath of office to Mr. Conover, nor approved of his bonds and sureties. (The affidavit published before contains the amendment.)

Mr. Field objected to the introduction of new matter upon the record. If the Mayor had been guilty of dereliction of duty, in not approving the bonds, he was guilty of a misdemeanor, for which he was liable to be indicted.

Mr. Busteed replied that what the Mayor was liable for was not a question that could be argued collaterally in this case. Whether Mayor Wood was the incarnation of every virtue, or the impersonation of every crime, was irrelevant to the case before the Court. He hoped their ears would be saved such attacks on the highest officer of the City, who was not on trial.

The Court decided that the amendment might be made.

Mr. Field then requested leave to put in still another affidavit from Mr. Conover, in relation to the filing of the bonds, which was granted by the Court. Mr. Field also stated that answers had been received from the Mayor and Capt. Bennett, and that they would be present in a few minutes.

After waiting some little time, however, Judge Dean entered the Court, and a letter was handed to Mr. Field. It proved to be from the Mayor, who stated that he had consulted with his counsel, and had changed his mind. He refused to come voluntarily into Court and make a deposition, but would cheerfully obey any process.

Judge Dean said that the Mayor had consulted him, and that he had advised his Honor not to volunteer any testimony. He had also seen Captain Bennett, and advised him not to come voluntarily. Both of them, however, were ready to obey any order from the Court.

Mr. Field applied to the Court for a summons, to compel the Mayor to attend, remarking that he supposed it would be resisted by 500 men on the City Hall steps.

Judge Dean retorted that the process would not be resisted, but that a bogus policeman would.

Mr. Field—That is a very improper remark in a Court which has already decided that those Policemen are not bogus.

After some remarks by Mr. Field and Mr. Brady, on the power of the Court to grant a summons, Mr. Field drew up the writ compelling the attendance, as witnesses, of the Mayor, Capt. Bennett, Sheriff Willet, John McKibben, and Hugh Masterson. This was signed by the Judge, and immediately taken out of Court by Mr. Peckham to be served on Mayor Wood. In a few minutes his Honor appeared in Court.

Q.—You are Mayor of the City? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you, on Saturday, the 13th inst., receive information that Mr. Conover, the applicant in this case, had been appointed by the Governor Street Commissioner? A.—I heard a rumor to that effect; I think it was on Saturday—I am not sure as to the day.

Q.—At what time of day? A.—Probably twelve o'clock.

Q.—Did you, in consequence, go to Mr. Turner, the Deputy Street Commissioner and give him any instructions? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you go to the Street Commissioner's office? A.—I was there on that day.

Q.—After you heard the rumor? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you give any instructions to Mr. Turner or any body else in reference to that rumor? A.—I think I did.

Mr. Brady objected to the question, contending that it was wholly irrelevant.

Mr. Field said that he expected to prove that the Mayor gave instructions to policemen and others that Mr. Conover should not be admitted to the Mayor's office, so that the Mayor might avoid seeing his official bonds.

Mr. Brady contended that the question was irrelevant, because it was conceded that the Mayor had not approved Mr. Conover's official bonds. And if the Mayor had done wrong in that, there was a remedy as between Conover and the Mayor, but Mr. Develin had nothing to do with the business. He understood that there were many suits, both civil and criminal, pending against the Mayor, and, in view of that fact, that his testimony might not be used against him, it was the duty of counsel, and it was the duty of the Court, not to let the Mayor be examined on matters which had no relevancy to the present issue. The fact that he had not approved the bonds was conceded. His reasons for refusing to recognize them were immaterial.

Mr. Field replied, remarking that Mr. Brady had begged the whole case. If the Mayor was to be sustained in refusing to recognize official bonds in one instance, he might in another. He might paralyze the City by refusing to approve the bonds of any of its officers, at his pleasure.

Mr. Brady rejoined that the Mayor was responsible to the Corporation for the use and abuse of the corporate powers intrusted to him, and nowhere else.

The Judge decided to admit the question. It was repeated.

Question repeated as follows—Did you give any instructions to Mr. Turner, or anybody else, in reference to that rumor?

Mayor Wood—Does your question apply to that day?

Mr. Field—Did you at any time? A.—Yes.

Q.—When for the first time? A.—On the day that I heard the rumor.

Q.—That was on Saturday? A.—I think it was on Saturday.

Q.—To whom did you give the instructions? A.—To Mr. Turner.

Q.—What instructions did you give? A.—I told him that he was the Deputy Street Commissioner, and that he must maintain his position as such until the Mayor and Board of Aldermen appointed a successor to Mr Taylor.

Q.—Did you give any instructions as to force? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was this before twelve o'clock on that day? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—After that, did Mr. Conover come to your office? A.—I have no positive information upon that subject.

Q.—Have you any information at all? A.—I have been told that he was at my office.

Q.—About what time of day? A.—I don't recollect.

Q.—When were you told that? A.—On the day he was there, I think.

Q.—Were you told it when he was there? A.—I think it very likely I was.

Q.—Do you not know that, Sir? A.—I have no very distinct recollection as to it.

Q.—Was not word brought to you that Mr. Conover was waiting to see you? A.—I think there was such word brought on that day, but I can't fix the time.

Q.—Is it not your impression that it was that day? A.—My impression is that it was that day.

Q.—What was the message brought to you? A.—That Mr. Conover, among other gentlemen, was wanting to see me.

Q.—Was that all the word brought to you? A.—That was all.

Q.—Did you not then understand that he was waiting to see you about his appointment as Street Commissioner? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not suppose that?

Mayor Wood—Your inquiry was as to what I was told, was it not?

Mr. Field—I ask you from what you understood or supposed? [Mr. Busteed made some objection to this question; it was not pressed, however, and the witness answered.]. A.—I certainly supposed that it was something in connection with the subject.

Q.—And supposing that, you refused to see him? A.—I refused to see anybody at that time; but I did not refuse to see Mr. Conover because he was there on that subject, but because I was very much engaged on other subjects, and could not see any one except the Chief of Police.

Q.—Did you see no one but the Chief of Police? A.—None but the Chief of Police and my messenger who announces the visitors.

Q.—You saw none but the Chief of Police? A.—None until after office hours; the next morning I saw everybody who called; Mr. Conover has not been at my office since.

Q.—You mean Monday morning? A.—The next business morning following; he could have been seen on Monday morning had he called.

Mr. Field—You volunteer that testimony?

Mayor Wood—(Smiling)—Yes, Sir, I volunteer that.

Q.—Is Mr. Ming your Chief Clerk? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he say anything to you about Mr. Conover's papers that day? A.—I did not see him again, Sir, that day at all.

Q.—On Monday following did you give any instructions as to keeping Mr. Conover out of the office?

Mayor Wood—I don't understand your question.

[Mr. Field repeated the question.] A.—He hadn't been in the office.

Mr. Field said he wanted to prove that Mr. Conover, being in possession of the office, was turned out by a mob directed primarily by the Mayor.

Mr. Brady objected to this putting the Mayor upon trial. He would have a perfect right to refuse to answer the question.

After some remarks by Mr. Field, who argued his right to put the question, and by Mr. Busteed on the other side, the Judge said he would decide the point at the meeting of the Court this morning.

The Court was accordingly adjourned at the Judge's direction to 11 o'clock to-day.

We append the following:

POINTS FOR RESPONDENT.

First—This is a proceeding to try the title to the office of Street Commissioner. That trial cannot be had in this form. Mr. Conover must proceed either by quo warranto, or as directed to section 432 of the Code. The summary method of giving possession of an office to one having a clear title to it, is not applicable here, where the party proceeded against claims under a formal appointment, and is admitted to be already in possession. (People vs. Stevens, 5 Hill, 616. Matter of Whiting, 2 Barb., 513. Matter of Welch, 14 Barb., 396. People vs. Corporation N. Y., 3 J. C., 79.)

Second—Mr. Conover shows no title to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York.

A. The charters of Dongan and Montgomerie, with the acts subsequently passed before 1857, conferred and recognized the power of the Corporation of the City of New-York to provide for the control, regulation and government of the streets by ordinances, by the appointment of suitable officers, and otherwise. These charters are continued in force. (Charter of 1857, sec. 54.)

B. The charter of April 14, 1857, continues the Corporation, "with all the grants, powers and privileges heretofore held." (See charter of 1857, sec. 1.)

C. The power above mentioned was exercised many years ago by the appointment of a Street Commissioner for the City of New-York. (See ordinances of 1849, p. 35.)

D. Until the year 1849 he was appointed in the manner prescribed by the charters, viz: by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the legislative department of the City Government.

E. The only material change made by the Charter of 1849 in reference to the office of Street Commissioner, was to make it an elective office. (Charter of 1849, sections 12-21.)

F. The 20th section of that Charter expressly provides, that in case of vacancy of any of said heads of departments, by removing from office or otherwise, the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, shall appoint a person to fill the same, until the vacancy shall be filled by the electors at the next charter election. The Street Commissioner is one of the heads of the departments here referred to.

G. The 21st section of the same Charter provides that "the several Executive Departments, and the officers and clerks thereof, shall be subject to the legislative direction and control of the Common Council, so far as the same shall not be inconsistent with this act.

H. The Corporation, under the powers conferred upon them by Charter, passed, in 1849, an ordinance regulating the Executive Departments in which, among other things, they provided for the appointment of a Deputy Street Commissioner, who, in the event of a vacancy in the head of the department, should perform the duties of Street Commissioner.

I. The same ordinance provided that the vacancy in the head of the department should be filled by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen. (See Charter of 1849, sections 19, 20 and 9; Charter of 1830, section 21; Charter of 1851, section 2; ordinances of 1856, sections 227, 234.)

I. The Charter of 1857 has not altered the organization of the Street Department, nor the mode of selecting its officers, nor the control or regulation of its action otherwise than as follows:

1. It restores the power of appointing the Street Commissioner to the Mayor.

J. This Charter does not deprive the Mayor of the power to appoint a Street Commissioner in the event of the office becoming vacant before its term would expire by lapse of time.

1. The provision which was to continue in office the person who was Street Commissioner when the Charter of 1857 took effect, cannot be taken to have assumed that no event other than lapse of time would render his office vacant.

2. And although the Charter does not expressly provide for the filling of a vacancy occurring otherwise than by lapse of time, yet reasonable and just construction requires it to be so interpreted. A term may expire on the happening of any other event, as well as upon the coming of a given day. And as the power to appoint a Street Commissioner under the Charter of 1857 was conferred on the Mayor as to all cases, without any exception, it cannot be fairly supposed that any exception was to be taken as implied, or that in any event the Governor of the State was to appoint that officer for the City.

The Charter negatives this idea in its whole theory and in its details. The 15th section declares that "the executive power of the Corporation shall be vested in the Mayor and the executive departments." In the 19th section it provides, "The other heads of departments, (other than Mayor, Comptroller and Counsel to the Corporation,) shall be appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen.

3. This power claimed for the Governor is not conferred either by the Constitution, the Charter of 1857, or any other law, nor could it be constitutionally given to him.

1. The act of 1849 applies only to State officers, and such alone as are elective.

It is limited in terms, to "officers of the State."

2. The State officers are named in the Constitution on the classification given in 1st Revised Statutes, 96.

3. The Street Commissioner is a City officer.

4. Where a vacancy is filled by the Governor under the law of 1849, the person appointed is to hold his office "until the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy at which said officer could be by law elected."

The Street Commissioner ceased to be elective by the provisions in the charter of 1857.

This provision in the statute of 1849, cannot therefore be applied to him, without producing this strange and absurd consequence, viz: Mr. Conover would hold until the 1st day of January, 1858, that being the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy, at which election a Street Commissioner, if the office had continued to be elective, might have been elected.

That would be less than two years from the passage of the charter of 1857, which prescribes two years as the official term of the Street Commissioner.

There would be, of course, another vacancy in the office on the 1st of January, 1858.

According to the position of Mr. Conover's counsel, the Mayor could not fill that vacancy. The Governor would then appoint again, and the appointee would hold the office until the 1st day of January, 1859.

It cannot be reasonably supposed that the Legislature have made such a result possible.

K. The Constitution (article X, section 2) provides that "all City, town and village offices whose appointment is not provided for by this Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some division thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof as the Legislature shall designate for that purpose."

If the act of 1849 can be construed as giving the Governor the right in any event to appoint a Street Commissioner, who is a City officer, that act is clearly unconstitutional.

L. But even if such act were valid and could operate upon a City office, and an office not elective, yet it does not apply to the vacancy which occurred by Mr. Taylor's death, because:

1. The Charter of 1849, passed after the act of 1849, giving the Governor his power over vacancies, provided, as already shown in these points, that a vacancy in this office should be filled by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen.

2. When Mr. Taylor died, there was a Deputy Street Commissioner who, under existing ordinances, had legal authority to perform the duties of Street Commissioner until one was appointed. (Tappan vs. Gray, 9 Paige 507.)

M. But if it be held that the Charter of 1857 gives the Mayor no power to fill a vacancy occurring otherwise than by lapse of time, in the office of Street Commissioner, still that power belongs to the Mayor, because:

1. As already shown, the ordinance of 1849 gave it to him.

2. That ordinance has never been repealed.

3. It is expressly adopted and confirmed by the 32d section of the Charter of 1857, which provides that "until the Common Council shall otherwise direct, the existing ordinances shall apply to the departments herein mentioned, so far as the same are applicable thereto, and are not inconsistent with this act."

If, therefore, the Charter of 1857 is silent and ineffectual as to the vacancy by death, the ordinance which speaks on that subject is not inconsistent with the Charter, and not being inconsistent, is continued in force by the act of the Legislature, precisely as if in this respect it were written and embodied in that act.

4. The power to appoint a Street Commissioner, irrespective of all legislation, resided in the Corporation; and all legislation to the contrary being removed, that power revives.

5. The Constitution of this State prohibits the exercise of this power by the Governor.

Fourth—Mr. Develin is the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York.

He has been duly appointed by the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, and having duly taken the official oath, and given the official bond with sureties, is in possession of the office, with perfect legal right to hold it.

Fifth—This application, for the above reasons should be denied.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE CITY CLEANING.—About 200 men—adepts with the shovel and broom—and all the dirt-carts, with their drivers, that could be procured, were yesterday engaged in street-cleaning, under the orders of the City Inspector. This force he promises to increase to-day, and says all possible expedition will be made to get the City as clean as it should be.

In the Second Ward a gang of men began work on South-street. To-day a double force will be operating.

In the Third Ward, two forces were at work on Liberty and Cortlandt streets.

In the Fourth Ward, two gangs have been working on Catharine and Roosevelt streets.

In the Fifth Ward a gang will commence in Lispenard-street, which has not been swept since last Fall. The eastern part of the Ward will be attended to first.

In the Eighth Ward, as soon as carts can be procured, they will begin work on Mercer-street.

In the Ninth Ward two gangs will work on Downing and Bedford streets.

In the Fourteenth Ward—noted as one of the filthiest of the filthy—two gangs commenced on Elizabeth and Baxter streets.

In the Fifteenth Ward, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets are the fields of operation.

In the Twentieth Ward, a double force commenced on Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets.

Work will not be proceeded with in the Seventeenth and Twenty-second Wards until a convenient dumping-place can be procured.

The contractors for the Seventh, Tenth, Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Wards have kept them in tolerably good condition. So long as this continues the City Inspector will let them remain on their hands.

The Metropolitan Police Law to be Sustained—Probable Decision this Week.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

ALBANY, Wednesday, June 24.

After a careful canvass of the opinions entertained by the members of the Bar in attendance upon the Court of Appeals, I am confident that the decision of the Court in the Metropolitan Police case will be made this week, and that it will sustain the constitutionality of the law.

I think there are six in favor and two against the law, and that BROWN and COMSTOCK are the dissenting Judges. LEO.

TEST OF THE RELATIVE MERITS OF FIREARMS—BRITISH CONSUL AT BALTIMORE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 24.

There was a pleasant and exciting time at the Arsenal to-day on the occasion of testing the relative merits of various firearms. Col. COLT was present with his revolving rifle; Gen. BURNSIDE with his breech-loading carbine; Col. BAKER with SHARPE's carbine, and Col. MERRILL with his own carbine.

The firing was satisfactory, the distance fired being from one hundred to five hundred yards. The effects were noted by Major BELL.

Those arms already introduced into the army, and their comparative merits, were tested by direction of the Secretary of War, who, together with the Secretary of the Navy and many other gentlemen, witnessed the experiments, and were subsequently handsomely entertained by Major BELL at his quarters.

Massachusetts Republican State Convention.

NOMINATION OF N. P. BANKS FOR GOVERNOR, AND OLIVER WARNER FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR—THE PHILADELPHIA PLATFORM REAFFIRMED, ETC.

WORCESTER, Mass., Wednesday, June 24.

The Republican State Convention met in this City to-day. After the organization had been perfected, an informal vote was taken for a candidate for Governor, and Hon. N. P. BANKS received 291 votes out of 464. The result was received with great applause.

The Convention is presided over by Mr. JOSEPH WHITE, of Lowell, with numerous Vice Presidents. One hundred and fifty-two towns are represented by 530 delegates. There is an excited opposition to Speaker BANKS, but the indications are that he will get the nomination for Governor.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

A warm discussion took place upon the informal nomination of Mr. BANKS.

Messrs. ERASTUS HOPKINS, CHARLES G. DAVIS, RODNEY FRENCH, CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, and J. G. GOODRICH, all gave in their adhesion to Mr. BANKS, provided he should come out squarely on the Republican platform.

Without definite information as to the plank or planks on which Mr. BANKS stands, he received the nomination for Governor by the following votes:

N. P. Banks	337	J. G. Goodrich	78
Scattering			16

Mr. GOODRICH was nominated Lieutenant-Governor by acclamation, but declined.

OLIVER WARNER, of Northampton, was then nominated for Lieutenant-Governor; THOMAS D. ELIOT, of New-Bedford, for Attorney-General; JOSEPH WHITE, of Lowell, for Secretary of State; VALORUS TUFT, of Upton, for Auditor; and THOMAS J. MARSH, of Waltham, for Treasurer.

Resolutions were adopted adhering to the Philadelphia platform; in favor of limiting legislative sessions to one hundred days, and demanding more economy in State expenditures.

It was resolved that "we regard the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case as a usurpation of judicial power for political purposes—an insult to the memory of the Father of our Country and founders of our Government—a violation of the plainest, natural and constitutional principles of law—a perversion of history—an encroachment upon the rights of the States, and a blow deliberately struck at the rights and freedom of man."

The last resolution pledges the Republican Party anew to unlining and uncompromising opposition to the existence and further extension of Slavery.

Advance Wages to Seamen.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 24.

At a meeting of shipowners this morning an agreement was made, that after the first day of July next, the payment of advance wages to seamen was to be discontinued, in accordance with the plan of shipowners of other ports. Hereafter they will furnish one suit of warm clothing, and engage to give a bounty of ten per cent. on the earned wages of those of the crew who perform the voyage, and, in case of the loss of the ship on an outward voyage, the seamen to be paid the wages earned to the time of such loss, and in no case less than for one month on foreign, and for two weeks on coastwise voyages.

Fracas in the State-House, Hartford, Conn.

HARTFORD, Conn, Wednesday, June 24.

At noon to-day, JAMES E. DUNHAM, of Bridgeport, one of the Bank Commissioners of Connecticut, and WILLIAM E. NOBLE, also of Bridgeport, attacked Judge BROOKS, Chairman of the Bank Committee, in the vestibule of the State-House, calling him an old liar, scoundrel, &c., on account of his position in regard to a Bank.

Judge BROOKS seized Mr. NOBLE by the collar and thrust him against the wall. He was about to throw him down stairs when the spectators interfered and separated the combatants by force. Mr. DUNHAM fled on the first demonstration from Mr. BROOKS. A Committee of Investigation was appointed by the House, and they are now taking evidence with a view to bring Messrs. DUNHAM and NOBLE to an accountability for assaulting an officer of the House while in the discharge of his official duty.

A later account of the affair says that Mr. NOBLE interfered to prevent a fight between Messrs. BROOKS and DUNHAM, but was not at all involved in the fight.

The Committee reported to the House that Mr. DUNHAM ought to apologize to Mr. BROOKS and also to the House, and this Mr. DUNHAM is willing to do, but Mr. BROOKS, it is understood, refuses to accept apology.

Shooting Affair at Memphis, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Wednesday, June 24.

JOHN ABLE, known as a gambler here, was shot dead this afternoon by a man named JOHN EVERSON, in front of the Washam House. ABLE asked EVERSON for some money that he owed him, and the reply was a pistol ball through his body. The affair created great excitement amongst the citizens, who, assembled at the jail, determined to hang EVERSON, but through the persuasions of the Mayor and others, they were calmed down. A meeting was appointed for this evening, however, to decide upon what was to be done with EVERSON.

Masonic Celebrations.

CELEBRATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 24.

The Masons of this District were joined by their brethren of Richmond and celebrated St. John's Day by a visit to Mount Vernon. The ceremonies at the tomb were of a deeply solemn character. Among the incidents was the christening on the premises of two children, to bear the name of WASHINGTON.

THE MASONIC CELEBRATION AT PROVIDENCE, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Wednesday, June 24.

The Masonic celebration passed off very pleasantly. The assemblage was large and the display fine. The Oration was by Rev. Dr. RANDOLPH, and the Poem by Mr. VAN ZANDT. Both were excellent. The De Morley Boston Encampment made a particularly good appearance. The dinner was superb.

THE COLORED FREEMASONS OF PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 24.

The colored Masons of this city made an imposing procession this morning to celebrate and dedicate their Hall, which has just been finished. There were nearly seven hundred persons in the line, who were handsome regalia and other paraphernalia of the Order. The Lodges were accompanied by bands of music, and displayed several rich banners. Among the strangers present were a Lodge from Camden, the Maryland Grand Lodge, and the Meridian Lodge of New-York.

Great Horse Race at Albany.

ALBANY, Wednesday, June 24.

A race for $2,000 a side came off this afternoon between the Dalton horse, owned here, and the Taylor horse, owned in New-York. The distance was twenty miles, in harness. The Dalton horse made a waiting race for seventeen miles, laying close to Taylor's quarter and taking it easy, and at the 18th mile Dalton drew ahead and maintained it for a mile, when Taylor ran past him, going in a few lengths ahead. The time for traveling twenty miles was 1 hour 12 minutes and 54 seconds. The Judges decided the race in favor of Dalton, who got the stakes in consequence of Taylor's horse running. The horses are matched for a fifty-mile race, to come off at New-York.

Fires.

BURNING OF THE OAKUM WORKS AT BRISTOL, R.I.

BRISTOL, R. I., Wednesday, June 24.

The Bristol oakum works, owned by Messrs. DEVER, DIMON & Co., were discovered to be on fire at 3 o'clock this morning, and were soon totally destroyed by it. The origin of the fire is unknown. The buildings were insured for $10,000, among the Hartford and North Western, Western Massachusetts and Sleter Mutual Insurance offices.

FIRE IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 24.

The building No. 114, on Blackstone-street, occupied by W. E. P. BROOKS, furniture dealer, JOHN MORGAN, liquor dealer, and others, was nearly destroyed by fire last night. The loss is about $25,000.

BURNING OF AN IRON FURNACE, ETC.

DETROIT, Wednesday, June 24.

The new blast-furnace in Hamtranck, owned by the Detroit and Lake Superior Iron Mining Company, with some valuable machinery, was destroyed by fire about 8 o'clock this morning. The loss is estimated at $38,000, and is partially covered by insurance.

Burglaries.

EXTENSIVE BURGLARY IN ALEXANDRIA, VA.

ALEXANDRIA, Wednesday, June 24.

The jewelry store of W. W. ADAMS in this place was entirely swept by burglars last night. Upwards of $20,000 worth of jewelry and plate was stolen by them. There is no clue to the robbers.

BURGLARY IN PATERSON, N. J..

PATERSON, Wednesday, June 24.

The residence of Mr. JOHN MURRAY, in this place, was broken into, this morning, during his family's absence, and an English Geneva watch and chain, two bracelets, two seals, two keys, and a pencil-case, all of gold, were carried off. Thirty dollars in money was, also, taken. It is believed that the thief has gone to New-York.

Nothing as yet has been done towards organizing a of the Fort then organized an expedition; its result has not yet been ascertained.

Of the party composing the emigrant train, the names have been given to me as follows: C. R. Weaver and wife, E. P. Weaver, L. D. Weaver, and M. Lewis, all of Carroll County, Arkansas; Samuel Smith, J. Smith, W. Smith, J. Huston and E. Garrison, all of Barry County, Missouri. There were three women besides Mrs. Weaver, whose names I have not been able to learn. The names of the killed are L. D. Weaver, M Lewis, S. Smith and E. Garrison.

It is said that among the Indians were several whites, supposed to be Mormons, who, it is supposed, from their bitter hatred of Missourians, premeditated the attack; and, having ascertained the time of the party's departure from the Fort, set out in advance and incited the hostile Indians to the murderous attack. The news was conveyed last night by express to Gen. Harney, at Fort Leavenworth. P. H. C.

The Election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention—Probable Result in Douglas County—The Proceedings of the Topeka Legislature.

OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.

Lecompton, K. T., Monday, June 15, 1857.

I take advantage of the departure of one of Richardson's Missouri Company express messengers (an enterprising and obliging firm, to whom I am indebted for several favors) to send you the result in general terms, so far as it can be ascertained, of the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention. The polls were opened here, as elsewhere, today, and speedily beset by voters from Lecompton and its vicinity. Some of our friends from the rural districts, where the luxuries of combs, brushes and soap have sunk into mere traditions, presented a coup d'œil of the most striking character, and would certainly make the fortune of any enterprising manager if exhibited as genuine specimens of the Border Ruffian at a fair price in the New-England towns. Believe me, however, they are not so bad as they seem; and if you could only succeed in having your elections conducted as fairly and as peaceably as these squatter sovereigns manage theirs, all your well disposed citizens would have reason to bless their stars.

As I have already informed you, (though my last letter having been sent by hand may have miscarried,) we have had two tickets here, each based on the principle that the Constitution must be submitted to the vote of the whole people, but differing, in some cases, on mere local interests, though more generally, I apprehend, on the question whether the rigidly conservative and partially Pro-Slavery Party or the out-and-out Free-Soil and partially Republican Party should preponderate in the Convention. In Lecompton the former, which is the regular ticket, though considerably leavened by a Free State minority, has been carried by a vote of about two to one. This result, however, may be very materially modified by the votes elsewhere, though I entertain no doubt that the regular ticket will have an absolute majority of all the votes in the county.

In Lawrence, (as I have been told by a gentleman who spent most of the day there,) where there are two hundred registered voters, the Abolition Party instituted a reign of terror, and refused to let any poll be opened at all; and in Franklin the rumor is that the same proceedings have occurred, and in precisely the same way. This has simply had the effect of permitting the opposing party to have everything according to their wishes, and cannot be too severely reprehended. It is true the political character of the Convention is a matter of secondary importance when it is considered that the Constitution will be submitted to the vote of the whole people, but, withal, I think the policy of ignoring the election of delegates was unwise, ill-advised and absurd. If the same course has been pursued by the ultra Anti-Slavery men in the other counties (which I am disposed to think has been the fact,) then the consequences may be serious. I believe, however, that the Convention will be pretty fairly constituted, and I have no doubt that it will represent, though disproportionately it may be, all the political sentiment of the Territory.

Recent information from Topeka confirms me in the belief that the Legislature which sat there last week did little or nothing calculated to bring them into any conflict, direct or remote, with the Territorial Government. I believe the census bill, and the measures for making election appointments and electing a Governor, a Lieutenant-Governor, and members of the Legislature, were passed. These acts provide that the elections shall take place on the first Monday in August, when, it is affirmed, the Topeka Constitution will be resubmitted to a vote of the people. An act to make Topeka the capital was carried, of course, by an overwhelming majority. An adjournment took place on Saturday. P. H. C.

THE MORMONS.

Another Letter from Judge Drummond.

Indianapolis, Friday, June 19, 1857.

To Hon. Oliver H. Smith, J. A. Wright, A. P. Willard, Dr. Winslow S. Pierce, Ingalsby, Tuttle, Achey, Morrison, Henderson, Woolly and others, of Indianapolis, Ind:

Gentlemen: Some weeks since, when I was in your city, you most kindly invited me to address you at such time as should be most convenient to myself upon the legitimate, moral and social condition of the Territory of Utah, with my suggestions for the evils therein existing. Knowing the high character of the many gentlemen whose names I find upon this list, and fully appreciating the past life of their devotion to our common country, I cannot but feel myself much flattered by a demand from my fellow-countrymen who have served in both branches of the American Congress, several as Governor of your flourishing State, and many of you now filling honorable positions at the hands of your constituents; and, above all, when the unadulterated and pure masses join in a demand of this nature, I feel it to be the highest sense of duty to an action spontaneous on the part of the parties to this note to give your several interrogatories a full, clear and distinct answer, and when I do so, I shall not deal in terms of unusual kindness with the Administrations of Presidents Fillmore nor Pierce.

Preferring to set myself right before the country on this Mormon question, I have prepared a reply to your note in writing; but, as I have just had an interview with Hon. Geo. P. Stiles, who was one of the Judges therein with myself, and also with Mr. Peter Dotson, the late Marshal of that Territory, both of whom left Great Salt Lake City in April last, and are now in Washington City for the express purpose of giving additional information to this slow and indifferent Administration on the subject of more recent Mormon outrages in Utah Territory, I have deemed it proper to withhold the communication for the present, as I do not desire to say or do anything that will in the least embarrass the friends of the Administration on this vexed question, and it is solely out of due respect to your high and distinguished character as a man that I address you this note.

But one word in conclusion, gentlemen. You have read, time after time, in all the papers of the day who claimed to speak by authority, that the Administration was going to act, and that quite speedily, upon the Mormon question. But why do they not act? Can either one of the distinguished gentlemen who addressed to your humble servant the friendly note give any tangible reason why they do not act? Is it not of far more importance to the people of the United States that all our own States and Territories should be locked after, cared for, governed and fully controlled, than the appointment of a few gentlemen to consulships in foreign countries? Yet these appointments are daily being made, while the stars and stripes of the flag of our own country is shamefully trailed in the dust by the mandates of one of the most powerful men alive—while the laws of the country are neither obeyed nor respected—while multiplied thousands of alien enemies are daily coming from foreign countries to strengthen and enrich that nest of vipers whose end and aim is the ruin of our whole nation—while helpless females and innocent children are tortured worse by far than any slave on the Southern coast—while the officers of the present Government are robbed, slandered and murdered, and their wrongs unredressed by the Government who sent them there to be thus maltreated for seven long years past.

Certainly I know that the generous heart of each one of you will beat an affirmative response to this suggestion, then I ask why is this cruel indifference and this barbarous neglect? Is it because the administration is too timid to undertake the task, or is it the policy of Mr. Buchanan's administration to temporize with Brigham Young and his strong arm until the masses upon the frontiers who have been robbed, and plundered, and their friends butchered by the score, shall be compelled to rise in the majesty of their power, and vindicate the many wrongs and injuries which the Government either neglects or refuses to do in its legitimate capacity? Being a life-long Democrat I take it that I have a right to speak plainly (and on this subject I confess I have some feeling) of my own party, and here I would state, as many others do, that the course so far pursued by Mr. Buchanan's Administration, in connection with Utah, will, and justly should, politically damn any administration. Now it is near the last of June, and not an act yet done toward accomplishing anything relative to Utah, while it is well known that the season has now advanced so far as to render it almost an utter impossibility to reach Utah this season while the Mormons are going over by thousands.

I see that a distinguished Senator from my own city and State, has recently been called upon for his views on this subject, and as far as I have read his remarks I find that he has "stolen some of my thunder." But all right, he has the official harness on, and I fancy he will yet have to bend all the energies of his mighty mind to bring the courage of Mr. Buchanan's Administration to a sticking point in connection with Mormonism. Unfortunately for our Western States there is not a practical Western man in the Cabinet, save General Cass, and he is too old and feeble for the arduous duties of his office. You may think that I am a little inclined to find fault, but it is not strictly so. I can well appreciate the good intentions of the present Administration, at the same time I can deeply sympathize with all my Western friend over the weakness, timidity, and want of activity upon so vital a question by the members of the present Cabinet, and you want no better illustration of their utter ignorance of the Mormon power, than the idea of one thousand men enforcing the law. At an early day, Gentlemen, I hope to answer each of your questions fully, and for the present, I remain, your obedient servant, W. W. DRUMMOND.

The Appointment of Col. Cumming as Governor of Utah.

From the Washington Union of yesterday.

We believe we are not too premature in announcing, this morning, that Col. Cumming, of Missouri, has been appointed Governor of Utah, and that he intends to remove his family thither, with the view of making that Territory his permanent residence. Col. Cumming is a gentleman of tried official integrity, and of large experience in frontier life. Possessing great personal courage, of a conciliatory nature, yet prompt and energetic in the discharge of duty, he will bring to the important responsibilities which he has assumed the most essential qualities for success in the delicate, and even dangerous, mission which has been confided to him.

The difficulties to be encountered in Utah are more numerous and complicated than is now generally supposed. Among them may be incidentally mentioned that Brigham Young claims a title to all the lands in the Territory, and has never recognized the United States surveys. None of his followers have purchased lands in accordance with our laws. Hence one of the delicate duties of the Federal Courts of that Territory will be to establish and maintain the rights of those who may hereafter purchase in accordance with our laws. Not an individual in all Utah now holds a foot of land the title of which is derived from the United States, and it follows, under this strange condition of things, that all parts of the Territory are at the present time open to preemption.

THE MISSION TO CHINA.

Dinner to Mr. Reed—The American Policy—No Alliance With Other Powers—"Old Ironsides," &c., &c.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, 23, 1857.

The complimentary dinner to which the personal friends of Hon. Wm. B. Reed had invited him, on the eve of his departure for China, came off last evening, at the La Pierre House, and was in all respects a pleasant and interesting occasion. The company was not partisan in character, but made up of men of all political creeds, who had united as friends, in this tribute to one whom they esteem as a gentleman, and to whose diplomatic career they look with abiding confidence and hope. The dining hall was decorated entirely with flowers, arranged in rich clusters, wreaths, and pendants, while by the side of every plate stood a fragrant bouquet, of delicate and varied hues. I know not whether this plan of ornamentation was so intended, but certainly it was very suggestive of the "Flowery Kingdom," whither the distinguished guest of the evening is bound.

Hon. Joseph R. Chandler presided, and with his accustomed grace, prefacing each toast with brief and pertinent remarks, and added not a little to the evening's entertainment. At his right, of course, sat Mr. Reed, who was flanked by Major Biddle, son of the famous Nicholas Biddle, of Bank memory. On the left of the President were Commodore Stewart, Gen. Patterson, and other prominent Philadelphians. Mr. Reed is an exceedingly agreeable gentleman, easy and courteous in manner, calm and collected without being frigid, and looking scarcely 40 years of age, although I understand that is considerably below his mark. As you will have seen by his speech, he is fully aware of the responsibilities of his new position, has carefully considered them, and, so far as is possible, has marked out his course. He has the credit among his friends of boldness and fearlessness without rashness, and of prompt decision without unseemly or imprudent haste. If expectation of success is half the battle, our new Minister starts upon his mission under the most favorable auspices.

The attentive reader of his remarks made last evening, will see that the policy of the Administration is against the proposed treaty alliance with England and France, for the purpose of pressing negotiations upon the Chinese Government. But while Mr. Reed, acting for the Administration, will avoid any such alliance, it is his purpose—as it is the wish and instructions of the President—to consult and cooperate with the representatives of all other Governments, as freely and as heartily as though bound so to do by treaty stipulation. The United States seek no exclusive advantages in China. We ask only equal privileges with other nations, and have nothing to gain therefore, but everything to lose, by attempting exclusive negotiations. While Mr. Reed, in all such matters, will maintain entire independence, he will carefully guard against the opposite extreme, and so secure for his country all the advantages which could flow from the alliance proposed, without complicating us in any of its incidental entanglements.

Commodore Stewart attracted much attention. In the feeble white-haired man who responded to the toast in honor of the Navy, it is difficult to recognize "Old Ironsides," whose gallant exploits once filled the world with his fame. Although now upwards of seventy years of age, no man seemed to enjoy this festive occasion more than he, or to enter more heartily into all its incidents. His retirement by the late Naval Board, however, still causes him much distress. In rising to speak last evening, he referred to it incidentally in a tone of sadness and despondency quite at variance with his usual hilarity and good spirits.

I will not attempt to give you the speeches made after the dinner cloth was removed, for I know that it would be impossible to find a place for them in your over-crowded columns. The chief speakers were those whose names have already been mentioned, with Chief Justice Lewis, Ex Collector Lewis, Morton McMichael, Esq., Major Biddle and Col. Forney. Suffice it to say that the company separated at a late hour, each member of it more than satisfied with the liberal and elegant manner in which those who had charge of it had got up in their behalf this farewell tribute to a fellow citizen and a friend.

I understand that Mr. Reed goes to Old Point Comfort, Va., whence he will take the Minnesota as soon as she shall be ready for sea. His family accompany him to the place of embarkation, and his two sons proceed with him to his destination. As an evidence of the good understanding in relation to the object of Mr. Reed's mission which exists between our Government and that of Great Britain, I may mention the fact that Lord Napier has signified his intention of meeting him at Old Point, to bid him farewell and God speed.

I append, in conclusion, a letter received from President Buchanan in answer to an invitation to be present at the dinner.

S.

Washington, Thursday, June 18, 1857.

Gentlemen: I have had the honor to receive your invitation, on behalf of the Committee of Arrangements, to be present at the public dinner to be given, on Monday next, to Mr. William B. Reed, previous to his departure on his mission to China. I should most gladly accept the invitation were this in my power, consistent with public duty, because, in view both of the importance of the mission, and the eminent qualifications of the Minister, the occasion will be one of great interest. I regret, therefore, that I shall be deprived of the pleasure and the privilege of uniting with my Philadelphia friends in doing honor to one to whom honor is so justly due.

Yours, very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Political Preaching.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher preached to his congregation last evening on the responsibility of the Church and of individual Christians for the public sentiment of the community. In the course of it he spoke of the right of the pulpit to speak against any wrong, even if it had got into the sanctuary of politics, in connection with which he said he had recently received from some unknown friend an extract bearing upon this subject, which he proceeded to read, somewhat as follows: "One day, says Luther, as Satan and his imps were gathered together to consult in relation to their plans and to give an account of what each had done, one said—'I let loose the wild beasts upon a caravan of pilgrims, and now their bones lie bleaching upon the sands of the desert.' 'Pshaw,' said the Devil, 'their souls were all saved;' 'and I,' said another, 'by tempest wrecked a ship loaded with Christiens on ther way to found a new community.' 'Pshaw!' said the Devil again, 'their souls were all saved;' 'and I,' said a third, 'cultivated an intimate acquaintance with an 'independent preacher,' and after long persuasion I induced him to drop his Bible and go to preaching politics,' and then the Devil shouted in exultation till the arches of Pandemonium rang and all the night stars of Hell sang together for joy."

"Whether Luther ever wrote that or not," continued Mr. Beecher, "it is true; I dont wonder that when the man dropped his Bible and went to preaching politics, he went to the Devil at once: but he would have had no trouble if he had lived in our day. It is not such preaching as that that makes disturbance now—it is when a man takes the Bible and applies its truths hissing hot to the side of public affairs that the Devil screams."

It is to be hoped that the kind friend who sent the extract may have been present to hear the whole sermon, but as it is possible that he was not, the above is sent to the Times to give him another chance of lessening the effect he produced. If he should see it let him not be discouraged, but "pick his flint" and try it again. R.

Houses of Ill-Fame Burnt by a Mob.

From the Detroit Tribune.

On Saturday night about 10 o'clock an organized and premeditated onslaught of a most determined character was made upon some low dance-houses in the Tenth Ward. The gang of men numbered at least 100, and was headed by some of the prominent citizens of the Ward, as also by several aspirants, we are told, to the honors of an Aldermanic seat and a School Inspectorship.

A plan of operations had evidently been settled on, and the posse proceed to carry it into systematic effect. The first house attacked was situated on a cross street between Lafayette and Croghan. The building was entered, the inmates driven out forcibly, the furniture smashed up and used for kindling a fire which soon communicated to the whole house, which was speedily consumed.

The vilest and most notorious of all these dens, Charley Lawrence's negro dance-house, was next visited. It was found full, as usual, with its wretched inmates, an amalgamated mass of blacks and whites of the worst description, and their vile visitors. Here a fight ensued, as Lawrence had been apprised of the contemplated attack and was in a posture for defence. The inmates were overpowered, however, by the large force, driven out, and the building was quickly wrapped in flames and burned down.

A house on Congress-street, just over the railroad track, kept by a man named French Jo, was next attacked, riddled and burned.

The crowd then came down Congress-street across the track, and attacked a house owned by Ann Bosly, an old familiar to indictments and Police Court annals. Its occupants fled at the first sound of attack, and the house was delivered up to the tender mercies of the excited crowd, who rushed in. The furniture was demolished, carpets ripped up and bedding thrown out and trampled in the mud. The arrival of several Fire Companies on the ground prevented the firing of this building, which was without doubt intended. The windows were all stoned in, however, and the house left a pretty complete wreck.

This house was repaired yesterday, new windows being put in, doors mended, &c., but last night it was again attacked and every window stoned, and the occupants driven in terror from the place.

The Fire Companies did everything in their power to prevent any further outbreaks of violence. Quite an excitement was the result. People from the adjacent Wards by hundreds swarmed to the scene of excitement, and the crowd who had performed all these acts seemed determined to pursue their occupation till the houses on Lafayette-street should share in the ruin of the others. A row was imminent, but the firemen were firm, and the fear of detection led the crowd finally to desist.

The outbreak was lawless and cannot be justified. The mob that can redress its grievances in this particular, if it has any right, can exercise it in any other case where it may decide to do so. It would be entirely unsafe to allow these things with impunity. But the blame does not rest with these people only. These nuisances, it is well known, have grown insufferable. Some three weeks since the Council was petitioned to abate them, and went through the farce of referring the petition to the Committee of the Whole Council and the Mayor, with instructions to visit them. It might have better been killed at once by laying it on the table.

Heartless Seduction and Desertion of a Girl.

From the Cincinnati Times.

We stated yesterday that the dressmaking establishment of Miss Black, on Longworth-street, had been entered early in the morning and robbed of several silk dresses. It was supposed the crime had been perpetrated by some expert burglar, but an investigation by the police, led to the suspicion that the theft was committed by some one well acquainted with the premises. Further inquiry caused them to take into custody a girl named Ellen Williams, who was in the employ of Miss Black. She at once confessed to the robbery, and gave up the goods. She is only 14 years of age, and it appears is the victim of a base and heartless seducer.

Some two months ago, she applied to Miss Black for employment, and was given a situation. She was very ready with the needle, and was so industrious, attentive to her business, so amiable and gentle in her disposition, that Miss Black soon became fond of her. Ellen, however, was apparently in trouble, and finally after much persuasion, confessed to her employer, that she had deserted a good home and kind parents, and come to this city with a man who had deceived her. Sympathy retained the girl, whose very face is the expression of innocence, in Miss Black's employ, until she voluntarily left, as is supposed, through the persuasions of her seducer. The same influence, it is supposed, caused her to commit the crime of yesterday.

She did not seem to fully realize her situation until she was placed in a cell. She then wept most grievously, and wished herself dead and in the grave. The Mayor and others held interviews with her, and though she told them freely the history of her wrongs, she withheld most obstinately the name of the man who is the author of all her misery. She says she will suffer incarceration and even death before she will expose him. Her story is as follows:

She lived at or near Boston, Indiana, with her parents. Her father is a farmer, and she was fourteen years of age last January. At home she became acquainted with a young man, a carpenter by trade, who persuaded her to leave her parents and come with him to this city. She came here and for a few days lived happy with him, but he got out of money and would not work. She looked for and obtained employment, and though she does not say so, it is presumed that her villainous seducer received at least a portion of her earnings. She refuses to state why she committed the robbery yesterday.

She says Miss Black treated her with kindness; that she appreciated it, and that she did not intend to wrong her. But, worse than all, she confessed that, young as she is, she is now in a condition to become a mother, and has been since her arrival in this city. She would like to return home, and gives the most positive assurances that, if released, she will proceed directly to her parents, and stay with them. She will probably be committed to the House of Refuge until her parents can be notified of her whereabouts and condition.

Suicides.

The Morris Jerseymen gives particulars of the death of Betsey, wife of Newton Woodruff, of Hanover, Morris Co., who is supposed to have committed suicide on Tuesday last. In the afternoon Mrs. Woodruff took her youngest child, eight years of age, and remarked that she was going fishing. She returned in a few minutes with the child, and said there were some men near the river she was afraid of. She went out again in about half an hour, alone, and had not been seen until search was made during the night and on Wednesday, when her body was found in the river a few rods below the bridge.

Mrs. L. P. Ross, wife of Professor D. Barton Ross, contradicts the report that her husband attempted to commit suicide at Petersburg, Va. He was attacked by vertigo, and took chloroform as a remedial agent. Its effect, however, was to aggravate the symptoms, and while in a state which rendered him unconscious of his actions, he inflicted two stabs upon himself with a common pocket knife, neither of which produced any serious effects.

John Ellis, who attempted to commit suicide at Henriette, N. Y., by cutting his throat, died on Sunday night, having lived upwards of three weeks with a severed windpipe and without nourishment.

At North Woodbury, Conn., on Monday, Mrs. Katharine Coggswell, wife of William Coggswell, committed suicide, by cutting her throat from ear to ear, with her husband's razor.

☞ P. Anguara, United States Consul at Barcelona, Spain, has sent to the State Department at Washington, the following important communication:

"The Spanish government having prolonged until the 31st December next the exemptions previously accorded to all vessels arriving in Spain from foreign ports with flour, grain, beans, and other mealy substances, I deem it proper to state that the exemption from all duty accorded both to the cargo and to the vessel that brings it can only be enjoyed when the whole cargo consists of those substances. And whereas several instances have occurred of vessels being made to pay full duties in consequence of their having on board a few hundred staves or other trifle, I consider myself bound to report this fact to your excellency, with the hope that it may thus be made known to all the shippers of such articles and to owners of vessels, so that, by complying with the strict rules enforced in the matter, the American interests may be more fully benefited by the exemption than at present."

Shocking Murder in Philadelphia.—About 9 o'clock on Saturday evening, a disturbance took place among some low characters in Carberry's Court, running South from Catharine street, below Fifth. During the fight Edward Muldoon, a newly elected constable of the Third Ward, interfered to stop the disturbance, and while in the performance of his duty he was stabbed in the stomach with a knife in the hands of one of the party. The wounded man was conveyed to the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he died about 4 o'clock the following morning. James Diamond, a young man, a shoemaker by trade, virtually acknowledged his guilt to the officer who took him into custody. The Coroner commenced an inquest in the case yesterday. A number of witnesses were examined, and the evidence of some here very heavily upon Diamond. The latter, together with Michael and John Lavery, and Lewis Pickering, were committed to prison by Alderman Floon to await the result of the Coroner's investigations. The deceased was a young unmarried man, and resided with his mother, in Lebanon-street. The alleged murderer is also an unmarried man. He bore a very bad reputation before this bloody occurrence.—Evening Bulletin.

The Arctic.—We understand that the Navy Department has determined not to send the steamer Arctic on the surveying expedition on the Isthmus of Darien, for which Lieut. Craven has been designated. This vessel has been temporarily transferred to the coast survey, to be employed under Lieut. Berryman in taking deep sea soundings connected with that branch of the service.—Washington Star.

The Hail Storm at Washington—The Damage.

From the Star.

A threatening cloud blackened the western sky, between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, portending the usual daily instalment of rain, "and nothing more." This we had, accompanied by fearfully vivid lightning and heavy thunder. Then occurred a pause, and then came a fearful, unfamiliar, crashing sound, and a fall of hail, or rather large cakes and flakes of ice, which smote mercilessly the tender vegetation, and carpeted the ground, almost instantaneously, with a thick covering of crushed plants, and green leaves stripped from the trees. The loaded boughs of fruit trees were in many instances entirely denuded; fields of grain were laid postrate, as by the mower's scythe; green houses, public and private, were naturally stricken down with a crash, and the rare plants in many instances completely destroyed. The westerly windows of buildings unprotected by shutters or blinds were completely riddled; even the heavy glass—some three eighs of an inch thick—in the roof of the new Halle of Congress was broken by the terrible blows inflicted by these falling masses of ice. Houses were unroofed: fire bells rang; cattle plunged from point to point, bellowing, in piteous fright; trees were torn up by the roots, or their limbs broken off like pipe-stems; shutters were twisted from houses; the streets were deluged with water.

The Smithsonian Institution lost 2,000 panes of glass; Hoover, gardener, lost 7,500 panes and had his garden flowers and rare plants ruined. The beautiful field of oats in the public square, west of the Smithsonian Institution, is cut down as with a scythe. Apparently not more than one stalk out of fifty is left standing, where was the most vigorous field of grain we have seen this season. It is cut off almost horizontally about one foot from the root. In nearly all the private gardens, the grape vines, peach trees, strawberry vines, and vegetables are entirely ruined.

The Government Green House at the foot of the Capitol is a complete wreck; the United States Hotel has lost 400 panes of glass, and sustained a damage of some $300; the new Government Armory has lost every pane of glass on its north-westerly front; the sky lights at the Capitol, (a specimen of which is now before us,) ½ of an inch thick, were cracked and broken.

Rev. Mr. Canother's church, corner of Fifth and I streets, lost some 260 panes of glass; the tin roof of the church was also badly bruised. Rev. Mr. Canothers himself, while in the neighborhood of the church, was so much stunned by the electric fluid as to be rendered unconscious for a time.

The President's green-house, hitherto so attractive an object, under the careful superintendence of Mr. Watt, was demolished.

The driver of one of Whaley's omnibuses got terribly cut in the face by the hailstones, in consequence of his hat blowing off while he was restraining his plunging horses. The gas-lights were not lit last night in consequence of the general destruction to street lamps by the storm. It is estimated that the cost to the Government and Corporation of repairing breakages upon the street lamps will not be less than $2,000.

Three Children Drowned by Their Mother.—On Thursday, the 28th ult., the village of Leoni, Jackson County, was the scene of a terrible tragedy, as we learn from the Jackson papers. Mrs. Logan, a colored woman—mother of a family of nine children, in a fit of mental derangement, attempted the murder of her whole family. In the absence of her husband, she called all her children into the house—the eldest being but 14 years of age, and forbid their going out. Presently she took one of her children, went out, and threw it into the well; then another, and so on, until she had carried out four. The older children, having their fears excited, followed their mother with the fourth victim, and saw her throw it into the well. They tried to interfere, but were unable—the maniac mother making most desperate efforts to drown them; failing in this, she threw herself down upon her dead and drowning children. The well was curbless—some 12 feet deep, with about 4 feet water. While in the well, her children from the top handed her down a pole, to which the mother and one child clung, and were drawn out. The remaining three were drowned—all efforts of the neighbors to resuscitate them proving unavailing. Pecuniary troubles, it is said, induced the temporary aberration of mind, which led to this dreadful tragedy.—Detroit Advertiser.

Fatal Railroad Accident.—A most distressing occurrence transpired on Saturday, at Hanover, Pa., resulting in the death of Jacob Matthias, Esq., Cashier of the Bank of Westminster. It appears that Mr. M. had taken passage at the Baltimore Depôt, for Harris, and while the cars stopped at Hanover a minute or two, he entered the public house and drank a glass of lemonade. He had scarcely drank it before the train commenced moving off, when he ran from the place and caught hold of one of the cars, which jerked him around with considerable violence. Making a second attempt, he grasped an iron handle of the next car, and on attempting to spring up was thrown completely before the wheels, which passed over both legs, cutting them almost entirely off, and fracturing the skull. Mr. Matthias was immediately taken up and conveyed to a place of safety, where every possible means were resorted to, but all to no purpose. Death terminated his intense sufferings in 15 minutes after the occurrence. He was in the 75th year of his age, and highly regarded as a most excellent citizen. He was quite wealthy and leaves a family.—Baltimore American.

Launch of the Arctic Brig Iceberg.—Dr. Rae's prettily modelled brig, the Iceberg, was launched from Gouwer's ship-yard on Saturday last. She is heavily built—strength being more necessary than beauty, considering the severe work she is destined to perform. Yet her appearance in the water is particularly graceful. Dr. Rae, we are sorry to learn, was detained at Hamilton by illness, and could not be present at the launch. The season being too far advanced to enter upon her intended mission, the Iceberg will be engaged in freighting until the Fall, when Dr. Rae will take her to England, and be prepared next Spring to leave for the Polar Seas to accomplish the purpose for which his vessel was designed.—Kingston (Canada) Whig.

The Ohio State Treasurer's Defence.

From the Tiffin (O.) Tribune.

A STATEMENT.

I have resigned the office to which a generous public called me, and am now the victim of slander, whilst a venal press seizes upon my misfortune as food for excitement. But to all this I must submit. I have implored the Great Ruler for wisdom and courage to meet it all.

But I am under untold obligations to the people of this county, irrespective of party, and to them a statement is due of the causes that led to my resignation. My predecessor failed to pay what he owed to the State by a very large sum. He paid what the accounts showed against him, but failed to put me in funds to meet receipts which he had given County Treasurers. These were legally binding on the State, and I was compelled to receive them as cash. When Mr. Breslin failed to put me in possession of the funds I should have made it public.

My kindness of heart, which with me amounts to positive weakness, led me to rely upon his assurances, and say he had paid all, except the $204,000 reported.

This was my great and only error. It may have been wrong. I found it impossible to obtain the amount from him, and it was then manifestly proper that I should resign and invoke a legal examination. Its result will soon be known, and by it I must abide.

No one has ever suffered by me, nor shall they.

I rely upon a full acquittal from pecuniary liability to the State and for just censure. Conscious of no wrong myself, I am not excited, nor will I despond. I will devote my life to extricating myself from this misfortune. I could wish my friends felt no greater mortification than myself.

I shall not leave home and country. As I have spent the days of my childhood, and the years of my manhood in your midst, I shall remain here, and here, where repose the ashes of kindred and friends, shall my body be buried. With the generous citizens of this County, whose friendship I esteem, and where I have been so long known, the storm of slander will not avail.

I glory in the history of my County, and rejoice that I have shared the confidence of its people. That confidence will never be abused. Not an enterprise has characterized its progress for the past thirteen years, but what has received the aid of my energies and purse. Relieved from the cares of an office so unfortunate to me, I shall return to abide with you, to share your hospitalities, and claim your continued confidence. I shall, in a few weeks, launch my craft upon the legal deep, and call upon those in trouble to seek my aid, which will be at their command.

June 15, 1857. W. H. GIBSON.

United States Court of Claims.

Mail Contracts—Claim for Extra Compensation.

McAtee and Eastman vs. The United States.—(On Trial.)—On May 20, 1846, the petitioners entered into a contract for carrying the mail on route No. 3,960, from Louisville to Vincennes, daily and back, in four-horse coaches, at $7,754 40 a year, for the term from July 1, 1846, to June 30, 1850.

On March 20, 1847, they entered into another contract for carrying the mail on route No. 4,169, from Vincennes to St. Louis and back, in four-horse coaches, at $12,645 a year, for the term from April 15, 1847, to June 30, 1850.

They were not bound to carry the great Eastern mail, that is, the through mail between the Atlantic and the West, which belonged to regular routes extending from Columbus to St. Louis, viâ Dayton, Indianapolis and Terre Haute. But late in 1846, or early in 1847, a portion of that mail was thrown upon them, by diverting it from the routes to which it belonged, and they continued to carry it, to a greater or less extent, till about Jan. 1, 1850, when the difficulties were arranged.

They, however, as the proofs show, made no formal complaint to the him by the throat. He was found guilty, and sentence suspended.

Severn Kanne, charged with assault and battery, on his wife Mena, was discharged at her request.

William Dougherty, for the same offence, against the people and his wife Eliza, was discharged, in default of her appearance.

Anne Stafford stole a table cloth and some towels, worth $36, from William S. Wilson. She was sent to the Penitentiary for six months. Judge Osborne—You've been here so often that your face is familiar to every officer in Court. Prisoner—I have never been here in my life before.

Frank Cassidy last Saturday night laid down on a stoop in the Bowery and went to sleep, and he asserted that William Griffith searched his pockets and stole two shillings therefrom. Judge Osborne—What time was it? Witness—9 o'clock; I was tired, and laid down and went to sleep. Judge—Yes, you was pretty tired about that time, I guess. The prisoner was acquitted.

George Morse stole a shirt from Monroe D. Morris, June 20. The Judge suspended sentence, and let him go.

Michael Waters, a boy and a very hard character, threw a stone at the door of Michael Ryan, June 22. Judge CONNOLLY said he had suspended sentence against him in a similar case before. He had been on the Island once as a vagrant. Judge Osborne—I think we'd better send him to his old quarters. The prisoner went off with the officer calling the prosecutor "a great big old bloat."

John D. Richarde had stolen some silver and copper coins from James Winn. He was discharged at the request of the complainant. Albert Gardner, a boy, stole some barrels from Michael McCanur. The witness did not appear and he was discharged. "You've stolen barrels before," said Judge CONNOLLY. He did not stop to deny it but left the Court with the greatest rapidity.

Matida Greene, an old offender, charged with stealing a slate worth 20 cents, was discharged, no witness appearing.

Margaret Harpin got off in the same way. She was complained of for stealing a sheet from a poor washerwoman.

George Palmer, complained of by Michael Gilligan for assault and battery, was discharged for the same reason.

George Spitzer, for striking John Kremmel, suffered the same penalty for the same cause.

The sentence of Joseph Smith, for stealing a pair of gaiters from Wm. H. Ingraham, was suspended.

In postponing several causes, Judge Connolly here remarked that the sooner lawyers learned that causes would not be postponed without good cause shown, the better.

Officer Jacob Wilsey, of the Sixth Ward, withdrew his charge of assaultiog and attempting to stab him, June 7, made against Frank Crosh.

James McGee threw a stone at Thomas Butler, June 16, who it seemed has provoked him a good deal. Sentence was suspended.

John Fagan, a Police officer, had assaulted Minna Teurnenhaltz, June 12. He wee discharged at her request.

Patrick McCann struck Jacob Wilsey, Police officer, June 21, and was sent to the Penitentiary for one month.

No witnesses appeared against Thomas Ryan, charged with stealing bank notes, June 20, and he was set at liberty.

John H. Hillyer, a deputy constable, said he was standing in front of the Exchange Office of Wm. H. Dayton, in Bleecker-street, near Broadway, June 3, when the latter came out and pushed him off the walk saying he did not want loungers around there; he'd had money stolen recently. An hour afterwards, passing by, he saw a friend of his standing in the door of the Exchange Office, smoking. Hillyer told him he'd better come away, for he'd just had a row for standing on the sidewalk, even. At this, Dayton and one John S. Sipert appeared, when an altercation ensued, and Sipert ran in and brought out $10 in bank notes and a pistol, ready to bet the former that he could whip Hillyer. A charge was entered against Dayton and Sipert, the former of whom was fined $10, and judgment suspended in the case of the latter.

Annie Hollister, teacher in a Ward school, corrected Mary Ann Copper's child for ill-behavior. The mother went to the school and committed an assault on Miss Hollister. She was fined $5, but the sentence was remitted at the request of the complainant's counsel.

The criminal suit of Johnny Lyng against Auguste Thayer, for running into his light wagon, was settled between the parties.

Edmund Burke was charged with stealing a tumbler worth 12 cents from John Morremus, No. 62 Essex-street, June 14. John did not appear and Edmund was told to disappear. He wasn't told but once.

NEW-YORK LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Prepared every week, expressly for the NEW-YORK DAILY, SEMI-WEEKLY, and WEEKLY TIMES, by a careful and experienced Reporter.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 24, 1857.

The principal Market Places are the WASHINGTON DROVE YARDS, 44TH-STREET; BROWNING'S, on Sixth-street; CHAMBERLIN'S, on Robinson-street; and O'BRIEN'S, on Sixth-street. Our reports refer to these regular markets. Irregular sales are sometimes made at Bergen Hill, N. J., and from the Hudson River Boats.

The great sales day at the Washington Yards is on WEDNESDAY of each week. The reports from all the yards are made up for the preceding week to the evening of that day.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about ½c. lower.

REMARKS UPON THE BEEF MARKET.

The cattle market opened this morning under more favorable auspices (for the buyer at least) than for several weeks past. A clear, cool day with a good supply of beeves of fair quality brought out a goodly number of purchasers, and the transactions of yesterday and to-day were larger than they had been at any one previous market for several weeks. With 2,637 cattle yarded at ALLERTON'S yeaterday, or near 600 more than last week, sales commenced at about the closing figures of our last report. Some 400 head were thus sold yesterday, but as butchers begun to be supplied from this and down-town markets, prices took a downward tendency this morning and did not stop short of ¾c.@1c. decline, taking quality and weight into consideration. As some of the cattle were sold at last week's prices, and many more at figures but little removed, we give the general average of the same quality about ½c. less than last Wednesday. As an illustration of the falling off during the day, one lot for which $80 cash ₱ head was refused in the morning, sold towards night at $74 each, on time. The quality of the cattle to-day was an improvement upon that of the last market, and weights were rather in favor of buyers. About 100 cattle were turned out to feed at Bergen, to be brought in for a future market, if not sold on the river. About 500 head were taken East from Buffalo and Albany. Illinois and Ohio have been the principal contributors for this market. Owing to a break upon the Erie Road in consequence of the late freshet, trains were detained for a few days, and cattle intended for that route were forwarded over the New-York Central and Hudson River Railroads, or by boat from albany. The break is now repaired, and trains arrive on time.

The following are the principal lots on sale to-day including a few disposed of last evening:

We present as usual, a few extracts from our copious notes of the transactions of this day:

J. MCPHERSON forwarded a choice lot of 58 Ohio steers, estimated 650 lbs., which W. H. HARRIS sold at 13c.@13½c. ₱ lb., on an average of $111 50 each. We saw nothing finer in the yards to buy.

SHEPARD & CAREY sold 54 Illinois cattle yesterday for N. MEEK, at 11c.@13c. They were medium 625 lb. steers.

They were selling to day 61 fair Illinois steers, rated 650@675 lbs., at 12c.@12½c. C. SHERMAN, owner.

STONE & CHAPMAN forwished 91 common to fair Illinois cattle, estimated 650 lbs. net, which HOAG & SHERMAN sold at $65@$100 per head, or about 12c. average.

J. CAMPBELL forwarded 78 nice Ohio steers and beifers, averaging near 800 lbs. net. MEAD & HOLCOMB disposed of them at 12½c.@13c. WILLIAM MOORE took 10 of the finest at $114, or 13c. ₱ lb.

BLOOMER & SILLECK sold 64 medium to good Ohio Cattle, which they purchased here of J. CHERRY. Estimated weight 350 lbs. They averaged about 12c. ₱ lb.

WESTHEIMER & BROTHER sold 61 fair Texas cattle, which they estimated at 725 lbs. @756 lbs. net, at near 12c.; also, 60 fine Illinois Steers at 12½c.

ALEXANDER & VIRGIN contributed 208 fair to good 650 lbs. Illinois cattle, a part of which were sold by R. MURRAY at 12½.@13c. and the balance by S. ULERY, at similar prices. They were superior in quality to those of last week.

J. BRYANT forwarded 103 fair to good Ohio cattle, for which C. G. TEED was getting 12c.@13c. on 750 lbs. J. HARRIS took 11 at $105, and GEO. DEVOE 8 at $100 each, being about 13c. ₱ lb. on each lot.

LOVEHEAN & MOORE forwarded 58 head of common Ohio cattle, rated at 650 lbs. MILLER, HARING & GURNEY sold them at 11c.@12c. ₱ lb., net.

A. HURD had 43 fair Illinois cattle, estimated 725 lbs. net. They were disposed of by O HURD at 12c. @13c.

B. BARTRAM sold 112 fine Kentucky cattle on his own account, at 12½c.@13c. Estimated weight 725 lbs.

H. R. SMITH came on with 117 fair Illinois cattle, on account of SMITH & LAMB. Home weight, 1,650 lbs., and sold to-day by T. WHITE & SON, at 11c.@13c. ₱ lb. Mr. SMITH complains that he had to pay fare for himself over the Hudson River Road, although he showed a freight bill where he had paid for 1,000 cattle over that road. He gives a decided preference to the Erie Road for accommodation, besides being $10 per car cheaper for his stock.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20 @$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

Cows are in less demand and prices have declined from $3 to $5 ₱ head. The abundance of rain furnishes plenty of grass, thus keeping up a good supply of milk.

ALLERTON reports 39 Milch Cows received during the week, selling at $30@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. Selling slowly at a slight decline in price.

BROWNING reports receipts of 37 Milch cows, selling at $25@$30 for common, $35@$40 for good, and $60@ $70 for extras. The market is dull and prices have declined upon all but good stock.

CHAMBERLIN reports 71 Milch Cows, selling at $25@ $35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $60@$65 for extras. Market dull, with only a medium supply.

O'BRIEN reports 84 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and a few at $60@$65.

The supply is not large, but sales are very dull at a reduction of $3@$4 ₱ head.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Boba"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'e, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S.

The supply gradually diminishes at this season, and prices have advanced during the week. Good calves are now bringing high prices.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 668 Veal Calves, selling for 5c.@7½c. A few at 8c. Short supply, with an active demand.

BROWNING reports receipts of 69 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7½c. ₱ lb. A few extra Calves brought 8c.@8¾c. Stock general ly good. Those at 8¾c. were very fine, weighing near 200 lbs.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 142 Veal Calves, selling at 5c@7½c. ₱ lb. live weight. Extras 8c. Market brisk, with a fair supply. An advance of near ½c. is given for the week.

O'BRIEN reports 48 Veal Calves, selling at 6½c.@ 7½c. Demand active, which is not met by the supply, selling briskly.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ₱ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 56 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₱ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

The foolings give a decrease of more than 1,000 head for the week, but the downward tendency of last market extended through the week, and induced some to turn their sheep out to pasture.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 626 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 5c.@6c. ₱ lb., live weight, or $3@ $6 ₱ head. Prices have fallen off 50c @$1 00, ₱ head, during the week. Good Sheep have been sold to day at about 10c. dressed weight. Lambs sell well, 3 of 60 lbs. each, bringing $5 25, ₱ head.

BROWNING reports receipts of 4,830 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 11c.@12c., net. Lambs are bringing $3 50@$5. Receipts have been large,—about 600 on sale this morning. Lambs are rather scarce and sell as last week. Sheep are about 50c. ₱ head lower.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 2,832 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $2@$7 per head. Supply large and price a nearly as last week, or a little lower.

Sales of Sheep and Lambs by S. JUNN at CHAMBERLIN'S for the week ending June 24, 1857, 1,256 Sheep sold for $5,689 68. Average ₱ head $4 53.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ₱ lb., gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at ALLERTON'S, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses.

Arrivals are tolerably free, and the quality generally good. Prices about as last week.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 2,216 hogs during the past week. Prices for live hogs ranged during the week at 7c.@7¾c. for first quality, and 6c.@7c. ₱ lb. for second quality and stock hogs. There are very few of the latter, and they are very dull. Of fat hogs the quality is quite an improvement over last week.

Hogs selling slowly, with enough offering to keep the market about the same; 1,000 on the market unsold.

Philadelphia Cattle Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 24, 1857.

There was an evident disposition upon the part of the Butchers, yesterday and to-day, to refuse the payment of exorbitant prices for beef cattle, and therefore a decline of about 50 cents on the 100 lbs. took place, and a number of cattle were left over. If this course is pursued for a week or two longer, we shall expect to see beeves sell at about $10 ₱ 100 lbs.

BEEF CATTLE—The offerings amounted to over 1,800 head, but only about 1,000 head were sold, at from $10 50@$11 50@$12 50. A few from Ohio, in prime order, were sold as high as $13 per 100 lbs., but the ruling price was from $11@$12 50.

SHEEP—This market was well stocked, the receipts having reached 7,500 head, most of which were sold at from $2 50 to $5 a head, as in quality. This is a slight decline compared with last week's sale.

HOGS—The demand for Swine was very good, and all offered; 2,500 head were sold at from $9 25@$9 75 the 100 lbs.; 800 head were sold at these prices to the packers.

COWS AND CALVES.—This market was rather dull, the sales only amounting to about 300 head, at from $18@$50 each, as in quality and condition.

Wholesale Produce Markets.

Reported exclusively for the New-York Daily Times.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 24, 1857.

The prices given in our report from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices refer chiefly to the qualities of the articles.

The cold and rain of the past week have retarded the ripening of early fruits, and strawberries, especially, lack that fine flavor and sweetneee which a few warm, sunny days would give them.

Prices of new vegetables are far from being stable, at this season, an overstocked market one day reducing the "truck"—much of which will not keep—to a mere nominal value, while a few days of scarcity, from unfavorable weather or other causes, as readily incline to the opposite.

Potatoes, both old and new, are firm. The stock of Bermudas on hand is not large.

Bermuda Onions are in good supply at the present time, and prices have fallen materially.

Strawberries are abundant, but lack the sweetness which warmer weather would impart. Prices vary with the quality of the fruit and the size of the basket, some of which, it is said, hold three to five berries.

Spinach and other greens, Asparagus and Rhubarb are in large supply and sufficiently cheap.

Watermelons and Pumpkins are beginning to arrive from the West Indies.

Butter is inactive, with light active shipping demand for California. There is a full supply on hand.

Eggs are more plenty and a little lower. Sales moderate during the "strawberry season."

Poultry is decidedly dull.

Markets....Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, June 24, 1857—6 P. M.

ASHES—Appear quiet at old prices. Pearls, $7 75; Pots, $8. ₱ 100 lbs. Saleratus, 7¾c ₱ lb.

CANDLES—Are salable and firm.

COAL—Is lightly dealt in at unchanged figures.

COFFEE—Is in moderate request at previous quotations: Java, 15¾c.@16c.; Laguayra, 12½c.@12¾c.; Jamaica, 12c.@12½c.; Maracaibo 12c.@13c.; Rio, 10½c.@ 11¾c.; St. Domingo, 11¾c.@11½c.; Costa Rica, 13½c.@ 14c., ₱ lb. Stock of all kinds in first hands yesterday: 84,434 pkgs., including 55,604 bags Rio, 16,139 pkgs. Java, 4,822 bags Maracaibo, 3,047 Laguayra, 2,500 Costa Rica, 1,625 Native Ceylon, and 500 St. Domingo.

COPPER—Is dull and heavy, as before reported.

COTTON—The demand is fair and prices favor factors. Our available stock is 56,500 bales, against 50,500 bales same time last year:

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

	Uplands.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary	12	12	12	12

Good Middling	14⅝	14⅝	14¾	15
Middling Fair	14⅞	14⅞	15	15⅛
Fair	15	15¼	15⅜	15⅝

DRY GOODS—Trade is quiet and depressed. Clothiers are the principal purchasers, and they only buy what goods they need to prepare their stocks for the Fall season. The receipts are generally moderate, while the available supplies are ample, and owners are anxious sellers. Prices are heavy, irregular, and in many instances altogether nominal. Western remittances are becoming a little more frequent, and this feature is about the only encouraging one discernible at present. Still, it is not as satisfactory as it ought to be, and much remains to be done by Western debtors ere they can feel relieved from the reproach of being unjustifiably tardy in discharging their obligations to our merchants.

FEATHERS—Prime live Geese, 48c.@54c. ₱ lb.

FIRE CRACKERS—Canton, 40 packs, $2 87½@$3 ₱ box.

FISH—The market is tame; prices are essentially unaltered.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is sparingly offered, and is in lively request, chiefly for home use, though, to some extent, for export to Spain, at improved and rising prices. Sales, 12,450 bbls., in lots, at prices within our annexed range:

Ordinary State	6 35	@	6 40
Straight State	6 40	@	6 45
Extra State	6 65	@	6 85
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 30	@	6 70

Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 65	@	8 50
Extra Ohio	7 00	@	9 00
Fancy Genesee	7 20	@	7 35
Extra Genesee	7 75	@	9 00
Extra Missouri	7 75	@	10 50

Canadian is doing better. Sales have been reported of about 700 bbls., in lots, at from $6 40@$9 for superfine to very choice extra ₱ bbl. Southern continues in pretty good request, at rising prices. The transactions since our last comprise about 1,900 bbls. low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 25@$10 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is depressed and languid, at $4 25@$6 for Fine to Superfine ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is salable and steady at $4 for Jersey, and $4 30 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.

FOREIGN LIQUORS—Continue inactive and somewhat nominal.

FRUIT—A moderate inquiry exists for the leading articles at about former rates. Supplies, rather limited. Sales by auction, to-day: 1,500 boxes Sicily Lemons at $1@$1 75; and 2,720 do. Oranges at $1 55@$3 85 ₱ box.

GRAIN—Wheat continues in light supply and good demand at advancing prices. Sales 16,000 bushels, including ordinary Canadian white, at $1 80; good do. Club, at $1 60; prime Western White, $1 90; fair do. Club, at $1 55; and (100 bushels) new crop Georgia White, the first lot of new Wheat received here this season, at $2 50 ₱ bushel. The latter was a fair lot, and was purchased of VANSCHOICK & Co., the receivers, by a Brooklyn miller. The range for all kinds of old is from $1 75@$1 95 for White, and $1 80@$1 75 for Red, ₱ bushel. Rye is inactive and nominal, at $1 18@$1 23 ₱ bushel. Barley and Barley Malt are unchanged. Oats are moderately dealt in and are steady: 65c.@68c. for Western; 60c @66c. for State; 59c.@65c. for Canadian, 62c.@66c. for Jersey, 57c. @60c. for Pennsylvania, and 56c @59c. for Southern, ₱ bushel. Corn opened with a lively inquiry, chiefly for home use, at higher prices, but closed tamely. Sales 52,800 bushels at 80c.@84c. for unsound and inferior; 85c. @86½c. for mixed; 85c.@88c. for Yellow; and 94c @98c. for White, ₱ bushel. White Beans, $2 25; Canadian Peas, $1 12½@$1 15; Split Peas, $1 87½@$2 ₱ bushel; Black-eyed Peas, $3 50@$3 75 ₱ 2 bushels.

The Hudson River barges brought down 3,600 bbls. Flour, 10,250 bushels Wheat, 4,600 bushels Oats, and 19,500 bushels Corn, the past 24 hours.

HAY—There were 860 bales River taken at 65c @75c. ₱ 100 lbs.

HIDES—Remain inactive yet firm.

HOPS—We heard of sales of 50 bales last year's crop at 9c.@12c. ₱ lb.

IRON—The only sales reported to-day, were small lots of Scotch Pig at $31, usual terms, ₱ ton.

LATHS—Eastern, $1 87½@$1 87½, ₱ M.

LEAD—Is inactive, yet stiffly held.

LEATHER—Sole is salable and steady, as previously represented.

LIME—Rockland: 70c. for Common, and $1 20 for Lump, ₱ bbl.

MOLASSES—The demand continues very limited, and prices favor buyers. Porto Rico, 60c.@67½c.; Cuba Muscovado, 50c.@60c.; Clayed Cuba, 50c.@52½c.; New-Orleans, in bbls., 70c @75c. ₱ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—Crude Turpentine is scarce, quiet and nominal, at $4 ₱ 280 lbs. Spirits Turpentine is more sought after, and is worth 44c.@45c. here ₱ gallon. Many holders declined selling under 45c. ₱ gallon. Tar is inactive and languid, at $1 75@$2 50, according to quality ₱ bbl. Resin is salable and firm, at $1 95 for Common, ₱ 310 lbs.; $3@$5 for No 1, and $5 25@$7 50 for White and Pale, ₱ 280 lbs. Pitch sells slowly and irregularly, at $3@$3 25 ₱ bbl.

OILS—Whale is in fair demand, while Sperm is sparingly sought after at old prices. Red Oil, 63c.@64c. ₱ gallon; Palm, 10½c.@10¾c.; Olive, $1 30 ₱ gallon, and $3 50 ₱ basket. Linseed is moderately dealt in, and is firm, at 60c. ₱ gallon. Lard Oil, $1 15@$1 20 ₱ gallon.

NEW-BEDFORD OIL MARKET, June 22—Sperm—We have to report a sale of 500 bbls., to fill a foreign order, at $1 30 ₱ gallon; we also notice further transactions for manufacturing, including 645 bbls., in parcels, at $1 25, and 160 do., at $1 20 per gallon, prices varying according to quality.—holders of prime lots being firm at $1 30, and the market closing with further inquiry. Whale—The demand has continued through the week, and prices, according to quality, well sustained; the transactions for the week include 4,366 bbls., in parcels, as follows: 1,366 bbls. at 72c.; 800 do. at 73c.; 800 do. at 73½c.; and 200 parcels amounting to 2,150 bbls. dark, for export, at 69c. @ 73c. ₱ gal. also 400 bbls. South South Sea at 58c., and 100 do. home-back at 67c. ₱ gallon. Letters received in this city from New London report sales of 500 bbls in the last market week, at 73c. ₱ gallon. In Stonington we learn of a sale of 700 bbls. at a price not transpired. Whalebone—The market is brisk and firm; the transactions for the week include 10,000 lbs. Ochotsk (delivered in New-York) at 55c., cash; 4,000 do. Ochotsk and Northwest at 58c.; 6,100 do. do at 57½c.; 14,300 do. do at 58c.; 13,000 do. Ochotsk at a price not transpired; 1,600 do. New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A special dispatch from a reliable Correspondent at Albany, indicates the probability of a decision in the Metropolitan Police case this week. Our Correspondent has ascertained carefully the opinions entertained by Members of the Bar in attendance upon the Court of Appeals, and thinks there is no doubt that the decision will be in favor of the constitutionality of the law, only two of the Judges dissenting—BROWN and COMSTOCK.

The Street Commissioner's case, as it is commonly called, was continued yesterday. Mr. BRADY read an affidavit of Mr. DEVELIN, which was in substance the same as the one read on Tuesday, with the exception that in the former one he states that he was in possession of the books, papers, &c., of the office, while, in the one presented yesterday, he declares that the books, papers, &c., are in the possession of the Sheriff, (having been levied on under several judgments rendered against the City,) and have been ever since he became Commissioner, and that he uses the books merely through the permission granted him by the Sheriff. The affidavit denies, on information and belief, that Mr. CONOVER ever filed his bonds and sureties with the Mayor. This, however, is one of the principal questions in the case. It is admitted that he filed them with the Mayor's clerk, and the question is whether, being unable to see the Mayor, filing the papers with the clerk was sufficient. It having been decided to inquire into the facts of the expulsion, Mayor WOOD was requested to give his evidence. Under advice of counsel he declined to appear, except he was summoned by the Court. A summons was issued, and the Mayor made his appearance. His examination was commenced, but nothing of importance was elicited. The case will be continued to day, at eleven o'clock, and the Mayor's examination proceeded with.

Mayor WOOD is still in custody of the Sheriff. At 4½ P. M. yesterday, Deputy Sheriff MCKINBEN, sitting in the Sheriff's Office, insisted upon the truth of this statement—the Mayor meanwhile being at his out-of-town residence on the Bloomingdale Road, having left "the citadel" in the Park, two hours before, alone in his private carriage. Custody evidently don't seriously restrain a Mayor of his liberty.

Vessels from nearly all the principal ports of the West Indies have arrived at Quarantine during the last week, none of which have brought any cases of sickness. They report the places from which they sailed healthy, with the exception of Gonaives and Havana, where there is the customary amount of yellow fever at this season of the year. From the present healthy condition of the atmosphere, and the prospective exemption from imported disease, there is likely to be but little use for the Yellow Fever Hospital at Seguine's Point.

Hon. N. P. BANKS was yesterday nominated by the Massachusetts Republican State Convention, in session at Worcester, for Governor, by a very decided vote—337, against 78 for J. G. GOODRICH, and 16 scattering. OLIVER WARNER, of Northampton, was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. GOODRICH declining. The resolutions adopted reaffirm the Philadelphia Platform, and denounce the Dred Scott decision.

A Convention of Spiritualists is to be held at Portland, Maine, commencing to morrow and continuing through three days. There doubtless will be an immense rush of spiritualists from all sections of the country, but more particularly from the Eastern States.

The trial of HOLMES, at Staten Island, for obstructing officers BOWER and others, in arresting RAGANS for violating the Quarantine boundary, commenced last evening; the question of jurisdiction, or authority, on the part of the Metropolitan officers, among other things, was raised for the defence.

The Port Wardens, evidently anxious to terminate the suspense which hangs over the decision upon the Port Warden law of 1857 are multiplying their complaints against persons for its violation; on Monday, Capt. CANDLER, one of the oldest Marine surveyors, was served with a copy of the usual complaint, and he gave bonds to take his trial with the others in the Supreme Court of Kings County, sustained by the Board of Underwriters, and the Chamber of Commerce, who will defend the suits. The Surveyors will, however, continue in discharge of the duties of their office until they are stopped by the Courts; if the decision is against them, the case will go to the Court of Appeals.

The Pilot Commissioners are doing what they can, without funds, to carry out the objects of the pilot bill by hearing and attending to complaints of its violations, and in making arrangements for dredging the slips. A complaint was lodged with the Commissioners a day or two since that a large boiler had long cumbered one of the piers on the North River side, but before the order for its removal could reach the owner he had taken it away. There being no salaries attached to this office there are no disputes about the laws being constitutional, and no law suits are apprehended.

No appointments or dismissals were made yesterday by the Police Commissioners, who had only a short session, devoted to private matters. A table, showing the strength and condition of the Metropolitan Police, will be found in another column.

The buildings at the new Quarantine are progressing favorably. There will be one in readiness for patients in the course of a week, and the whole will be ready before the middle of July. The work upon the Pier and L for the steamboat landing is going forward favorably. The Policemen, in the interims of the labor of patrol and fighting mosquitoes, amuse themselves with catching fish, which are now beginning to bite, which affords them good pastime and saves some provisions to the State.

Our parti-colored fowl, the "Bird in a Bush," who has now and then enlightened the public through the columns of the DAILY TIMES, by promiscuous revelations about local politics, we fear, has occasionally overstepped the strict line of propriety, as talking birds sometimes will. We suspect he did as much, unintentionally, in alluding to our City Judge, in his last communication. The intimation that the Judge was "maintained" at the Everett House by Mayor WOOD, was probably intended as a joke, for no one would believe that Mayor WOOD ever maintained any one, either politically or otherwise, at his own expense, besides his own precious self. The "Bird" loves his jokes, and this was one of them.

At the meeting of the Councilmen's Street Committee on Wednesday, six individuals addressed the Committee in favor of opening the Sixth-avenue through the Old York Road. One person was heard against the project. Nothing new was elicited. The Committee adjourned finally and will now report.

The City Inspector yesterday put 200 men at work on the streets, in several of the Wards. To-day he promises to increase the force, and use all possible dispatch to make the City clean.

Yesterday was St. John's Day. It was observed by the various City Lodges.

The Alumni of the General Theological Seminary met for the second day's business yesterday, at 1 P. M., when an essay was read by Rev. Professor FRENCH, of West Point, on the "Evils of Systemizing on Matters of Faith." The Rev. gentleman recommended that all should regard the teachings of the Holy Scriptures in preference to human reasonings. The annual commencement takes place to-day.

General WALKER gradually withdraws the light of his countenance from public observation; there were a large number of callers at the La Farge Hotel to see him yesterday, but his most intimate friends could not tell where he had gone; there were rumors that VANDERBILT had sent that warrant after him, but it could not be traced to any reliable source. In the afternoon Messrs. MOAGAN & GARRISON called twice to see him, but he wasn't in; Mr. WM. B. ASTOR, Jr., GEORGE L. PENDAR, and J. S. THRASHER, also left their cards. The whole party, it is said, will leave for the South on Friday, margre the unlucky augury of that day for embarking upon important enterprises.

The Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity held their twenty-fifth Anniversary last night at Dr. CHAPIN's Church. The orator of the occasion was Ik Marvel, author of "Reveries of a Bachelor." Mr. WILLIAMSON, of Boston, was the poet. These gentlemen delighted a large audience, and did themselves abundant credit.

There was a good supply of Beef Cattle at the Forty-fourth-street market yesterday, and prices declined considerably. The bulk of the sales were made early in the day at prices indicative of a falling off of about ½c. per pound from last Wednesday's quotations. Sheep were also plenty, and cheaper by about ½c. per pound, dressed weight. There were free arrivals of swine, in which a fair business has been transacted during the cool weather. As far as we can learn, those arriving at present are free from the disease, the prevalence of which, at one period, occasioned much uneasiness among consumers of pork.

Hard Swearing.

Coroner PERRY made affidavit, a week ago last Tuesday, that he had been that day to the Mayor's Office to serve a criminal warrant upon Mr. FERNANDO WOOD; but that a "Municipal Policeman" having informed Mr. WOOD of his errand, the latter gave orders to Mr. ACKERMAN—a Captain of Police—"that he, the Coroner, should be turned out of the room." Moreover, that said ACKERMAN "seized the deponent, and, after a little resistance on his part, led and forced the deponent out of the room." Thereupon, Coroner PERRY summoned a body of citizens to aid him in arresting the Mayor, and, whilst endeavoring to do so, several of them were severely wounded, and, as says the Mayor's obscure organ in Nassau-street, sent away with "sore heads" or "broken ones." It is mainly upon the testimony of Mr. PERRY that the honest masses of the community have so severely condemned the course of the Mayor. He was doubtless guilty of inexcusable wrong in instigating the scenes of violence at the Street Commissionership, and afterwards in refusing to obey the Recorder's warrant; but no circumstance was so aggravated as that of causing an assault to be made upon an officer invested with the common-law authority of the Coroner. The punishment due to such a crime ought, in every instance, to be inflicted, and the offence is doubly enormous when committed by the Chief Magistrate of such a City as New-York.

On Wednesday the order requiring Mr. WOOD to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, in resisting the process of the Superior Court, was returnable, and Judge DEAN presented a series of affidavits, which seriously impugn the testimony of Mr. PERRY. Indeed, if the facts sworn to by the Mayor himself, Sheriff WILLET, (whose integrity is acknowledged by every one to be unassailable,) and nearly a score of others, are implicitly to be relied on, the Coroner himself will eventually have a harder task, in justifying his conduct to the community, than any other individual. The Mayor swears that "he had no knowledge or intimation that PERRY had any process to serve" on him; that, had he "known the nature of the Coroner's business, he would have afforded him every possible facility;" and that he "gave no orders to any person to turn Mr. PERRY out of his office," and, if it were done, it was without his "order, knowledge, or assent." Mr. WILLET's testimony is purely negative, but it tends to show that, after the departure of Perry, Mr. WOOD expressed a willingness to submit to arrest, if the Coroner had a warrant against him. Messrs. JOHN MCKIBBEN and JOHN T. STEWART, both of them Deputies of the Sheriff, make affidavit that they sought for PERRY, but could not find him, and that "WOOD not only did not seek to avoid the service of the process in the hands of the Coroner, but was anxious to have him found and admitted." These oaths, of course, only go to substantiate the Sheriff's declaration concerning WOOD's action after the Coroner had left. Mr. DUTCHER—a Municipal Policeman who has for months stood at the door of the Mayor's inner office, in the capacity of Cerberus—was the person whom PERRY swore to as having carried in the message concerning the warrant. His testimony is, therefore, very important. He swears emphatically as follows:

"That some time after noon of the said 16th, Coroner PERRY called at said outer office, and informed deponent that he wanted to see the Mayor. That deponent in the usual manner announced the name of said PERRY. That the Mayor replied, "I am engaged, and cannot see any person now." That deponent did not know that said Perry had any process of this Court to serve, and did not inform said Wood that he had any process, nor did said Perry inform deponent that he had any such process. Deponent further says, that the same answer given to said PERRY had been given to others during the day, and that he knows the fact that said WOOD was at the time that the said PERRY called, actually engaged in the transaction of important official business. Deponent further says, that he used no violence towards said PERRY on said 16th June, nor did he see any one else use violence towards him."

ACKERMAN goes further and makes an affidavit, the truth of which is sworn to by nineteen other policemen, that every word and syllable related by PERRY, as having occurred in the outer office of the Mayor, is false. There is no getting round the conclusion that either PERRY has wilfully perjured himself, or that ACKERMAN and his associates have done so. The Mayor's testimony had better go for nothing, as he is testifying in propria causa, and his evidence is worthless except in relation to points of personal knowledge. Neither do the affidavits of WILLET and his Sheriffs contain any circumstances which directly exculpate Mr. WOOD. Those, on the contrary, of DUTCHER, ACKERMAN and the nineteen other officers, cover all the ground in the affidavit of the Coroner, and flatly contradict every word of it. ACKERMAN says:

"That he was present on the 16th of June inst. in the outer office of the Mayor, when said PERRY called; that deponent shook hands with said PERRY, and they each spoke to the other in a friendly manner; that he did not hear said Perry mention the word warrant, order of arrest, or anything relating to any action or any process in any action. Deponent further says that the only time during this day, on the 16th of June, when he or any person in his presence touched the said PERRY was when they, in a friendly manner, shook each other by the hand; and that it is not true that deponent, or any one in deponent's presence told said Perry that the Mayor's orders were that deponent should be turned out of the room—or that he seized said Perry and forcibly and violently ejected said Perry from said apartment or from any apartment."

After the reception of the affidavits by Judge HOFFMAN, the Honorable Justice remarked that, with such testimony, it "was difficult for him to imagine that the foundation upon which the alleged intention of violating or resisting process, was made, could be sustained;" yet that it was "not impossible," and that it remained for him to consider, "whether it was in the province of the Court to direct a further inquiry." He adjourned a decision of the question until to-day at 10 o'clock. If it shall be affirmative, the Mayor and others will have to be examined on oath, and new facts may be elicited. If the competency of the Court does not, however, extend to "further inquiry," the case falls to the ground, and the issue on the score of veracity between the Mayor's friends and the Coroner must be decided elsewhere.

The Overland Mail—Official Juggling.

A few days since we gave expression to our fears that, notwithstanding bids had been called and received for the contract to carry the overland Pacific mail, the Postmaster-General had already prejudged the case, and absolutely determined that this service should be performed by JAMES E. BIRCH, of California, and viâ the extreme southern route. The ink was scarcely dry upon our paragraphs ere it was announced that BIRCH had been awarded the contract for carrying the mail between San Antonio and San Diego viâ El Paso,—the Post-Office Department reserving the right to terminate it, whenever any new route should be established including service over that thus contracted for. It required little sagacity to see that this arrangement distinctly anticipated the award of the great California mail contract to the party named: and now we have an abundance of rumors from Washington, apparently designed to prepare the public mind for the announcement that the scheme has actually been consummated, and that the route least of all adapted to serve the public interest has been chosen.

It is hard to believe that the President and his Cabinet would willingly lend themselves to so fraudulent and unjustifiable a scheme. What right had they to call upon gentlemen of capital and enterprise to lay aside other business, and give time and attention to the work of estimating and bidding for a contract the award of which had already been secretly determined? Such a proceeding is utterly indefensible. It differs not at all, in principle, from obtaining money under false pretences, wisely punished as a felony in every State of the Union; for if time is money, it is as base to rob a man of it by a deceitful plot to obtain valuable information, as it would be to swindle him out of his check or his merchandise.

We hesitate, therefore, to accept as true the unpleasant rumors charging the Administration with a proceeding so undignified and disgraceful. Nevertheless, it must be confessed that the character of Mr. BIRD'a bid lends seeming corroboration to the charge. It is known that he is very anxious to obtain the contract, and to be ready to execute it over any route which shall be determined upon. He knew that there were other parties—including a combination of Express Companies—equally anxious to undertake the service, quite as competent, at all events, with himself, and more likely to command the public confidence, because of their known experience, energy and strong capital. These, he certainly must have foreseen, would endeavor to win by underbidding. Yet we find that Mr. BIRCH puts in a single bid for the Memphis route alone, at $600,000 per annum—the extent of the appropriation made by Congress for this service. We submit that under the circumstances, this bid indicates a perfect confidence in its acceptance, such as could scarcely result from anything less than knowledge that the bidding was a farce, and that at the end he was to be declared the victor. If the scheme is carried to maturity we shall probably be told that BIRCH's bid was the lowest because his previous contract for the San Antonio and El Paso mail route stipulates the contingent discontinuance of the latter and the saving in that way of $150,000, thus reducing his California bid in effect to $450,000 per annum. The public can find no difficulty in detecting such a card-packing operation as this, and will visit it with the reprehension it so richly deserves.

If Mr. BUCHANAN and his Cabinet advisers are not all parties to what seems a gross perversion of the design of Congress in deference to the demands of merely sectional and local interests, there still is time to avert the impending evil, do justice to those who put in their bids in good faith, and secure such an award as will give the various States of the Union as nearly equal advantages in connection with the proposed mail service as may be possible. That the selection of the Southern route is the one least consistent with every single consideration which should decide the question, we have shown on previous occasions. But important as the decision is for present purposes, it is far more so in view of the fact that this wagon-road route is or ought to be merely the pioneer of the Pacific Railroad route; and whatever disadvantages appertain to it now, will be bequeathed to the great work which we all hope at some day to see connecting our Eastern and Western shores with its Briarean arms,—unless indeed we give up all idea of securing to the Railroad route the advantages which its slower-paced pioneer is reasonably expected to accumulate for it.

What possible object there can be in selecting this extreme Southern route we are utterly unable to conceive, unless it is that of forcing the future railroad to take an unnatural course, such as neither buffalo, emigrants nor capital would ever select. It is idle to suppose that populous and vigorous settlements will be established along any great portion of this objectionable route, or that overland emigration will ever think of wandering across the great desert traversed by it. What nonsense, then, is the suggestion telegraphed from Washington in connection with broad intimations that the Southern route is to be decided upon—that the Postmaster-General deems it desirable that the route chosen should be one along which a line of settlements is likely to spring up! Such certainly should be his desire; but if he is honest in expression of it, the evident pre-arrangement with Mr. BIRCH or his friends will never be consummated, to the outrage of every consideration of economy and justice, and the utter disregard of that popular sentiment throughout the country north of the latitude of the Carolinas which is almost universal in its demand of a central route.

The Nursery and Child's Hospital.

When the world was younger but certainly not much wiser than it now is, men treated misfortune as a crime. The question of the Pharisee, "Lord, who hath sinned, this man or his parents, that he should be born blind?" condenses the moral and the medical philosophy of many centuries. In our own day the steady tendency of the race to the opposite extreme of opinion has become so strongly marked and has taken upon itself such an acceleration of pace as seriously to alarm many quiet bodies who have been carefully closeted and brought up in the venerable notion that Truth lies always in a mean. These good souls fancy that the order of the world is in serious danger from the growing disposition of mankind to regard crime as a misfortune. We are told that exuberant Philanthropy has made the prison a pleasanter abode than the poor-house, and that the egregious villain is more tenderly treated than the imbecile sufferer. What with theories of hereditary depravity, notions of moral insanity, there will soon, our alarmists assure us, be no chance left of the conviction and punishment of any man accused of an extraordinary offence against the laws of society.

We do not think the case so bad as it is represented to be. We are persuaded that the great majority of habitual sinners find their sinful lives no more cheerful and attractive now than their predecessors found such lives to be in the "good old days" of the pillory and whipping-post—before HOWARD was or Mrs. FRY; ere a single penitentiary was model-built, or one Prison-discipline Association organized. And if the era anticipated by the most timid of terrorists should arrive, when the physician shall supersede the hangman, and the straight-jacket shall be substituted for the handcuffs, we do not suppose that any absolute social cataclysm will immediately thereupon result, to the annihilation of property and the extinction of all civilized relations between man and man. But of the advent of that era there is no impending probability. We have not yet passed so far out from beneath the shadow of the old dispensation that we should begin to fear being blinded by the excessive light of the new. No man, it is true, now upholds the ancient doctrine that misfortune is, in theory, a punishable crime. But do not the regulations and the habits of society still enforce the practice of that doctrine? Do we not still treat the victims of our compassion as if they were the righteous objects of our vengeance? If our prisons are pleasanter places now than our poor-houses are, is not that fact itself a sharper criticism upon our systems of industry and of charity than upon our notions of chastisement and repression? How great soever may have been the advances which we have made in penal science, are they not balanced by our backwardness and semi-barbarian ignorance in regard to the fundamental principles of social economy?

While in great and prosperous communities it is still possible for decent and orderly persons to live their lives out in squalid penury, and to die of starvation and neglect; while in wealthy and populous cities it is still possible for human life to begin in abject desolation and to end in friendless destitution, we may be sure that society has still more to fear from the defects of its order, than from the excesses of its philanthropy, and may still find more cause of self-reproach in its disregard of the claims of ignorant and inert innocence than in its sentimental concern for the consequences of blind and passionate sinfulness. Ought we to be entranced with alarm at the near approach of an undesirable millennium, when we consider that three years have not yet elapsed since the first attempt was made in this City to organize a remedy for the enforced neglect of thousands of children, whose mothers are compelled to desert their dearest duties in the quest of the simple means of existence?

On Monday afternoon of this week the corner-stone of a permanent building, to be erected for the use of the "Nursery and Child's Hospital," was laid with appropriate ceremonies. Within this building are to be assembled as many as its limits will accommodate of the hapless infants of the very poor. These unfortunate little creatures, heretofore abandoned to the cruel mercies of such venal or indifferent nurses as can be induced by a wretched pittance, or by the mere indolence of careless "good nature," to afford them a miserable shelter during the long hours which their starving mothers must devote to the stern drudgeries of their daily life, are now to be gathered together in comfortable quarters, under the supervision of trained and disciplined women. How terribly great the need of such an institution was and is in our City, may be gathered, by those who have never thought upon such subjects, from the facts which were set forth by Hon. ERASTUS BROOKS in his interesting address delivered upon the occasion to which we have referred. In that address Mr. BROOKS arrests the attention of the most thoughtless by his picture of the state in which the children already received into the temporary care of the Nursery have, for the most part, come to its sheltering arm. Drugged, that their cries might not weary their mercenary guardians—bruised with many falls, burned, scalded, foul with squalor and feeble with disease, freezing, famished—these miserable little sufferers have borne a witness to their own woe, and to the criminal indifference of the society in which they were born, more eloquent than any pen or any tongue can render. In a vast proportion of instances they have been literally snatched from death to life. With limited means and most inadequate accommodations at their disposal, the noble-hearted ladies, to whose generous and active sympathy this institution owes its origin, have in three years rescued eight hundred and forty children from the jaws of disease and destruction. They have afforded substantial relief too, to four hundred and fifty-one women. In their work past they have of course only vindicated the efficiency of their charity and demonstrated its importance. They are now preparing to extend their operations so as to make them somewhat more nearly adequate to the immense necessities of the metropolis. By the energetic exertions of one of their number, a Charter from the State has been secured for their enterprise, and a gift from the Treasury of the Commonwealth of ten thousand dollars attests the value set upon their efforts by the Legislature. The City has come to the front in the grant of the use of six lots of land in Fifty-first-street. It remains now for the Christian and civilized citizens of the metropolis to come forward and carry this admirable work through to a speedy completion. It will be a disgrace without a name, to us and to our community, if the individual benevolence and common sense of our people shall prove to be less accessible to a call so imperative than the "collective wisdom" of the Capitol and the City Hall.

Who is She?

BALZAC tells a story of an old Judge in Touraine, learned in the law and yet strange to say, not wholly unlearned in human nature, who used to put one invariable question to every criminal that was brought before him. No matter what the age or appearance of the accused might be—no matter what the crime of which he stood impeached, the astute old functionary would attack him with the trenchant query: "well, who is she?" For very sure he was, this wise old watch-dog of a wicked and willful world, that happen what might, a woman must sooner or later be found to be at the bottom of it.

The old Judge was in the right. And though the province of Touraine does not much resemble the State of New-York, the Judge's question has a cosmopolitan value—and cleverly applied will elicit as much light from the dark places of human history on the one side of the Atlantic as upon the other.

The influence of woman is the mainspring of society, after all. And whenever we hear of a new social enterprise, our first concern is not to find out how many "grave and reverend seigniors" of the stronger and more stupid sex have wagged their wigs over it in approval, but how many women have taken the trouble to talk about it or to make others talk. In grave matters as in gay, the sagacious observer knows well that it is to the women he must look for the auspices of success or the omens of failure. From the church which rests now, as it rested in the days of godly Saint CHARLES BORROMEO, upon the "faith and fervency of the devout female sex," to the watering-places which would dry up, and perish utterly were the world of women to desert them—all the institutions of modern society live by the same breath.

It is with no slight satisfaction, therefore, that we find the women of New-York disposed to make a sporting people of us. We have borne our testimony once and again in favor of all manner of manly games and "Isthmian" festivities. We have chronicled the races with care—we have kept our eye on the cricketers, and sailed with the yachtsmen. But our ardor revives with redoubled force to-day, for we have received and now give to the world point-blank proof that the Yacht Club, at least, have enlisted the female interest in their behalf. In another column our readers will find an epistle of which we can truly say that, like SHAKESPEARE'S Hermia, "though it be but little, it is fierce;" a letter which should provoke the Regatta Committee of the Yacht Club to utter with one voice the question of the old Tourangean Judge. It is such a letter as Deborah of old, or the Maid of Saragossa might have written, had either of those heroines sailed in a yacht race, and been unfairly beaten—a letter of criticism soaring into condemnation—a letter of investigation sublimated into denunciation. We do not mean to take sides in this controversy. We only allude to it, deferentially, yet with exultation, as a cheering evidence of the progress of athletic and inspiring amusements among us. What particular gentlemen should have been allowed to run away with the dishes or the spoons of the Yacht Club it is not for us to decide. The Committee have settled that point—and now the Committee are, it seems, to be settled themselves, by the impassioned Naiads whom they have so rashly evoked. Our only concern is to make "place aux dames," and to express the profound satisfaction which it gives us to believe that our naval chivalry may henceforth count, like their tilting prototypes of other days, upon the inspiriting sympathy and interest of "store of ladies, whose bright eyes," if they may not "adjudge the prize," will at least "rain influence" upon the annual returns of our peaceful naumachia.

THE STREETS.—During the civic disturbance of the past ten days, and while the weather was cold and wet, that standing topic of complaint, "the streets," was suffered to lie fallow; but twenty-four hours of warm and dry weather have made us painfully conscious, again, of the wretched condition of our thoroughfares. Clouds of dust and stifling stenches are sufficient reminders of the fearful condition of our streets, and the neglect which they suffer from. We are now just on the verge of the most perilous season of the whole year, and the City Inspector is waiting to learn whether or not he can lawfully remove the filth which is at the same time so dangerous and so uncomfortable. It is high time that this momentous question were settled.

The Port Warden Controversy.

On Monday the Port Wardens included in their complaint for violations of the Port Warden law of 1857, Capt. SAMUEL CANDLER, another of the old Marine Surveyors, who was appointed in 1843 by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters, and who has acted in that capacity ever since. Capt. CANDLER is the oldest shipmaster out of the port of New-York, and though now in his 76th year he is still in good health, and very active for one of his years.

The Marine Surveyors are sustained by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters, and under their direction are still going on in the discharge of their duties in the surveying of ships and cargoes.

They say, that had the Port Wardens brought their suit in a United States Court, they would have cheerfully furnished them with all the information and evidence they required in carrying on the suit, and would also have come under obligations not to make another survey until the case was decided; but, having sued them in a Kings County Court, the effect, whatever the particular result may be in those cases, will only be to delay the settlement of the question, and tend to harass and incommode all parties. The case, if decided in favor of the Port-Warden law, will be carried to the Court of Appeals; and, as a last resort, the lawyers suggest that Congress will be petitioned to enact a law putting the whole matter under the supervision of the United States officers. It is said that there is no port in the world where merchants or captains are compelled to employ one set of officers for this duty; that although Port Wardens are appointed, as for instance by the Board of Trade in Boston, and by the Common Council in Philadelphia, and by the Governments in the commercial cities of Europe, for this particular duty, no one is compelled, under penalties, to employ them; captains and owners being left free to select those whom they consider most competent for the duty. Captain CANDLER has commanded a ship for upwards of thirty years, and during that period has visited the principal ports on the globe, but has never called upon a Government officer to survey hatches, cargo or vessel, and has never had the certificate of survey disputed or in any way impeached. His custom always was, in cases where a note of protest was made, to call upon some competent ship captain to judge of the damage to either the cargo or the hull of the ship.

A nice judgment is often required to decide questions coming under the notice of these officers.

The cause of damage and its extent, are the main questions to decide, but a novice would often be at fault in deciding either with accuracy. Coffee, for instance, is sometimes injured on the passage, not from being wet by leaks in any part of the ship, but from being shipped green; in such case the whole mass will appear solid, but the bags will appear as when shipped: if it has been wet by the sweat of the vessel, which consists of condensed vapor dropping from the under part of the deck and beams, it will show itself on the bags in spots, as if rained upon, and the coffee will have a musty smell: but when wet by sea-water the bags become discolored, and the coffee will appear of a darker color, as if rotten. In other cases if wet by the bilge water of the ship by being blown through the ceiling, which is sometimes caused by the ship laboring heavily, and being hove down on her beam ends, the coffee will appear still worse, or be wholly destroyed. In respect to iron, claims are often made for damage upon the finer qualities for rust, which may arise from dampness in the vessel. If produced by this cause, an experienced person will be able to determine it at once, while a novice might suppose it was damaged by sea water, or by being rained upon before it was shipped. In the one case the consignee would have a claim for sea damage, and in the other would have to stand his own loss, whatever it might be.

In respect to the dunnage of a ship, there is no law on that subject, as different vessels require a different mode of dunnaging, and the same is true of different kinds of cargo; therefore on this point the whole is left to the judgment of the surveyor, and this judgment can only be acquired by a long and careful experience. Dunnage is the mode of separating the different kinds of cargo, and of keeping it off the ceiling or skin of the ship; for this purpose every kind of fire-wood, pieces of plank, broken spars, and any other loose material about the ship is used. In East India cargoes the bamboo of the country is generally used. A ship lately arrived from Calcutta, with linseed, which had a whole barn stowed amongst the cargo for dunnage.

It will convey some idea of the importance of the interests passed upon by these officers to state that six million dollars worth of damaged goods were sold in the City of New-York last year, and that over a million of dollars were adjudicated by the Marine Surveyors for damages to the hulls of vessels. In some cases $30,000 have been expended on a single ship. In taking the office, each of the Surveyors made oath before a Commissioner to do exact justice to all parties interested in matters upon which they were called to decide. There has been, they state, no case where the underwriters have refused to pay the claims adjusted by them, and no dissatisfaction has arisen on the part of the ship-owners and importers. They will continue, as heretofore, to go on in the discharge of the duties assigned them by the merchants and underwriters; they express no fears of the result, and say they have good backers.

Amusements.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—A new piece, called "Love's Telegraph," was produced here last night with success. It is an English adaptation of a French comedietta, and in a literary point of view presents no especial merit except that of general neatness. The title suggests the idea of the plot. A lady and gentleman, courtiers at the Court of a Princess, invent a system of telegraph communication whereby they can make love to each other before the face of the princess herself. When the lady plays with her fan her conversation is directed to her lover, and when the gentleman gesticulates with his glove his compliments are intended for his inamorata. It happens that the princess, notwithstanding the fact of her having a lover of her own, a prince too, falls in love with the gentleman in question, and of course appropriates all the fine compliments that are uttered over her head. She makes a written confession of her love, which the telegraphed individual, being high-minded, hands over to the princely suitor. This occasions some perplexity, but in the end all is set straight by the discovery of the flirtation that has been carried on by telegraph. The princess makes a sacrifice; marries the prince, and allows the ingenious courtiers to unite their fortunes in life and matrimony.

The plot of the play is too faint for analysis; but it is ingeniously wrought out, and, without any positive action, keeps moving pleasantly to the end. The result is a very agreeable and graceful entertainment. Miss LAURA KEENE sustains the principal character, and is ably supported by Mr. WHEATLEIGH and Mr. BURNETT. To these artists, and to the admirable scenery, stage properties and costumes, the piece owes its success. The first scene is one of the most brilliant and elegant we have ever seen on any stage. Its positive excellence and completeness carry it beyond what has been done here.

"Love's Telegraph" was a success and will be repeated.

MUSICAL.—The Mendelssohn Union announces its fourth and last Concert of the season for to-night, at the City Assembly Rooms. HAYDE'S Oratorio of the "Creation" will be given, with Miss TINGLE, Mr. MARCUS COLBURN, Mr. S. LEACH and Mr. CHARLES WERNICKE in the principal parts, and a grand orchestra for the instrumental parts.

ITALIAN OPERA.—In another column we publish Mr. ULLMAN's first announcement for the coming season at the Academy of Music. After an immense amount of diplomatising he has succeeded in effecting an engagement with Signora FREZZOLINI. She will arrive here in August, and return to her engagement at the Italiens, Paris, in January. This appears to be all at present. Of tenors, and baritones and bassos we hear nothing. The first hunt is for the prima donna—that successful, there is time enough for smaller game.

Signora FREZZOLINI has been before the public for a great number of years, and her reputation in Europe is established. Here she is almost unknown. This is scarcely an objection, for her unquestionable genius and executive ability will appear in the most effective and permanent way to the judgment and taste of her cis-Atlantic critics. Unless she has greatly changed for the worse, she is, we think, capable of creating and sustaining a genuine and merited "sensation." Mr. ULLMAN has done wisely in engaging her, unless the fact of paying her $4,000 per month is a proof to the contrary.

There is something in the wind with LUMLEY, of Her Majesty's Theatre. It is said that he intends to bring his entire company, Operatic and Terpsichorean, to this country: but the precise time of this musical epoch is shrouded in mystery. It seems pretty certain that it will not be next season. Perhaps it may be the season after. Whenever Mr. ULLMAN can effect an arrangement of this kind he may calculate on the most certain and gratifying results.

In the meantime, Mr. MAretzek has taken his departure for Europe, and will try his luck with artists.

Personal.

Hon. N. P. BANKS arrived in town yesterday, and is stopping at the Astor House. It will be seen by reference to the telegraphic column that our anticipations of his nomination for Governor of Massachusetts by the Republican Convention of that State are realized. In the Convention which met yesterday he received a decided majority of the entire vote upon the first ballot.

STATE ARSENAL SALE POSTPONED.—The sale of the State Arsenal was postponed again yesterday, to 24th of July, in order to give the City time to meet the State demand of $275,000.

Alpha Delta Phi.

The fraternity of Alpha Delta Phi, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary last night, at Dr. Chapin's Church, Broadway. That large building was filled to its utmost comfortable extent, with no inconvenient crowding, ladies, happily, being as plentiful as gentlemen. Mr. GEORGE WASHBURN MORGAN presided at the organ, and with his aid, MEYERBEER, ROSSINI, WEBER, AUBER and HAYDN, contributed with their genius to swell the triumphs of the occasion. Rev. Dr. SPRAGG, of Brooklyn, presided. After Rev. Mr. FROTHINGHAM, of Jersey City, had offered prayer, he delivered the Presidential Address, in which he pleasantly glanced at its origin, rapid growth, present condition and future prospects of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. Of graduates and undergraduates it numbered 1,000 members, but its present prosperity was only a prophecy of what it was to accomplish in time to come. As scholars, gentlemen and Christians, let it be the object of them all to extend the honor and usefulness of the Alpha Delta Phi's.

Mr. DONALD G. MITCHELL (Ik Marvell) was then introduced as the orator of the meeting, and a very pleasant oration he delivered. Lovingly he dwelt on the College past, so dear to graduates, calling to mind the old companions and treasured haunts. College studies may be cast aside like the cut of boyish garments, but the old youth-love of HOMER'S hexameters and heroes, though it never came back with any profit, still there was an aroma about the old book which was transfused into every-day thought and action without our knowledge. HECTOR and PERICLES, and all the great fable-life, became to us a living presence in the soul, by which we measured all kindred power.

In the changes that had taken place in the literary work of the past 25 years, we noted the antagonism that had grown up between classical requirements and the active demands of the age. GUIZOT, NIEBUHR and GROTE had written history in the latest modern light, and the ancients in their pages were men like ourselves, and not gods or demi-gods. Romance had well nigh disappeared. Jack the Giant Killer, and him of the Bean Stalk, had given place to DICKENS' "Christmas Stories and Mr. Gradgrind." Compare "Household Words" with the "Spectator," and the difference would at once be apparent. You could not make Will Honeycomb or Sir Roger de Coverly live again; and even good old Dr. Primrose was growing seedy. The followers of the negro minstrels could not be got to laugh at MOSES and JENKINS. In short the "Vicar of Wakefield" was attractive any longer only as history.

Æsthetic culture, in the last twenty-five years, made numerous strides. Even the Pre-Raphaelites, though they tended to extravagance, were on the right side, as they tended towards complicity. Every year we were getting nearer to nature, and Strephons and Clorindas had become impossible.

JOHN RUSKIN was highly lauded by Mr. MITCHELL for his bold amalgamation of æsthetic aims with everyday life and endeavors. He had sublimed the artist's life by the union which he had established between it and our daily religious life.

Mr. WILLIAMSON, of Boston, recited the poem. It was well delivered and well received. Title we cannot give it, as it glanced at so many subjects. The Maine Law, the Crimean War, Spirit Rappings, Florence Nightingale, Newspapers, Sensation Murders, and Woman's Rights.

A benediction and a chorus from Haydn on the organ, concluded the ceremonies of the evening, and the large audience dispersed thoroughly gratified, at a somewhat late hour.

The Late Yacht Race.

LETTER FROM AN INDIGNANT LADY.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

With some slight misgivings I take up my pen to indite a few remarks on the subject of the late yacht race, and of the card of Mr. G. W. BLUNT, which certainly makes the judgment of the Yacht Club Committee appear imbecile and absurd, to use Mr. BLUNT'S own expression, if not liable to the charge of undue partiality. I tremblingly confess myself one of the weaker sex, and can only plead great interest in the subject, and a keen and somewhat manly relish for the pleasure it affords, as an excuse for interfering with the illustrious potentates who form the Committee. Perhaps, also, a love of justice, and a feeling of indignation against the ill-used gentlemen, who don't come out with one accord and assert their rights as they ought to do, is sufficient cause for this unwonted rush of the young lady against the experienced hand of luxurious, comfortable, dinner-giving tars, who know so much more about the buoys than the people who put them there.

To prove my knowledge of the facts, let me make a simple statement of them as they occurred. The Regatta Committee issued printed instructions to the yacht owners, on the morning of the race, by which they were directed to sail their boats to the eastward of all the buoys on the West Bank going and returning. A certain number of owners thought proper to disregard these directions, and to take the westward one of them, thereby, in the opinion of many, winning the race over those who simply and faithfully adhered to the instructions of the Committee. At an early hour on the morning of the race, I, with many other ladies, prepared to follow it, and with my best feelings and wishes interested in those gallant gentlemen who have the pluck to take the tiller in their own hands, sail their own boats, and not, as many of the Club do, retire on the slightest occasion of importance, and abandon their boats to the hands of the pilots they pick up in the lower bay. The pilots are no doubt very good fellows in their way, but hardly the style we would expect gentlemen to select as judges and umpires for themselves, and whose education and refinement can scarcely be such as to render their statements superior to those of Professor BACHE, and others who have devoted years to the scientific pursuit of the very profession in which their opinion is so coolly snubbed and ignored by the Committee and their friends of the lower bay. How much more conducive to the very end and aim of the Club, which is avowedly to cultivate a taste for those pursuits among gentlemen, and thereby improve the merchant and naval marine of the country, would it be if every gentleman sailed his own boat, and gallantly, tiller in hand, uniform on, strove for the honor of the race, personally, as well as for his boat, independent of the jolly tobacco-chawing professionals, who ought to have nothing to do with the business. At present it looks as if an insatiable desire for the mere dishes themselves possessed the gentlemen, who, one would think, would scorn and disdain an article to which, in the opinion of so many respectable and reliable people, they have not the smallest right. In fact it would appear that their friends, the pilots, are their principal, if not their only backers as regards the fact of their quiet appropriation of these dubious punch bowls; and I should suppose that the best of punch would have a vague and uncertain flavor under such circumstances. How is it reconcilable with justice, that where there is obviously an error, those who strictly and faithfully adhere to the rules of the Committee, should be the losers by so doing? while those who made the error are rewarded on the plea that they were misled, or did not know. Not particularly conducive to discipline in the Club, I should think, are such eccentric reasonings, and about on a par with the statement that eighteen pilots know more about the buoys than the gentlemen who placed them. Verily is the Committee a brilliant Committee, and in its weakness and inability to stand on its own legs, it might be called a fortunate Committee in having crutches in the shape of the eighteen pilots, to support and lead its wavering steps. Being a lady, I claim the right to be metaphorical, and would mildly suggest an immediate renovating and strengthening among the potentates of the Club. The utter eradication of all who have not youth enough to be active in the interests of the Club, or knowledge enough of the subject to advance and improve it. I await with some anxiety the finale of this much-vexed question, for it is hardly to be supposed that, after the announcement of Mr. BLUNT, the present owners of the cups will take much satisfaction in them, being thus shorn of all the honor. We will wait, and, nous verrons. AN INVITEE.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY AND PROBABLE MURDER.—Notice was received at the Coroner's office yesterday morning that a Dr. KIMSHIRE was lying at the point of death at his residence No. 197 Seventh-street, from violence received at the hands of some unknown parties on the night of Thursday last. It appears that on the night in question two men called at the doctor's residence and requested that he would accompany them to see a sick man. He went with them, and when in the upper part of the Seventeenth Ward, the men suddenly fell upon him, and after beating him badly robbed him of about $10, a gold ring and a silver snuff-box, after which they decamped. The wounded man soon afterwards reached his home where he has since lain, growing gradually worse.

MURDER IN CORNWALL.—JOHN TOLE, of Canterbury, came to his death at the house of Mrs. DAVENPORT, at Cornwall, Orange County, under the following circumstances: A man came into the house and demanded liquor, which Mrs. DAVENPORT refused to give him. He then caught up a pump-handle and aimed a blow at Mrs. D., when TOLE stepped in between them, and received the blow on the head. He remained insensible until Monday afternoon, and then died. Coroner WRIGHT held an inquest on the body, and the murderer has been taken to the jail at Newburg.

Marine Matters.

LAUNCHES.—Yesterday morning Mr. JOHN ENGLIS safely launched from his ship-yard, foot of Tenth-street, E. R., a splendid steamer, called the Montreal. She is 1,100 tons register, length on deck 244 feet, 33 feet beam, 12 feet hold. She will have a beam engine, cylinder 52 inches, and 11-feet stroke. She is owned by the Portland Steam Packet Company, and will run between Portland and Boston. Mr. W. H. WEBB also launched from his ship-yard, foot of Eighth-street, E. R, a fine medium clipper hark. She is 500 tons, 30 feet beam, and 15 feet hold. She is built of the best material, her top frame being live-oak, live-oak canta, white-oak bottom frame, with white-oak outside plank, and pitch-plank inside; has one flush deck, with half poop cabin, and second se of beame in bold; is double strapped in hold, with iron bars on the ceiling. She is owned by Mr. WEBB. A splendid steamship, owned by the U. S. P. M. S. Co., will be launched from the above yard in a few days.

The keel of the great Russian man-of-war ha been laid in the yard of Mr. W. H. WEBB, foot of Eighth-street, E. R.

☞ We have had furnished the particulars of two elopements in or from the City lately—in each case the females being already married. The particulars are a good deal more interesting than edifying.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB ONE OF HERRING & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bitts, together with lewers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

S. C. HERRING & CO.,
and No. 251 Broadway, cor. Murray st., New-York.

EMPHATICALLY CHEAP, DECIDEDLY ELEGANT, and unmistakably well-made are the TWELVE-SHILLING GAITERS,
sold at CANTRELL'S new and popular establishment, No. 813 Broadway, between 11th and 12th-sts. Ladies, do not leave the City without securing a supply of these excellent articles. With them you will enjoy your visit to the country. Without them, vexation will attend you as the consequences of your neglect. Remember, only twelve shilling per pair.

GENTLEMEN,
visit CANTRELL'S when you want to procure well made, neat-fitting and fashionable boots. The above fact is an evidence of the cheapness of his fabrics. A trial will convince you of their excellence and superiority.

LADIES, GENTLEMEN AND CHILDREN will be furnished with better and cheaper articles of "feet coverings" at CANTRELL'S than they can purchase elsewhere.

WILDER'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFES.
Renewal of the Wilder Patent.

The public are respectfully informed that, notwithstanding the great efforts made by other Safe-makers to defeat at all hazards the renewal of this Patent for making the GREAT FIRE-PROOF SAFE OF THE WORLD, the subscribers are happy to say that the necessary documents were this morning received from Hon. Chas. Mason, Commissioner of Patents, granting the extension for the term of seven years from this date. All infringements upon the same will be prosecuted to the utmost venture of the law. A full assortment of all sizes can be found at the warehouse of Messrs. STEARNS & MARVIN, No. 40 Murray-st., and at our warehouse, No. 122 Water-st., near Wall, who are now the sole manufacturers in the United States. B. G. WILDER & CO.,

SUMMER RESORTS.

COUNTRY BOARD FOR FAMILIES.—THE Fonda Hotel at Fonda, Montgomery county, has been refitted in new and elegant style, and is now open for the reception of boarders, and in the care of Col Aaron May. Fonda is on the Central Railroad, within six hours of New-York. All the express and passenger trains stop. Passengers can leave New-York by the 5 o'clock evening train, and reach Fonda the same evening, and the City can be reached as early as 10 A. M. The vicinity abounds in fine trotting and fishing. Rooms and parlors are large and elegant. Prices range from $6 to $10 per week, according to rooms. For further information apply to C. B. DYE, No. 51 Wall-st., 4th-story.

SUMMER QUARTERS.—THE "FAIRFIELD House" is now completed, and open for the reception of guests. The house is new, well arranged and handsomely furnished, lighted with gas, and has every convenience for families who desire all the comforts and conveniences of a first-class and quiet hotel. It is located in a beautiful village, of easy access to a fine beach for bathing, and surrounding scenery and grounds are beautiful and rural drives. The subscriber will spare no efforts to make the Fairfield House one of the most attractive and desirable Summer resorts. N. H. GILLETT, (Formerly of the Syracuse House,) N. Y.

THE LAKE HOUSE, LAKE GEORGE.—This house, the universal favorite of visitors at this delightful resort, and of the traveling public, has already opened for the season. Its picturesque grounds have been enlarged and beautifully improved, and every effort made by the proprietor for the increase of that patronage which the location demands, and which he hopes his improvements and numerous friends will continue to insure.
JOHN F. SHERRILL.

GREGORY HOUSE, POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.—This new and spacious hotel is now open for Summer Boarders. An abundance of fresh fruit and vegetables are supplied daily from the proprietor's own farm, which is but a few moments' walk from the hotel. Board from $5 to $14 per week. Address S. H. GREGORY,
T. GREGORY, Proprietor.

LAKE MAHOPAC.—BOARD MAY NOW BE obtained at this delightful Summer resort, at the commodious house of the subscriber, eligibly located on the south shore of the lake, about a half-mile from the hotels. Terms moderate. Apply to the proprietor, JACKSON WRIGHT, on the premises; or to J. I. J. KIERSTED, No. 529 Broadway, New-York.

SCHOOLEY'S MOUNTAIN SPRINGS, N. J.—Belmont Hotel and Heath House is now open for the reception of visitors. Communication by Morris and Essex Railroad from foot of Cortlandt-st.
CHARLES STRINGER, and
D. A. CROWELL, Proprietors.

BOARDING AT A FARM HOUSE.—THE subscriber has excellent rooms for the accommodation of families for the season, which can be secured on immediate application. His large farm mansion near Glen Cove, L. I., has every convenience for large and small families. Also stabling for horses and carriages. A line addressed to CHARLES UNDERHILL, Glen Cove, will have prompt attention.

COUNTRY BOARD.—A FAMILY OF SIX OR eight persons, or two small families with children and servants, can obtain board for the Summer in a delightful country residence in Connecticut. The location is healthy, easy of access, and a fine lake with facilities for sailing, fishing, &c., is in the immediate vicinity of the house. References given and required. For further particulars, inquire at PINKNEY'S office, No. 69 Nassau-st., New-York.

COUNTRY BOARD—MAY BE HAD AT THE residence of a private family, beautifully situated near Darien, on the New-York and New-Haven Railroad, two hours from the City. House commands a fine view, and is within 15 minutes' walk of Long Island Sound. Persons looking for a place where they can enjoy the comforts of a home will find this a rare opportunity. A family of eight or nine persons preferred. Terms moderate. Call at MASON'S paper store, No. 300 Greenwich-st.

COUNTRY BOARD—WITH VERY PLEASANT Rooms, may be had in a private family of three persons in the most desirable part of Stamford, Conn., three minutes' walk from the Depot. Families or single persons accommodated. Apply to P. C. BULKLEY, No. 27 Wall-st. or to C. A. L., Post-Office.

COUNTRY BOARD.—A PRIVATE FAMILY IN Orange, N. J., 12 miles from this city, on the Morris and Essex Railroad, will accommodate with pleasant rooms and board one or two small families. Address J., Box No 94 Orange Post-Office, with real name, &c., for particulars.
